The worldwide economic freefall won't stop Quincy from moving forward on major projects in the near future, according to Mayor Thomas Koch who announced plans Monday for improving all school buildings, traffic patterns, sea walls, and flood controls.

Koch said Monday that Quincy will not only build a new Central Middle School, but will also invest millions in renovations and repairs to other school buildings.

In addition, Koch pledged to introduce the first phase of a major flood prevention project for West Quincy and other city neighborhoods and will also develop a plan to repair crumbling seawalls.

"If nothing happens, if no progress is made, you can hold me accountable," said Koch. "We have a responsibility to protect our residents, and I intend to live up to it."

Koch also promised that there would be progress on major traffic improvements around the city.

"Our strength of community is in our willingness to chart our own course toward prosperity," Koch said.

MAYOR TOM KOCH set an ambitious agenda for his fourth year in office during Monday night's "State of the City" address at City Hall. Among the goals he outlined were relieving flooding in West Quincy and other city neighborhoods as well as repairing crumbling sea walls.

City Hopes To Take St. Ann's, Rest Of New Central Site Without Eminent Domain

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration has agreed to terms to purchase the closed St. Ann's School as part of the site for a new Central Middle School, and the City appears poised to acquire the remaining parcels needed for the school without using eminent domain, officials said.

Koch said he expects to have a full land acquisition package before the City Council within the next several weeks, which will include $4 million for the St. Ann's site, and an additional amount for a neighboring home, a chiropractor's office and a large parcel owned by Eastern Nazarene College, the Mayor said.

"We have come to an agreement with the Archdiocese, and negotiations on the other parcels are moving forward in a way that gives me confidence that all acquisition for the school can be completed without having to resort to eminent domain," Koch said. "That's a great credit to how the Archdiocese, Eastern Nazarene, and the other property owners have worked with the City, and it will make a major difference as we move forward on this vital project."

Working toward negotiated sales, as opposed to using eminent domain to forcibly take properties, could save substantial money, time, and avoid drawn out legal proceedings over the properties, according to City Solicitor James Timmins, who is leading negotiations on behalf of the Mayor.

Timmins said that all property owners met directly with the Mayor's Office prior to any formal negotiations for the property,

Friday Deadline For 2011 Preservation Grants

Friday is the deadline for 2011 applications for local Community Preservation grants, according to Steve Perdios, Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee (CPC).

"We look forward to receiving lots of applications," Perdios said Monday, noting that applications must be filed by 4 p.m. Friday at the Park Department, One Merrymount Parkway.

Applicants may download the form on the web by first accessing the City of Quincy website and then locating the site for CPA or community preservation.

Perdios said that nominated projects will not be disqualified if all the questions are not completed. However, meeting Friday's filing deadline is essential.

This year's CPA funds total over $1.6 million. Of that sum, $905,200 must be set aside to cover bond payments for previous CPA land purchases.

Christmas Trees Collected Curbside Jan. 10-14

The Quincy Department of Public Works announces Christmas trees will be collected curbside Monday, Jan. 10 through Friday, Jan. 14 on regular trash days.

Residents are asked to remove all decorations and lights. Do not place trees in plastic bags.

Trees with decorations or plastic will not be collected.

Re-elected City Council President Warns:

Coughlin: Finances Will Get Tighter

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The squeeze on city finances is likely to get even tighter this year, according to City Council President Kevin Coughlin who fears a round of local aid cuts in the next months.

Coughlin spoke Monday after being unanimously elected to his second term as council president and after taking the oath of office from City Clerk Joseph Shea.

"The warnings are already out that a structural shortfall (in the state) of between $1.5 and $2 billion dollars awaits us, requiring another round of local aid cuts in the four to five percent range," Coughlin said Monday.

(A five percent local aid cut would equal a million dollar bite out of the city's income, according to Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance.)

Coughlin said that state revenues took a projected $2.6 billion hit in the last three years and Lottery income is short as well, causing state income projections to be undependable.

"Lottery revenues are expected to fall short of projections in this fiscal year by $28 million and to show no growth in the next fiscal year. The fiscal caution signs remain posted."

Addressing his colleagues on the council, Coughlin said that challenges lie ahead.

"Clearly we have much hard work ahead of us and the test of our abilities will be how we navigate the road ahead, prudently maintaining fiscal integrity and stability as we accomplish the important goals that lie ahead like constructing a long necessary and overdue Central Middle School and a new track and providing the core services every citizen is entitled to."

Coughlin expressed confidence that city officials will overcome such obstacles as they have in the past. However, he warned them, "Optimism alone will not suffice and must be wedded to diligence."

During his address, Coughlin congratulated councillors for their accomplishments in 2010. "This council can take some measure of pride in its performance."

He cited public safety, social and environmental issues. The council also approved the Quincy Center Redevelopment plan, and passed ordinances on noise restrictions, sex offenders, wind energy, the stretch code and funding for open-space purchases.

Coughlin also thanked the council's staff including Clerk of Committees Jeanne Reardon, and administrative personnel Joanne Marinlopoulos and Ann Alexander and City Auditor Sue O'Connor.

John Hancock Plunge At Wollaston Beach Jan. 22

The John Hancock "Plunge" will take place Saturday, Jan. 22 at Wollaston Beach.

Registration will begin at 11:30 a.m. on Wollaston Beach across from the bath house, Quincy Shore Drive.

Prizes will be awarded to the oldest and youngest participant, the person or group bringing in the largest amount of donations, and for the best costume.

This is the 5th annual plunge that the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, with the assistance of The Friends of Wollaston Beach and the Department of Conservation and Recreation, are holding for the benefit of Interfaith Social Services programs that help neighbors in need.

Last year's event raised approximately $8,500. Organizers have a set a goal of $10,000 this year.

JOHN HANCOCK

Those unable to "take the plunge" may support the event by cheering on those who will take a dip in Quincy Bay. There will also be a pail for cash or check donations as well as containers for nonperishable food items that will be donated to The Pantry Shelf food bank.

For more information, call 617-479-2142.

The plunge is coordinated by Chickie Abdallah, member and treasurer of the Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission.

which he said set a "respectful, cooperative tone from the outset," and the talks have proceeded in the same way. He noted that the City has prepared all appraisals required to move forward with eminent domain proceeding, but said he is confident negotiated sales will be completed.

Working with the Massachusetts School Building Authority, the City is planning to build the new Central as part of the state's Model School Program, which encourages cost-effective design and construction for school buildings in return for a higher state reimbursement on the cost of school projects.

Central could become the first model middle school in the state, and that could mean the state would end up paying for nearly 75 percent of the new school.

"We have said from Day One that we are not only going to build the first-class school our children deserve, but in a way that that is the most cost effective for our taxpayers, and we are making great progress on both ends of that commitment," said Mayor Koch.

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT

For those who already own a fine complement of white diamonds and want something unique, there are yellow diamonds. Only one yellow diamond in 10,000 is "fancy" colored, and those of the Western Australian Deposit, known as the Ellendale mine, are of unparalleled color and quality. They are described as having a warm, sunlit yellow that displays no traces of brown. Perhaps the most famous example of a gemstone of this type is the 128.54-carat yellow diamond known as the Tiffany Diamond that is showcased in the company's flagship Fifth Avenue store in Manhattan. This yellow diamond remains the most famous gem of its kind and provides testimony to the fact that yellow fancy diamonds have few peers.

Every diamond has its own color and characteristics, and no two are exactly alike. Because of this, it is absolutely vital that you choose diamonds and other precious gemstones from a jeweler you know and trust. You'll want a jeweler you can turn to for service and advice in the future, someone who is established in the community with a reputation for integrity and reliability. In the jewelry industry since 1944, we'd be happy to help in all your fine jewelry choices here at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

Shea Presides At City Council Mid-Term Organizational Meeting

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Clerk Joseph Shea chaired Monday's mid-term ceremony, first inviting Mayor Thomas Koch to present his State of the City address and then calling for the election of the city council president and city clerk.

Following the elections, Shea administered the oath of office to City Council President Kevin Coughlin and Jeanne Reardon, Clerk of Committees. Both were the sole nominees and were unanimously re-elected by the council to their respective posts.

When nominating Coughlin, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro praised Coughlin's willingness to "foster debate and the thorough review" of issues with "honesty, fairness, thoughtfulness and professionalism."

"What (people) don't see is the work he does day in and day out behind the scenes," said Councillor and Senator John Keenan when seconding Coughlin's nomination.

Keenan nominated Jeanne Reardon as Clerk of Committees, praising her work behind the scenes. "She makes us look good and that can be a daunting task."

Reardon's 30 years with the city council allows newcomers to get an "historical perspective" and to tap that experience, said Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who seconded Reardon's nomination.

Before turning over the gavel, Shea recognized several audience members, including Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, Quincy's former longtime city clerk, noting that he never misses such events.

Shea also welcomed Judge Mark Coven, the presiding justice of Quincy District Court; Norfolk Country Register of Deeds William O'Donnell and Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, as well as newly elected Quincy College President Peter Tssafaras.

After the initial roll call, Veterans Agent Thomas Stansbury led the Pledge of Allegiance and Rev. Richard Cannon, Pastor of St. John's Church, Quincy, offered the invocation.

The short session concluded with a benediction by Rev. Dr. Stan Johnson, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Quincy.

Both Quincy clergymen sought blessings for the country's military, Quincy's citizens, workers and officials during their prayers at the opening and closing the ceremony in Council Chambers of City Hall.

"Quincy is a blessed community," said Rev. Dr. Stan Johnson, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Quincy, adding, "You and I are blessed to live our lives in this community."

After citing the contributions of city workers, particularly police and firefighters, Rev. Cannon, pastor St. John's Church, Quincy, offered special prayers for the military.

"Thousands of American soldiers wonder if the peace of Christ will ever come," said Father Cannon after noting that the troops are assigned to the mid-East where Christ was born.

Father Cannon also recalled the special dedication of the late George DePaulo, a veteran. DePaulo oversaw maintenance at Sterling Middle School for 62 years.

Several speakers honored both DePaulo and retired police officer John Caporale, Jr. whose funeral Mass had been held earlier in the day. Caporale was the husband of Kim Trillcott, the city's Purchasing Coordinator.

Koch Salutes New Leaders, Bids Fond Farewell To Old As He Marks Major Changes

Quincy's legislative delegations underwent radical change in 2010 and nowhere was that more evident than Monday when Mayor Thomas Koch hailed incoming leaders and saluted retiring officials during his State of the City address in City Council chambers.

Sen. Scott Brown won the late Senator Ted Kennedy's office but that just kicked off the political change of 2010 as long-time officials retired, others switched spots, and new faces headed to Washington and Beacon Hill to represent Quincy.

Koch named them all and honored their service and contributions.

Congressman Bill Delahunt retired, Treasurer Tim Cahill opted to leave that post for a run for governor, Mike Morrissey was elected district attorney and former Rep. Steve Tobin ended 22 years in the state legislature.

Quincy College President Sue Harris announced her retirement, as did Quincy's Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

Koch lauded their accomplishments and welcomed the newly elected Congressman Bill Keating (former Norfolk District Attorney); state Senator and City Councillor John Keenan and state Rep. Tackey Chan.

At the outset, Koch praised Cahill for his "honesty, integrity, loyalty.

"Our State Treasurer Timothy Cahill leaves his position with a legacy of reform and fiscal responsibility...." said Koch who then outlined Cahill's contributions to the city.

"We would not be cele-

Let The Political Speculation Begin

It's a new year.

Let the political speculation begin.

In the days and weeks ahead, there will be plenty of rumors swirling about who's in and who's out as far as the field of candidates in this fall's city election. Voters will elect a mayor, nine city councillors and three school committee members in November.

It's still early but if history is any guide, potential candidates generally don't wait too long before throwing their hats in the ring.

But that hasn't always been the case in terms of the city's highest elective office.

Mayor Tom Koch announced in January 2007 that he would run against incumbent William Phelan. Phelan, who was unseated that fall, waited until June of 2009 to officially announce a mayoral rematch with Koch.

KOCH

Still, time is of the essence when fundraising, building campaign organizations and getting political messages out. Especially for first-time candidates or for those seeking another (higher) office.

So, here's an early look at what could be a very interesting election cycle in the City of Presidents.

MAYOR

Incumbent Tom Koch appears ready to seek a third term although it may be a few months before he makes it official. In his three years at the city's helm, Koch has seen considerable progress with his mayoral agenda. And there are plenty of benchmarks in 2011 and beyond to suggest he wants a third term to see some of his other goals come to fruition.

The biggest: the billion-dollar revitalization of downtown Quincy. Koch and his team worked countless hours hammering out the details to the Land Disposition Agreement that is designed to lay the ground work for the overhaul of the city's main business district. The next important steps involve special legislation and bond authorization. Walking away from that project now would be akin to a first-place baseball manager stepping down before the World Series.

There are other goals and projects besides the downtown that will keep Koch busy this year.

Among them: the building of a new Central Middle School on the site of the former Saint Ann School; a new track at Faxon Field, and a rezoning plan for residential and business districts throughout the city. The final draft has been completed but does include – at the moment– Wollaston Center and Norfolk Downs business districts. The mayor says committees will be set up and meetings held to address those areas so that they are included in the rezoning initiative.

Koch also wants to zero in on two nagging problems that resurface in bad weather – like the spring floods of last March and last week's blizzard. The mayor said it's time to address – and resolve – the flooding problems in the West Quincy neighborhoods including Alrick Road and Ballou Street areas. This could entail building a new culvert near the Furnace Brook.

"These people have suffered enough. It's time we come up with a plan to fix this problem. It will be one step at a time but we will continue to chip away at it," Koch said in a recent interview.

Another weather-related problem: seawalls damaged by heavy surf. One area that needs attention is Edgewater Drive. The mayor says engineers will go section by section inspecting the seawall's structural integrity. A plan will then be put into action to address short-term fixes and long-range repairs.

It does not appear that anyone on the City Council will challenge Koch for the mayor's job. All councillors supported the downtown initiative. But if one maverick had bucked the plan, that may have signaled the start of a challenge for the mayor's office.

MAHONEY

The one elected official who's been mentioned as a possible mayoral contender this year is School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney. Mahoney was re-elected to a four-year term in 2009 and is not up for re-election this fall.

Mahoney, who held a fundraiser a few days after Christmas, says she is "keeping her options open." Mahoney would not have to give up her school seat to run for mayor.

There's also the possibility that Mahoney could run for councillor at-large. There will be an open seat this fall because Councillor John Keenan, who is now a state senator, will not seek re-election to the Council.

COUNCILLOR AT-LARGE

The other two incumbent city councillors at-large – Joseph Finn and Michael McFarland – say they will seek re-election. It's Keenan's open seat that has attracted several candidates thus far.

GUTRO

They include: current Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, former Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, and Steve Perdios, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee. Gutro and Davis say they will run; Perdios is considering a bid.

Gutro's decision to run for councillor at-large is expected to attract some candidates for his open Ward 5 seat.

One has already declared his candidacy. Neil McCole, president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach, launched his candidacy for the open Ward 5 council seat last month.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Only one of the three incumbent school committee members on the ballot this fall is seeking re-election. They other two are stepping down . . . but one may not be saying so-long from city politics.

BRAGG

Incumbent David McCarthy will seek another four-term term. Incumbent Elaine Dwyer is not running for reelection. The third incumbent – Jo-Ann Bragg – is stepping down from her school seat but is considering a run for Ward 5 councillor.

Bragg, at the end of this term, will have served 16 years on the school committee. She was first elected in 1993 and re-elected in 1997 and 2001. In 2006 she retired for two years before returning in 2007 and winning her fourth four-year term. She ran for councillor at-large in 2003 but despite a good showing did not win a seat.

Commenting on her future political plans, Bragg said, "I am seriously looking at a run for the Ward 5 city council seat. I see many issues that need attention." Among them: the Downtown $1.3 Billion plan, Wollaston Theatre and Wollaston Center, public safety, building of a new Central Middle School, Wollaston Beach – particularly its water quality – and a stable tax rate.

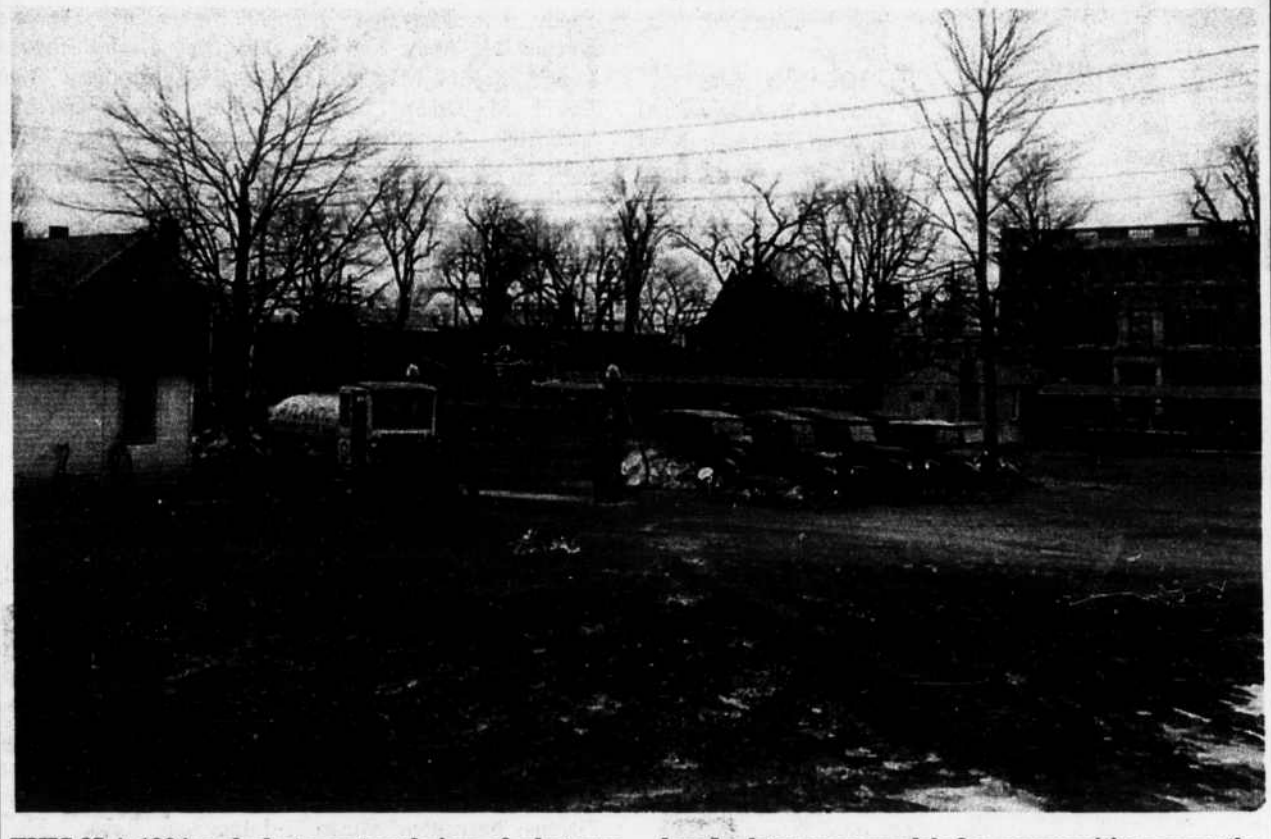
"I feel honored to have the support of Quincy's voters for all these years," Bragg says. "I truly enjoy community service and feel a strong commitment to serve others for the betterment of the City of Quincy."

BREGOLI

The two School Committee open seats should attract a strong crop of candidates. In 2009, there were also two open seats. That year eight candidates ran in the preliminary election.

One potential candidate who is strongly considering a run is a well-known local coach with some political experience running campaigns.

Paul Bregoli, who retired as a Quincy school teacher after 34 years in 2006, just wrapped up his 16th season coaching North Quincy High School girls' soccer. Besides being an elementary teacher at the Atherton Hough and former Mass Fields elementary schools, Bregoli also served as a guidance counselor.



Bregoli says he'll make a formal decision later this month. (The bet here is he'll run. The tip off: he's got bumper stickers out there already.)

While this would be Bregoli's first run for political office, he's not a campaign novice.

He worked as campaign manager and coordinator for the late Paul Harold when the former city councillor, state senator and Norfolk County Register of Deeds, first ran for Ward 1 city councillor in 1971.

City election 2011 – stay tuned.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 real photo postcard view of what was the Quincy Auto Park at 1217 Hancock St. in Quincy Square. This was basically an off-street parking facility with covered bays facing Hancock Street. At the time, the only other parking in the Square for the public's cars was on the streets. John Miller and Henry Close, who also operated an Atlantic gasoline station in the small building on the left owned the park. Although privately operated, this parking lot was a forerunner of Quincy's renowned municipal parking lots that two decades later were models for communities across the country. Across Hancock Street on the right was the new $150,000 home of the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943. Today, the Elks are on Quarry Street in West Quincy and this lodge has become an office building. The auto park property is now the site of The Residences at Munroe Place, a high-rise luxury apartment complex with street level retail stores. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

McCauley Hat In Mayoral Ring

By FRANK McCAULEY

City Councillor at-Large Francis X. McCauley announced that he was running for mayor of Quincy. McCauley, a 51-year old banker from Houghs Neck, had served seven years on the City Council in two split terms. He was also a member of the School Committee for six years.

In March 1969, Governor Francis Sargent appointed McCauley to a five-year term as the state appointed member of the Quincy Housing Authority.

During his announcement at the Neighborhood Club, McCauley told the group gathered there that he "suspects that there will be at least one more candidate in the race."

McCauley said his campaign slogan would be: "Frank McCauley is the right man for the right job at the right time."

KELLY PLEDGES REASONED COURSE BY COUNCIL

Ward One Councillor Leo J. Kelly was sworn into his second one-year term as Council President by City Clerk John M. Gillis.

President Kelly noted that the City Council has entered its second year of a new decade; we confront new challenges and constraints in the operation of this city government.

Items to be considered include the implementation of Proposition 2 ½, 100 percent property valuation, school autonomy and property classification – all items that the City Council must deal with in the coming season.

Funding Education: A+ Priority For America

This New Year, as budgets are drafted, let's say a prayer that our leaders come together and put America first.

To our city leaders, please invest in education. We are falling behind and that is a threat to our national security. Our schools and libraries hold the key to a brighter future.

In the Q & A with the Senator Elect (Dec. 30th Quincy Sun) education is never mentioned. I hope our elected officials will make funding education adequately one of their priorities. I know it's one of ours, the people in the middle, counting on public education as the key to our mutual success.

The views of our elected officials shape public policy. We should choose candidates with similar views on issues of importance to us. Organizations send candidates questionnaires as a tool to share their views. I responded thoughtfully to these surveys and education often emerged as the solution to the issues that daunt us.

As I said many times during the campaign, what is harming our communities the most is not the budget crisis, it's the allocation crisis. It's a no brainer that our kids need more physical activity yet at recess and in afterschool programs they're prevented from using playgrounds and fields because resources are not allocated for that. Public Schools need to be a priority.

There is so much at stake right now. We all need to come together for the sake of our communities, America and the world. Globalization has presented competition and a new set of challenges. The America I believe in is ready for that challenge. Long term planning is needed to stop the flow of jobs overseas and ensure America has a well trained work force. Unemployment is about 9 and a half percent but for college graduates it's, 4 and a half. America has fallen far behind other countries in college graduation rates. Many countries provide free tuition.

Education is critical to a strong economy and begins long before children enter school. Families are the first teachers and policies that help support early childhood education are critical to later success in learning. Education is a good investment and a significant expenditure. Measuring a well rounded education requires a multi-faceted approach.

Improvements require collaborative effort and a commitment to assuring quality public education. We can pay now or pay later in a myriad of wasteful ways.

This year, for the good of the country, let's make funding education our top priority.

Serving Up Tunes At Ice Cream Sundae Social

ATRIA MARINA PLACE residents Mary Houghton, Barbara Stamos and Fred Simonini jam around the holidays with students from Quincy High School during a recent Ice Cream Sundae Social. Quincy High School Honor Society students served the residents and then sat down with their own sundaes to chat with the residents, followed by caroling by the fire. About 40 residents and students participated, including the great granddaughter of resident Margie Spada (not pictured). This intergenerational event was the kickoff for an ongoing partnership between the Atria Marina Place Engage Life Program and Quincy High School.

Reno Litterio Celebrates A Very Special Day On 83rd Birthday

Community activist Reno Litterio recently celebrated his 83rd birthday on a very special day – his own day in the City of Quincy.

Mayor Thomas Koch extended his congratulations to Litterio on the occasion of his 83rd birthday and proclaimed Nov. 10 as "Reno Litterio Day" in Quincy.

The mayor's proclamation recognized Litterio's work with the Ward 4 Seniors which has "brought joy and happiness to countless people through the years."

The mayor also cited Litterio's "selfless dedication to those around him."

Litterio is the chairman, director and co-founder of the Ward 4 Seniors Group.

At Quincy Lions 70th Anniversary Dinner

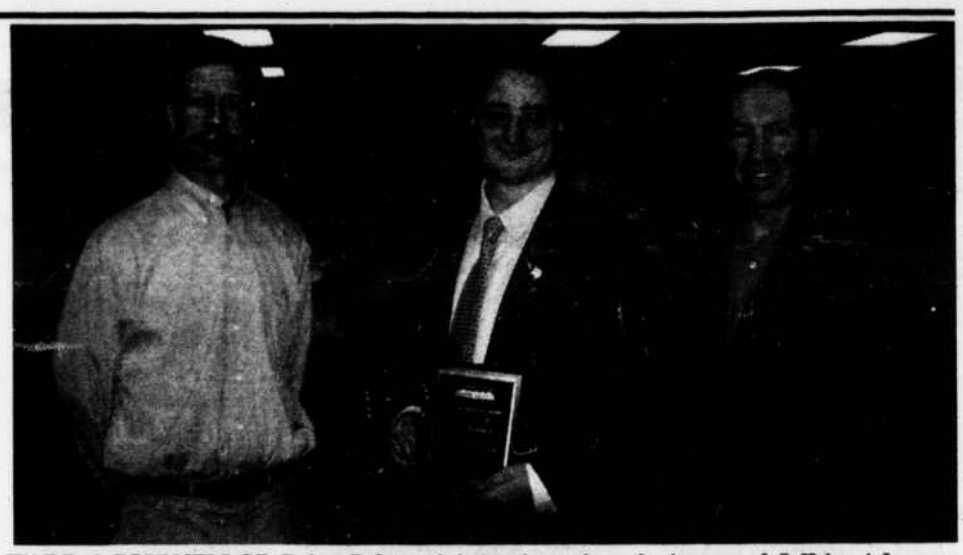
Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth To Receive 'Frank McCauley Community Service Award'

The Quincy Lions Club has selected Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth as the recipient of its 2011 "Frank McCauley Community Service Award."

The award will be presented at the club's 70th Anniversary Gala Dinner, to be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday February 2 at The Neighborhood Club in Quincy.

Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan said Bosworth was selected for his two decades of service to the community as a reporter, editor and now publisher of The Quincy Sun.

"For more than 20 years, Bob Bosworth has helped keep Quincy residents informed on the important news of the day," McTiernan said. "He has helped countless non-profit organizations and charities raise awareness of their missions and services and showcased all that is good and positive about the City of Presidents. In doing so, he has made a valuable contribution to the social fabric of our city."



ROBERT BOSWORTH

Bosworth began his 23-year newspaper career at The Sun in May 1987 after graduating from the University of New Hampshire in Durham with a bachelor of arts degree in communication and political science. While at UNH, he was a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity, served in the Student Senate and worked as a news editor at the student-run newspaper.

While at The Sun, he has worked as a reporter covering the mayor's office and City Hall as well as writing feature stories on Quincy events and people. He was named editor in 1992 and became publisher following the sudden passing of his father and Quincy Sun founder, Henry Bosworth, in February 2007.

A resident of Halifax, Bosworth has been a member of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy since 1994. He is a past president of the Quincy club and served as a division lieutenant governor as well as the newspaper editor for the New England District of Kiwanis for seven years. He is also a member of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board, the Mayor's Commission on the Family and the Quincy Sons of Italy. The son of Mrs. Dorothy Bosworth, Bosworth is married to Amy (Smith). He is the father of a daughter, Lindsay, age 16.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci Honored By Friends Of The Blue Hills

Ward 4 Councilor Brian Palmucci recently received the inaugural Jeffries Advocacy Award given by the Friends of the Blue Hills at their Annual Meeting Dinner at the Ponkapoag Golf Course Clubhouse in Canton.

Palmucci was honored for his tireless work in advocating for the preservation and protection of the Blue Hills Reservation and his role in organizing two successful public education and awareness events this past year.

"The Blue Hills are a vital asset to not only Quincy, but the entire region and needs our protection and support," Palmucci said in accepting the award.

The Reservation which transcends numerous communities including Milton, Canton, Braintree, and Randolph encompasses approximately 60% of the land area of Quincy's Ward 4.

The Jeffries Advocacy award was named in honor of the Jeffries family of Milton who have long championed the cause of the Blue Hills Reservation. David Jeffries, who passed away last May, was active in the Friends of the Blue Hills for over 30 years, including serving as Treasurer in the 1980's.

Peter Jeffries, the past president, was on hand during the presentation to Palmucci of the Jeffries Advocacy Award given in the spirit of his family's long support of the Reservation.

Current President John Sheehan, said of Palmucci, "He is not someone who simply talks about doing things, but someone who puts his words into action, as we have seen this year."

The annual event featured a keynote address by Eastern Nazarene College Professor Jonathan Twining who discussed his research into the Blue Hills' wildlife and ecosystems.

The Friends of the Blue Hills was formed in the mid-1970s by a group of people that recognized the vulnerability of the Blue Hills Reservation. For over 30 years, FOBH has engaged the public in activities that protect the park by preventing encroachments, increasing park resources and improving park management. It has come under threat by recent development plans such as the Lantana land swap and the proposed Milton cell tower.

With 7,000 acres of trails, woods, and wildlife located nearby, the Blue Hills Reservation is enjoyed year-round by tens of thousands of visitors. Friends of the Blue Hills has fought successfully to preserve and protect the Reservation, recognizing that a shared responsibility for caring for this precious and irreplaceable resource.

Ceremony At Granite Links Golf Club

Quincy College Winter Commencement Saturday

Quincy College will hold its annual winter commencement Saturday, Jan. 8 at 1 p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills, West Quincy.

More than 200 students will receive associate degrees or certificates from the college.

Paul Barbadoro, Esq., a member of the College's Board of Governors, will deliver the commencement address.

Professor Sandra Smiles will be recognized with the 2010-2011 Patricia M. McDermott Award for excellence in education and outstanding service to the Quincy College community and its students, and will serve as mace bearer during the ceremony.

PAUL BARBADORO

Barbadoro serves as a partner at Baker, Baverman & Barbadoro, where he has represented clients in the areas of contract disputes, zoning and land use litigation, criminal defense, personal injury, probate litigation and election law for over 25 years. He is a member and past president of the Quincy Bar Association, and has previously served as legal counsel for the City of Quincy.

A former Quincy College student, Barbadoro continued his students at UMass Boston, where he earned his bachelor's degree, and later received his J.D. from Suffolk University Law School.

He is a former adjunct instructor of business law and paralegal studies at Quincy College.

Smiles has served on the Quincy College Legal Studies/Paralegal faculty since 1988. She earned her B.A. degree, cum laude, with a double major in English and sociology, from the University of Pittsburgh in 1973, and her J.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh School of Law in 1976.

While serving on the faculty at Quincy College, she participated in a college sponsored cohort, and earned M.Ed. in Higher Education Administration in 2006. She has been admitted to the bar in the U.S. First Circuit Court of Appeals, the U.S. District Court (Massachusetts), and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (now retired.)

In addition to teaching at Quincy College, she has served as chairwoman of the College Senate and as member and chairwoman of several of the Senate committees. In addition to teaching, she provides consultation with attorney colleagues and appeals of disability benefits cases in federal court. Her pro bono services has included tutoring in Adult Literacy ESOL, training in bar association CLE programs, and serving on the Board of Directors of several non-profit organizations.

Founded in 1958, Quincy College is a two-year, municipally affiliated college serving approximately 4,000 students at campuses located in Quincy and Plymouth. The college is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, and is licensed by the Board of Higher Education of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to grant the degrees of Associate in Arts and Associate in Science.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Life Safety Concerns In Winter

I have to touch upon this subject this time of the year where ice and snow present their own potential hazards while I ask for a moment of your time to remind you of some precautions, do's and don'ts.

So here's a brief review focusing on ice rescue if you happen to witness someone trapped on ice or submerged within icy water this winter.

So what should you do if you witness someone falling through the ice?

Act quickly and call 911 for immediate help. This will alert trained and equipped rescue personnel. AVOID going out on the ice yourself. Often times would be rescuers become victims themselves. Our policy is to reach, throw or row. Extend a branch, pole or ladder to the victim. Throw them a buoyant object such as a life ring or float tied to a rope. We will often use a lightweight boat to row out to the victim or push it towards them along the ice while held by the rescuers in immersion suits.

Each situation dictates its own solution. In the fire service, it is essential not to become part of the problem yourself. Each rescue is unique, well thought out and performed carefully so as not to complicate what is already difficult.

If you witness a cold-water emergency, think and respond properly while not reacting irrationally. Contact those prepared to respond to such an incident and assist as safely as you can if you can do so safely. Think REACH, THROW or ROW, while not becoming a component of the problem or a victim yourself.

I also want to take this opportunity to remind you of another winter concern. Exit discharge, that portion of an exit outside a building, MUST be free of snow. This is particularly important as it pertains to assembly occupancies such as restaurants, nightclubs and bars, while equally important for mercantile properties as well. Free and unobstructed exit access from the inside is not enough; it is imperative that the exit doors open freely toward the outside so that patrons can exit freely and quickly if need be. Snow and ice can impede this process and MUST be removed if present. Proper maintenance of life safety considerations depends on it. Effective and immediate evacuation depends on it as well.

And lastly, consider the importance of having two means of unobstructed egress from your own homes too. In an emergency, it is not enough to have access to one exit only; your evacuation plans should consider alternate ways of exiting your home if needed.

So consider snow and ice removal from all potential exits so that doors can open freely and paths away from your home are passable and unobstructed. Thank you for doing so.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton WinWater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton WinWater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterRepacement.cfm

Activities, Events For Children At Crane Public Library

The Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children during January.

Music Time with Sylvia

At 10 a.m. on the four Tuesdays in January (1/4, 1/11, 1/18, 1/25) preschool music teacher Sylvia Kelly presents Music Time with Sylvia for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult at the Amin Library in Quincy Square.

Music Time with Sylvia teaches children how to use musical instruments to learn many different sounds of music and how to play musical instruments to accompany children's songs. Some of the songs we will learn include the ABC Song, Ten Little Snowflakes, the Rainbow Color Song and the Octopus Song. No registration is required but the program is limited to Quincy residents. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytime with Cheryl

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, Jan. 8th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Mad Science-Harnessing Heat

In this Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop children ages 4-8 will be introduced to the concepts of heat and heat transfer through hands-on fun, discussions and demonstrations. Kids will learn about and observe the basic properties of heat by play-acting the role of atoms, as well as observing the effects and behavior of warm air and water. The participants will witness a gravity defying candle-lighting, and even take part in a sense-confusing temperature test. The workshop is capped off with a taste bud pleasing demonstration of heat at work, transforming solid sugar crystals into the spun floss of cotton candy!

The workshop will be held on Saturday, Jan. 15th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411. Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

Zumbatomic

Join Zumba instructor Deirdre O'Connor for this special Zumba program for kids ages 5- 10 Saturday, Jan. 22nd at 11:30 a.m at the Main Library.

Zumbatomic is a fast-forward fusion of the Zumba program's moves (salsa, cumbia, reggaeton, hip-hop and more) and high-octane workouts designed to max out fun and fitness all at the same time.

Registration is required. Register online, stopping by the Main Library Children's Room or calling 617-376-2411. Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

We Are One Storytime

On Saturday, Jan. 29th at 10 a.m. there will be storytime with Patty Romano in the Main Library Children's Room. Romano will read We Are One and We Are Love, two stories newly published by Illumination Arts. Children will be encouraged to participate in the storytelling and contribute their own ideas to create a new story. This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult.

Introduction to Knitting and Crochet

Would you like to learn how to knit or crochet? On Saturday, Jan. 29th at the Main Library at 10 a.m. there will be a new monthly program offering the basics. Supplies for your first project will be donated by the Needle Arts Mentoring Program, a project of Helping Hands Foundation, Inc.

This program is for children ages 8-13. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Register online, by calling the Children's Room at 617-376-2411 or stopping by the library.

If you are an adult knitter or crocheter and would like to teach others contact Kimberly by email at knitting.quincy@yahoo.com by phone at 781-974-6559 or stop by the Children's Room and ask for Julie.

Registration for Winter Explorers

Beginning Monday, Jan. 10th register for the Afternoon Explorers online or at the Wollaston Branch. Registration is required and limited to Quincy residents. Register online, by phone at 617-376-1330 or in person at the Wollaston Branch.

Junior Explorers for ages 4 and 5

Do you have a favorite food like the Seven Silly Eaters? Or are you a super hero like Noodle Man? Can you really have pickle shoes?

Come hear about all these fun food stories and do some food-theme crafts with us. (Note: No real food will be used in this group.) Mondays, Jan. 31, Feb. 7, 14, 28 and March 7 from 3 to 4 p.m.

Explorers for ages 6 to 8

Take a trip to Ancient Egypt to visit the pyramids, learn about the Sphinx and hear one of the oldest known stories ever written down. Find out about mummies, scarabs and the Pharaohs who ruled over Egypt thousands of years ago.

Wednesdays, Feb. 2, 9, 16 and March 2 and 9 from 3 to 4 p.m.

Winter Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old begin on Friday, Jan. 28th.

The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details.

Due to overcrowding registration will be required for Mother Goose on the Loose and Just for Twos storytimes.

Registration begins Monday, Jan. 10th . Register online, by phone at 617-376-2411 or in person in the Main Library Children's Room. Registration is limited to Quincy residents.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3-4 will meet on Monday, Jan. 10th at 7 p.m. Stop by the Children's Room to pick up a copy of Say What? by Margaret Peterson Haddix to read before this meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books.

The Club will meet Tuesday, Jan. 11th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library to discuss books that have won awards in past years and to find out the winners of this year's prizes. Stop by the Main Library Children's room to pick up a book to read before the meeting.

Bills Mailed Last Week

State Certifies Tax Rate, No Increase For Average Home

The State Department of Revenue has certified the City's property tax rate for the fiscal year which will mean no increase in the tax bill for the average single family home in Quincy for the second straight year.

"The economy is improving, but this a commitment we are keeping to our families who are still struggling and who've seen their wages and hours cut back," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "We've made the tough spending cuts while protecting our core services, and we are going to be tackling a similar set of challenges as look at the upcoming fiscal year, especially if there are more cuts in state aid."

Homeowners were mailed bills reflecting the new tax rate last week, and abatements applications are due to in the Assessor's Office at City Hall on February 1. Abatement information packages can be found on the City's website at www.quincyma.gov or can call 617-376-1171 for more information.

The current $4,373 tax bill for the average single family home valued at $325,800 will remain the same for Fiscal Year 2011. The residential property tax rate will be $13.42 per $1,000.

For the average single-family home with an assessed value of 325,800, the property tax rate will be $13.42 per $1,000 of assessed value for a total $4,373 annual tax bill for 2011 Fiscal Year that will remain the same as last year.

The new residential tax rate mark the second consecutive year that the City has not increased the bills for the average single-family home, and was one of only 23 communities in Massachusetts to do so last year.

The State Department of Revenue has not certified new tax rates for all communities, but Quincy officials believe very few of those 23 communities will be holding the line for a second straight year.

Laforest Welcomes Koch's Plan For Sea Walls, Flooding

By LAURA GRFFIN

Flood prevention and sea wall repairs will top Mayor Thomas Koch's agenda in 2011 and no one is more pleased than Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest whose ward suffered severe damage in the December blizzard.

MARGARET LAFOREST

Even as late as Tuesday of this week, Laforest said some constituents were still bailing out. "There's still a lot of cleanup. A lot of it is basement damage," she said.

Laforest said she lost count of the number of homes damaged by the post-Christmas storm that pushed seas over broken sea walls and into streets and basements in her ward. At least one mother with a middle school child lost everything when her basement apartment flooded.

"That family is definitely displaced," said Laforest.

Laforest estimated that 60 to 100 homeowners in her ward suffered serious damage. Some homes were damaged structurally or homeowners lost their heating systems or appliances. Among the hardest hit areas were the Post Island neighborhood, homes off Sea Street, and those in Houghs Neck and Merrymount.

"Quite a few are contemplating raising their homes," said Laforest. She said these homeowners have suffered repeatedly from past storms and now plan flood proof foundations and higher elevations.

As of Tuesday, Laforest was waiting to hear if the area qualifies for federal or state funds through the Massachusetts of Federal Emergency Management (MEMA or FEMA).

Governor Deval Patrick declared the storm an emergency and that may help the application process.

Laforest credited Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville with coordinating the city's response and answering her calls for constituents two and three times a day and pumping out residents "round the clock."

There have also been extra trash collections for residents, thanks to the DPW's John Sullivan, according to Laforest who said water heaters, appliances, and whole basement items were collected.

Laforest also lauded the extraordinary police and fire department response during the crisis.

As for Koch's plans to repair sea walls and address flooding issues, Laforest said, "I can't wait."

However, she also added that the city cannot afford to repair sea walls on its own, as the expense would be insurmountable. She said she expects that Koch will be seeking federal or state funds.

Film Screening At Crane Library

The 2009 UK-USA comedy-drama "Bomber" will be screened at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, Thursday, Jan. 13 at 7 p.m.

Alistar and Valerie have been planning a special trip to Germany for a very long time. When their son Ross stops by the house to send them off, happenstance turns into a impromptu family road trip of the most tortuous kind.

The 84-minute movie is in English.

Although not subject to rating by the Motion Picture Association of America, the film is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

brating the opening of a new Quincy High School or preparing to build a new Central Middle School without the work of Treasurer Cahill and his team."

Koch called Delahunt "an unyielding voice for his hometown in our nation's capital for the last 14 years" and credited him with raising federal funds for the Concourse, the National Park Service and millions for city projects.

"This City could not have had a more responsive or more tenacious fighter on its behalf," Koch said in describing Morrissey who is now Norfolk Country District Attorney. Morrissey served more than 30 years in the state legislature.

"You have big shoes to fill," Koch told the new legislators, Keating, Keenan and Chan, and congratulated them on their successful election.

Koch also praised McLaughlin and Harris for "the great strides made at both institutions" during their tenure. Also, on hand for the ceremony was Peter Tsaffaras, the new elected president of Quincy College.

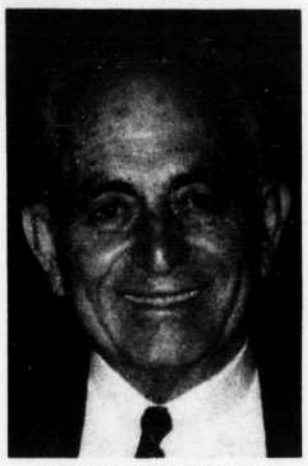
OBITUARIES

George H. DePaulo, 89
Sterling School Custodian, Veteran

A funeral Mass for George H. DePaulo, 89, of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.



Visiting hours were scheduled Wednesday from 4-8 p.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. DePaulo died Sunday.

Born, raised and educated in Quincy, he graduated from Quincy High School in 1940 and was a lifelong Quincy resident. He worked as a custodian for the City of Quincy Public Schools at the Sterling Middle School for 60 years. Upon his retirement, the City of Quincy dedicated Sterling Middle School's auditorium in his honor.

Mr. DePaulo served in the United States Army during World War II. He was a rifleman with the Headquarters Company Third Battalion 28th Infantry in battles of Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe. He participated in the D-Day Invasion and the Battle of the Bulge.

He was awarded the Purple Heart, the Bronze Star, the Distinguished Unit Badge and Four Bronze Service Stars. His battalion was personally awarded the President Unit Citation by General George S. Patton; he also received the French Legion of Honor Medal in May 2007.

GEORGE H. DePAULO

Mr. DePaulo was a 60-year member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post #294 and also belonged to both the VFW Post 613 George F. Bryan and the DAV Quincy Cavanagh #79.

Husband of Mary A. (Mulligan) DePaulo; father of John M. DePaulo and his wife Janice M. DePaulo of Winchester, Kathy A. Scribi and her husband John V. Scribi of Quincy and Marybeth A. Flora and her husband Frank R. Flora of Quincy; grandfather of Joseph, Danny and Jimmy Scribi and Frankie, Lisamarie and Nicole Flora; brother of Ralph A. DePaulo.

He is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment with Military Honors will be in Hall Place Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the St. Mary's church Improvement Fund, 115 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169 or to the Old Colony Hospice, One Credit Union Way, Randolph, MA 02368.

Kathleen Powers, 105
Housekeeper; Member Houghs Neck Community Council

A funeral Mass for Kathleen Powers, 105, of Houghs Neck, was celebrated Wednesday at Holy Trinity Parish, Most Blessed Sacrament Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Powers died Dec. 30 at Colonial Nursing Home in Weymouth.

Born in Dublin, Ireland on June 14, 1905, she moved at age three to Liverpool, England with her younger sister and brother to live with relatives. In 1921, sponsored by her Aunt Nora Flynn, a 16-year old Kathleen sailed with her sister Nora from Liverpool to Boston to live with their sister Mary Payne in East Boston. Arriving there on a Friday, she went to work the following Monday at Lowney's Chocolate in Cambridge earning $7 per week.

Married to John H. Powers on Jan. 30, 1930, they had two sons, Edward and Patricia Powers of Quincy and John and Carol Powers of Falmouth. Moving to Houghs Neck in July 1938, they rented a small cottage on Island Ave, later moving to Orleans Street and finally to Bird Street in 1942 where she lived until 2006.

Mrs. Powers worked for many years as a housekeeper in Quincy and Milton and was a member of the Houghs Neck Community Council. Her husband of 51 years worked as a fisherman for the Boston Fish Pier and passed away in 1981.

She claimed her long, healthy life was due to careful diet, exercise, the love and care of her family, friends and helpful neighbors, as well as the Houghs Neck air.

Koch Outlines Ambitious Agenda At Mid-Term Mark

"We have not and will not wait for economic opportunity to come to us. We will create our own.

"In all of these projects," the mayor continued, "we will keep to our pledge to identify exactly how they will be financed, ensuring that there will be no spending without a revenue source specifically connected to it."

Koch outlined his plans Monday evening in his 2011 "State of the City" address when he officially began the fourth year of his administration. The mid-term ceremony was held in City Council chambers.

His plans pleased the 70 to 80 observers who applauded seven times during his short speech and gave the mayor a sustained standing ovation at its conclusion.

Koch noted that the Quincy Center redevelopment project is now moving forward, thanks to clearance by the City Council and that that project will not only improve Quincy Center but ripple across the city and the region.

"It will mean 10,000 new jobs, $1 billion in private investment, millions of dollars in new tax revenue that will help us keep police on our streets and teachers in our classrooms, and a downtown that will once again make all of us proud."

While Koch was optimistic about major projects, he also acknowledged that significant fiscal challenges lie ahead as the city faces reduced state aid and budget dilemmas.

Koch warned of change and belt-tightening ahead.

"While we are navigating this storm far better than many other cities in the Commonwealth, we are still far from smooth seas. The coming fiscal year will require more difficult choices as the prospect of further state aid cuts and lagging revenues continue to loom."

Koch cited his successful efforts to keep the tax rate steady this year and promised full transparency as his administration deals with even more difficult financial decisions this year.

REV. RICHARD CANNON, pastor of Saint John the Baptist Church, gives the invocation at Monday's Mid-Term City Council meeting.

REV. DR. STAN JOHNSON, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, concludes the meeting with the benediction.

"We are one of the only communities in the Commonwealth to refuse to raise property taxes for two consecutive years and we do so for our families who are still struggling, our neighbors who are still jobless, our workers who have seen wages cut or hours reduced.

"The reality of our current economy continues to be stark for many in our community and it required this extraordinary effort to hold the line on property taxes."

Citizens will be informed as the city deals with budget change, according to Koch who said, "We will be fully transparent, showing our residents exactly where every dollar of their money is spent.

"We will have another series of community meetings to discuss the City's financial positions; and will make it clear, just as we have done the last three years, what our budget will mean for property taxes that are set in the fall."

Excerpts from the Mayor's address follow:

Economic Development

"We are seeing a resurgence of investment in this city. . . Boston Scientific's $60 million expansion, Blue Fin Robotics and the New England Aquarium anchoring redevelopment at Fore River Shipyard....

"The upcoming opening of a new Lowe's store that will include solar panels on its roof. The nearly full occupancy of our first "green" office building at 100 Hancock St., the continued expansion of Granite Telecommunications....

"The signs could not be more clear. This city is poised for an economic resurgence the likes of which we have not seen in decades."

Education and Schools

Koch thanked School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro and school committee Vice Chairman Anne Mahoney and members Elaine Dwyer, David McCarthy, Emily Lebo, Jo-Ann Bragg and Barbara Isola.

"As the largest department in our city, we without question face financial challenges within our school system.

"But our commitment to core classroom services will not change regardless of the economic climate. . . We also recognize especially in these difficult times that the quality of the education our children receive is not-and cannot—simply be all about the money."

The Floods and Blizzard

Koch said Mother Nature was so cruel he was "waiting for the (biblical) locusts" after city neighborhoods were hit with destructive floods and the blizzard this year.

"Few can remember a 12-month period in our city when Mother Nature took such a heavy toll on our neighborhoods, from the devastating March floods to last week's blizzard which caused the most severe coastal damage since the no-name storm in 1991.

"It is not enough for us to say, 'It's Mother Nature; there's nothing we can do. That is why, as part of our capital plan, we will propose the first phase of a major flood prevention project in West Quincy and a number of flood control projects in other neighborhoods and we will develop a plan to repair crumbling seawalls along our coastline."

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Dec. 27, at approximately 3:45 p.m, Dispatcher/Officer Roger White broadcast that an unarmed robbery just occurred at the CVS Wollaston Store. Numerous Officers responded to the area.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Duran, who was a few blocks away, arrived on scene and met with a CVS Pharmacy Technician, who said that moments earlier she was working behind the register at the pharmacy counter when a white male approached her and stated, "Give me all the money." She said that she pretended not to understand what the suspect said as she stepped away, pretending to look for a prescription.

The suspect, described as a white male, late 30's to early 40's, 5'9", 200 lbs, bald, wearing a green hooded sweatshirt and black jacket, then left the store.

CVS personnel gave Detective Duran a DVD and still pictures from the security surveillance system, showing footage of the white male inside of CVS. At this time, Detective Duran was directed to another female, who was a patron of the store. She said that moments earlier she was about to enter the south side entrance of CVS when a white male wearing a green hooded sweatshirt and black jacket came from behind her, grabbed her purse, and began to run towards Clay Street. She stated that a good Samaritan exited his nearby parked vehicle and chased the white male. The suspect dropped the purse and it was returned to her.

Detective Duran showed the victim the CVS still photos of the suspect and she identified him as the man who just stole her purse. The victim was not injured. A description was given out to Officers coming on for the 4 p.m. to midnight shift.

At 4:34 p.m., Officer Michael Sullivan was dispatched to Bass Street on a report of an intoxicated male wandering around, wearing a green jacket. Upon arrival, Officer Sullivan located a suspect matching the description given out by the caller, in the lobby of an apartment building.

The Officer immediately recognized this suspect as the same person who committed the unarmed robberies at CVS. The suspect, who was intoxicated and homeless, wore the same clothing as in the CVS photo. Officer Sullivan then transported the suspect to CVS for the purpose of conducting a "Show Up ID."

After the victim confirmed his identity, the suspect was placed under arrest on two counts of "Unarmed Robbery." His clothing, along with the CVS DVD and photos were placed into evidence for court purposes.

Nice Work!

Quincy Police Department Home Security Tips

Being a victim of a past break-in to your home is a horrible feeling. Many victims state that they personally feel violated and may not longer feel comfortable living in their own home.

By taking the following precautions, each resident can reduce the chance of being a victim of a house break. Remember, in most cases, the selection of an individual home by the criminal is based on the crime of opportunity – simply stated, that your home was more inviting and accessible than your neighbors.

Statistically, what is known about burglaries?

- Somewhere in the U.S., a burglary occurs every 15 seconds
- Majority of burglaries occur during the daytime when people are at work/school
- July and August are the peak months
- February has the least burglaries
- Suspects are usually males under the age of 25
- 70 percent of burglars use some amount of force to enter the home
- Tools such as screwdrivers, pliers, small pry bars are often used by burglars
- 13 percent of burglars are eventually caught and few are caught in the act
- Favorite items are cash, jewelry, guns, watches, laptop computers, iPods, cellphones, other small electronic devices

Why did the burglar initially choose my home?

- There is cover to hide, such as bushes, fences, in the area of the front and rear doors
- It appears no one is home
- I didn't bring the mail/paper inside
- I didn't leave a radio on to make it appear someone was home
- I didn't have any sensor lights on the exterior of my house
- No interior lights were on timers
- I have a garage, which is another easy way to get into the home
- I left the garage door open when I drove away, showing I'm no longer home.

Why was it so easy to get in my home?

- Doors were left unlocked
- Unlocked exterior door to common hallways give criminals access while hidden
- The exterior door was not solid wood or metal (kicks to the door are common)
- A heavy-duty deadbolt with a one-inch throw bolt was not used
- A heavy-duty strike plate with less than 3-inch screws was not used in the door (this is the weakest link in a door)
- I forgot to change the door locks when I moved in
- The slider door didn't have a rod or stick in the door track to prevent movement
- I forgot to lock my windows
- I didn't have locks on my windows (not to be confused with latches

How can I increase my chances of getting my stolen items back?

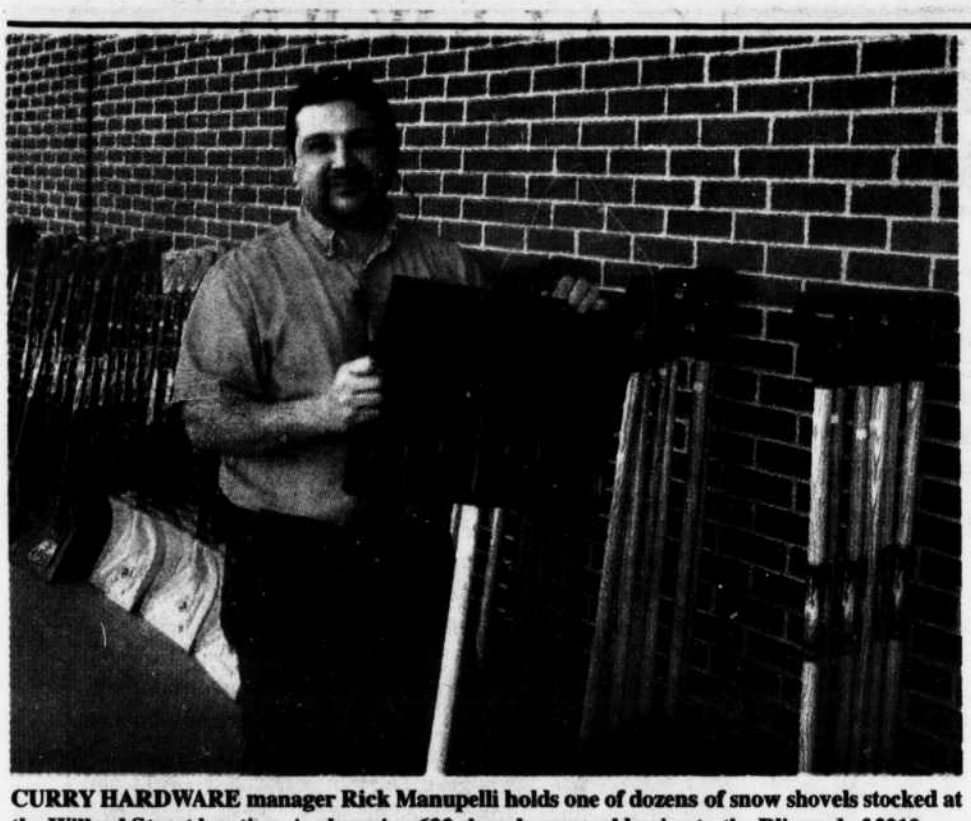
- engrave your driver's license number and state on all electronics
- Photograph your valuables, especially jewelry and electronics
- Make a list of make, model, serial numbers and value of these items
- Give a copy to a relative or a close friend

What if you see something suspicious?

- If you see someone acting strangely around your neighborhood, call "911" immediately
- If your home has been broken into, call "911" immediately
- Do not go inside before the Police arrive
- Make note of any suspicious vehicles still parked in the neighborhood

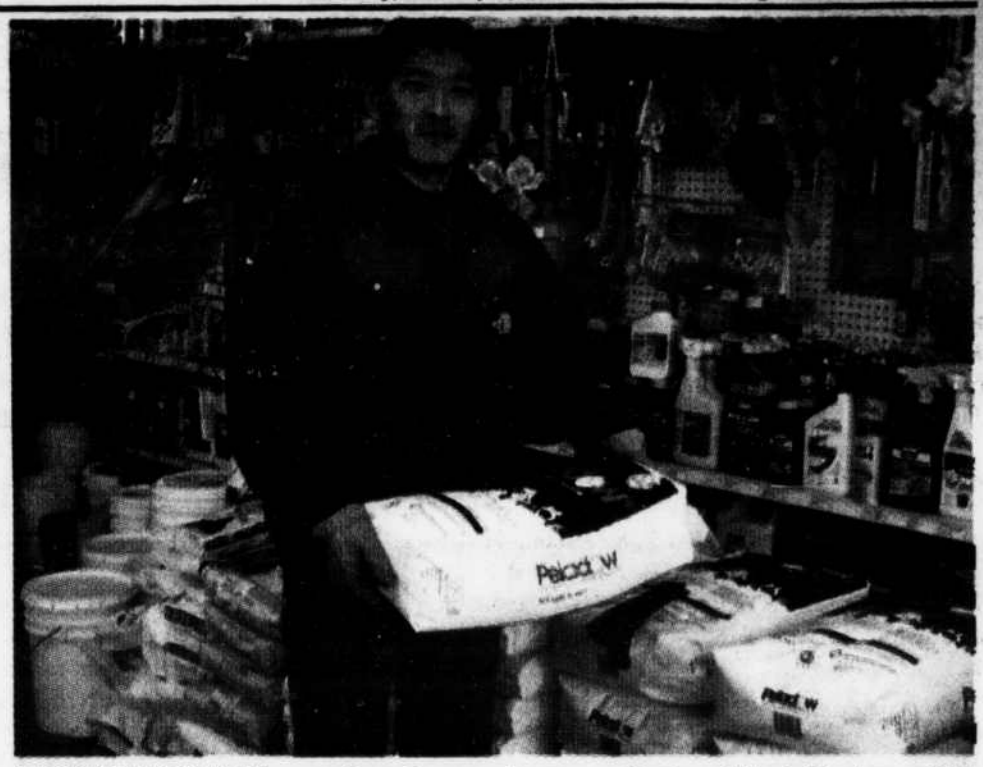
Why was my car broken into?

- I left it unlocked (the number 1 answer)
- I left it in a high-risk location
- I left valuables inside and in plain view
- Even though I took out valuables, I left a charger in plain value
- I left a box or bag in the car that attracted a burglar



Who breaks into cars?

- Generally, youths break into unlocked cars, taking GPS, small electronics, cash, wallets, purses, etc.
- Semi-professionals force entry into cars or vans, often by smashing a side window, for speciality items, such as tools, special radio, etc.
- Professionals target something specific – this may be the entire car



What can I do?

- Remove all valuables from your car
- Park off-street if possible
- Have sensor lighting in your driveway
- Report suspicious activity before an accident happens
- Most important – LOCK YOUR CAR!

CURRY HARDWARE manager Rick Manupelli holds one of dozens of snow shovels stocked at the Willard Street location. A whopping 600 shovels were sold prior to the Blizzard of 2010.

DANNY'S HARDWARE owner Dawa Lama packs snow melt onto palettes in his store on Billings Road.

Blizzard Brings Flurry Of Sales For Local Hardware Stores

There's No Business Like Snow Business

By JOE REARDON

For Quincy's hardware stores, last week's blizzard proved to be a winter wonderland deserving of a Ralph Waldo Emerson poem.

Shovels, ice melt, ice scrapers and sleds flew off the shelves both before and after the Blizzard of 2010 pounded the city with 13.5 inches of snow, flooding that crippled sections of Houghs Neck, Adams Shore and Merrymount and ferocious wind gusts that topped out at 60 miles per hour.

"It's good for the (hardware) businesses, but it's not a good thing for the people," said Dawa Lama, the manager of Danny's Hardware on Billings Road in North Quincy. "A little bit of snow is good."

Lama was quick to act before the snow fell and began to order more goods than normal when the extended forecast called for a blizzard to pound the Northeast. Shipments arrived early in the week and sold at a furious clip. By last Wednesday, the store sold nearly 200 shovels, 50 ice scrapers and four palettes of ice melt, which totaled 450 bags.

Lama said the store also delivered ice melt to businesses and churches.

"During the storms, the hardware stores are the busiest," he said. "We were looking forward to the storm. The summer wasn't as busy as it should have been because of the economy. We were really looking forward to the winter."

Despite the size of the blizzard and the steady sales of snow equipment, Lama said revenues from the storm alone wouldn't match the average sales of an entire winter. And although he doesn't want to see another devastating blizzard, Lama wouldn't begrudge a healthy dosage of snowfalls in the 8-inch range to help keep the store busy through the winter months.

Sean Curry, the owner of Curry Hardware on Willard Street in West Quincy, concurred with Lama regarding small, but consistent snowfalls all winter long. "If we could get six to eight a week all winter, it would be great," said Curry. "It keeps the contractors working."

Like many snow storms and blizzards, Curry said the weather forecast was the catalyst that resulted in people flocking into the store to purchase snow blowers, shovels, ice melt, sleds and snow tubes.

"It was fantastic," he said. "I love end of the year storms. When they (people) heard 24 inches of snow there was a little panic. It (business) was really strong. You get that forecast and it really pumps things up."

Curry Hardware was ready for the onslaught of customers and was able to supply them with what they needed to battle the blizzard. The store sold all of its 30 snow blowers, along with nearly 600 shovels. Curry went through 300 bags of ice melt, a good number but not a startling amount because the warm weather brought with it a slow melt.

Curry was aware that the blizzard hit just prior to school vacation week and kept an air compressor onsite to inflate the snow tubes for the kids who were eager to attack the down slopes of Presidents Golf Course and behind the Furnace Brook School.

Neither Lama nor Curry expect the onslaught of customers for the snow that's supposed to move into the area Friday, although they believe there will be the usual trickle of those buying a shovel or snow melt at the last minute.

At the Best Western Adams Inn, the storm had very little affect on day-to-day operations. Only five people extended their stay because of the flight cancellations at Logan Airport, according to the Inn's general manager, Tom Galvin.

"We picked up about 15 to 20 rooms over the weekend," he said.

Galvin said the inn was busier in March when 10 rooms were filled by families who were forced out of their homes because of severe flooding during three days of torrential downpours. Some of those families stayed at the inn for a month or longer because of the damages their homes sustained.

Ringing The Bell For The Salvation Army

FORTY-FIVE community leaders recently volunteered to man the Salvation Army kettle in front of City Hall for two days earlier this month. The kettle donations raised $1,418 for the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps to help needy Quincy families this holiday season. Majors Doug and Debbie Burr, co-commanders of the Quincy Temple Corps, thank the community leaders and all those who dropped donations in the kettle. The community leader kettle was initiated by Quincy Sun founder and Salvation Army Advisory Board member Henry Bosworth. The kettle is affectionately known as "Henry's Kettle."

Caulking Basics

Q: I feel kind of like an idiot for asking, but how do you use a caulking gun? I want to touch up the corners around my tub, but I've never used or even seen one of these. Is there a certain type of caulk to use? – Ma in Idaho

A: That's not a dumb question at all – selecting and using the right tool for the job is important.

A caulking gun is a really convenient tool for dispensing caulk. You don't have to use one – caulk can be applied by hand or with a putty knife – but the caulking gun is fairly precise and generally less messy than other methods. You can find caulking guns in the tile or plumbing sections of your home-improvement or hardware store, as well as several different types of caulk nearby.

Because you're sealing the corners of your bathtub, you need a caulk that's water resistant and also adheres well to the tub and wall. Latex caulk formulated specifically for bathroom use is the best all-around choice. For a tight-yet-flexible seal that works on many surfaces, silicone caulk is great, but it's messier and tougher to clean up.

To re-caulk around the tub, first remove the old caulk. Silicone caulk is soft and rubbery and can be cut with a knife, so you can use a sharp blade to carefully slice the caulk away from surfaces. Latex caulk is hard and can't be cut with a knife, plus it tends to crumble after deteriorating. To make removing latex caulk easier, borrow a heat gun and use it on its lowest setting to just soften the caulk, then scrape away with a putty knife or other tool. Wipe the cleaned area with denatured alcohol to remove soap scum, then spray some mold and mildew remover. Let the area dry overnight.

Finally, you can use your new caulking gun! Unwrap that sucker as well as one of the cartridges of caulk you purchased along with it. Cut open the tip of the cartridge at a 45-degree angle (this helps in application), then use a nail to puncture the seal inside the tip. Take the gun and extend the plunger all the way back. Put the cartridge into the cradle with the tip sticking through the front. Push the plunger forward as far as possible, then turn the handle to face downward, which engages the trigger.

Pointing the tip at a spare sheet of paper, pull the trigger a few times until a consistent flow is established. Then, apply caulk to the tub corners by holding the gun at a 45-degree angle and right in the crack between tub and wall. Use a putty knife or index card to wipe away excess and press the caulk into the crack. Let dry for at least 24 hours before using the tub.

HOME TIP: Silicone "Tub and Tile" caulk contains toxic fungicides – use in areas that get wet, but don't use it where it will contact food or drinking water.

Preparing For Winter Weather Emergency Situations

With the winter storm season here, National Grid urges its customers and the community to be prepared and anticipate upcoming storms, possible power outages and gas emergencies.

When an outage occurs, National Grid crews follow an emergency plan to begin restoring service as safely and quickly as conditions allow.

Accurate damage surveys, restoration estimates, clearing of damage and repairs are all critical parts of any major weather event. National Grid maintains credible and consistent communication with local public officials and the media throughout the duration of restoration efforts to keep the public informed.

"If there is an outage in your area, please know that we're doing everything we can to restore service as quickly as possible," said Christopher E. Root, senior vice president of Electricity Distribution Operations for National Grid.

SPACE HEATERS

The company urges customers to take special precautions when using a portable space heater to keep warm during an outage. Some types of kerosene and propane portable space heaters get hot enough to ignite nearby draperies, carpet, paper, clothing or furniture. It's important to periodically check nearby objects to see if they feel hot.

It's also important to choose a model that has an Underwriters Laboratories label, which means it has passed certain safety tests. If it's necessary to use a portable space heater, check to make sure it has a safety information label and an automatic shutoff device that turns the heater off if it tips over or becomes too hot.

PORTABLE GENERATORS

When a portable generator is in use during a power outage, users must make sure the main circuit breaker in the electric service panel box is in the "off" position or, in older electric service panel boxes, that the main fuse block is removed. This is necessary to prevent the generator's electricity from going back into the power lines in the street and potentially endangering the lives of line crews and other emergency workers. Generator exhaust contains deadly carbon monoxide, so a gasoline or diesel-powered generator should never be run inside a house.

NATURAL GAS LEAKS

National Grid also reminds customers what to do if they suspect a natural gas leak and how to avoid potentially deadly carbon monoxide. Like any fuel, natural gas is safe when used properly. In the interest of customer and public safety, National Grid crews continually test, repair and improve the underground system that delivers natural gas. Despite best efforts, however, the possibility does exist for a gas leak in or near a home. National Grid adds a harmless substance called mercaptan that has a strong odor, similar to that of a rotten egg, to natural gas so it's easy to tell if there's a gas leak inside or near a building.

National Grid advises its New England customers who suspect a natural gas leak to take the following immediate actions:

• Get Out - All occupants should leave the house immediately. Do not use the telephone, strike a match or switch lights or appliances on or off for any reason.

• Call – After leaving the building and reaching a safe environment, call the appropriate National Grid 24-hour gas emergency number. In Massachusetts, that number is 800-233-5325.

• Stay Out - Do not go back inside the building until National Grid tells you it is safe to do so.

CARBON MONOXIDE

Carbon monoxide is an invisible, odorless gas that can be deadly if left undetected. It is the byproduct of the incomplete burning of fuels such as natural gas, butane, propane, wood, coal, heating oil, kerosene and gasoline. Common sources include malfunctioning forced-air furnaces, kerosene space heaters, natural gas ranges, wood stoves, charcoal grills, motor vehicle engines and fireplaces.

During the heating season when windows and doors are tightly shut, fresh air is sealed out, allowing any carbon monoxide that may be present to build up over time. The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are similar to those of the flu. Depending on the amount of carbon monoxide in the air and length of exposure, symptoms may include headaches, weakness, confusion, chest tightness, skin redness, dizziness, nausea, sleepiness, fluttering of the heart or loss of muscle control.

GENERAL SAFETY TIPS

In addition, National Grid offers these important safety tips for customers during a storm or other emergency event:

Never touch fallen power lines or anything in contact with fallen wires such as a car, fence or tree. If your home is without power and you believe National Grid is not aware of the outage, call the company at 1-800-322-3223. Disconnect sensitive appliances such as DVDs, televisions, computers and microwave ovens to avoid potential power surge damage when electricity is restored.

Turn off any appliances that were on when power went off, but leave one light on so you will know when power is restored. Keep refrigerator and freezer doors shut. Food will stay chilled for six to nine hours in a refrigerator without spoiling. Frozen foods will keep for about 24 hours. Burn only wood or newspapers in your fireplace.

For those who have computer access, or who might be monitoring outages for someone else, National Grid provides real-time outage information, including the option to report an outage at www.nationalgridus.com in the Outage Central section of the company web pages.

Identity Theft Prevention Tips

(NAPSA)—A recent online survey by Toluna/Greenfield Online, Inc. found that while most consumers try to protect their identity, many admitted to risky behavior that could put them at risk for ID theft. To help educate and protect consumers, world-renowned fraud prevention expert Frank Abagnale offers these tips:

• Shop smart: Limit the credit cards you carry.

• Keep receipts and check your statements: Examine every charge on your statement before paying. Your receipts provide a great cross-reference check and guard against suspicious activity. You have 30 days from the date of your statement to notify your financial institution of any discrepancies; otherwise, you can be liable for any purchases.

• Protect your computer when online shopping: Make sure your security patch and anti-virus software are updated regularly. Consider technology to protect against potential viruses.

• Watch where you shop online: Look for the lock icon on the site's browser status bar, a sign that that site is safe. If you have never heard of a website before, see if it has security precautions in place and isn't a fake site set up by identity thieves.

• Don't write checks: Give cash or gift cards. The information on a check—name, signature, address—can be used to steal identity.

• Strengthen passwords: Use passwords with at least eight characters, including a combination of letters, numbers and symbols that are easy for you to remember but difficult for predators to guess.

• Watch your wallet: Be careful at parties, restaurants, fitness clubs, shopping carts and your car.

• Don't take the bait on phishing scams: Also, beware of shoulder surfing (when a thief looks over your shoulder while you're at an ATM, either directly or via a camera).

• Stop mail and newspaper delivery when you'll be away from home.

• Consider an identity theft protection service: One low-cost solution monitors the online criminal underground where identities are bought and sold and instantly alerts you if your Social Security number or up to 10 credit card or debit card numbers are posted by thieves.

The service also scans online directories and search engines, prime sources for spammers and thieves, letting you know where your information is available, and provides advice on how to remove it. TraceMyID customers are covered with up to $1,000,000 in identity theft insurance and get personal fraud support in reclaiming their identities should they become victims of ID theft.

Tips From The Heating Oil Association

Dealing With Cold, Snowy Weather

When weather forecasts project heavy snow and cold temperatures in Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Oilheat Council (MOC) is letting heating oil consumers know they can take simple steps to stay warm and safe during inclement winter weather.

"The top priority for oilheat retailers is keeping customers warm," MOC President Michael Ferrante said. "The last thing any driver wants is to be unable to deliver oil to a home or business because of a lack of access to the tank and fill pipe. Let's work together against the snow and cold by ensuring that delivery trucks and drivers have safe, easy access to tanks."

Make sure your heating system and appliances are running efficiently. Have a qualified service technician annually inspect and service your appliances and oilheat system. This will ensure that your appliances are running as efficiently as possible, conserving fuel and saving dollars.

Keep heating vents clear of snow and ice, and make sure that carbon monoxide and smoke detectors are installed in your home. If a vent is obstructed, an appliance may malfunction and create a dangerous build-up of carbon monoxide.

Consider automatic delivery, which allows retailers to use computerized systems signaling them when tank volumes are low and need to be refilled.

If consumers have an in-ground tank, they should ensure that fill pipes are clearly marked and readily accessible for oilheat delivery drivers. A thin wire stake with a colored flag next to fill pipes usually works well. The marker should be higher than the average snow cover depth for your location.

If oilheat tanks are located behind their home or business, consumers should ensure that fence gates can be opened and there is a clear path for deliveries. A hundred foot heating oil hose can weigh more than 100 lbs.

Get Your Home Ready For The New Year

(ARA) - For many, the new year means a fresh start and there is no better place to begin than inside the home.

To keep your home looking and operating like the day you purchased it, Ace Hardware's home expert, Lou Manfredini, suggests a few easy maintenance projects that will make a big impact in the end.

Give your baseboards the protection they need

While adding a new coat of paint to your walls is always a good idea when maintaining your home, Manfredini also recommends you freshen up your baseboards, which often see the most wear and tear. Wash them down using a pine-based cleaner, a little bit of warm water and a sponge to remove dirt and grime. Then touch up your baseboards with paint to protect them and keep them looking brand new.

Save thousands with a little bit of caulk

Over time the excessive use of a bathtub or shower can lead to cracks in your grout and caulking. These cracks are not only unsightly, but can cause greater leakage problems costing you thousands of dollars if not fixed immediately.

The good news is this problem can be resolved easily and inexpensively. Manfredini recommends using silicone-based caulk, which ensures a fast-drying, smooth surface and creates a strong seal to prevent leakage. Start by peeling away the old caulk and making sure the surface is completely dry before reapplying.

Become your own professional carpet cleaner

With heavy traffic, household carpeting takes a beating almost daily, collecting dirt, grime, outdoor particles and plenty of dust. Not only are these items harmful to your health, they will wear down your carpeting ... and do so quickly. While its good practice to vacuum on a weekly basis, cleaning your carpeting every 90 to 120 days will give you a cleaner home and prolong the life of your carpeting.

Make sure the air you breathe is the best

A great way to prevent bad air circulating in your home - and make sure your equipment is running efficiently - is by replacing the air filters in your forced-air furnace. Manfredini recommends using pleated filters because they do a better job of filtering internal air. These filters are inexpensive and take about five minutes to replace.

Quincy Native and Catholic Memorial Senior Signed Letter Of Intent To Play Div. 1 Baseball At Northeastern University

Matt Goreham Is A Star Pitcher With Lofty Goals

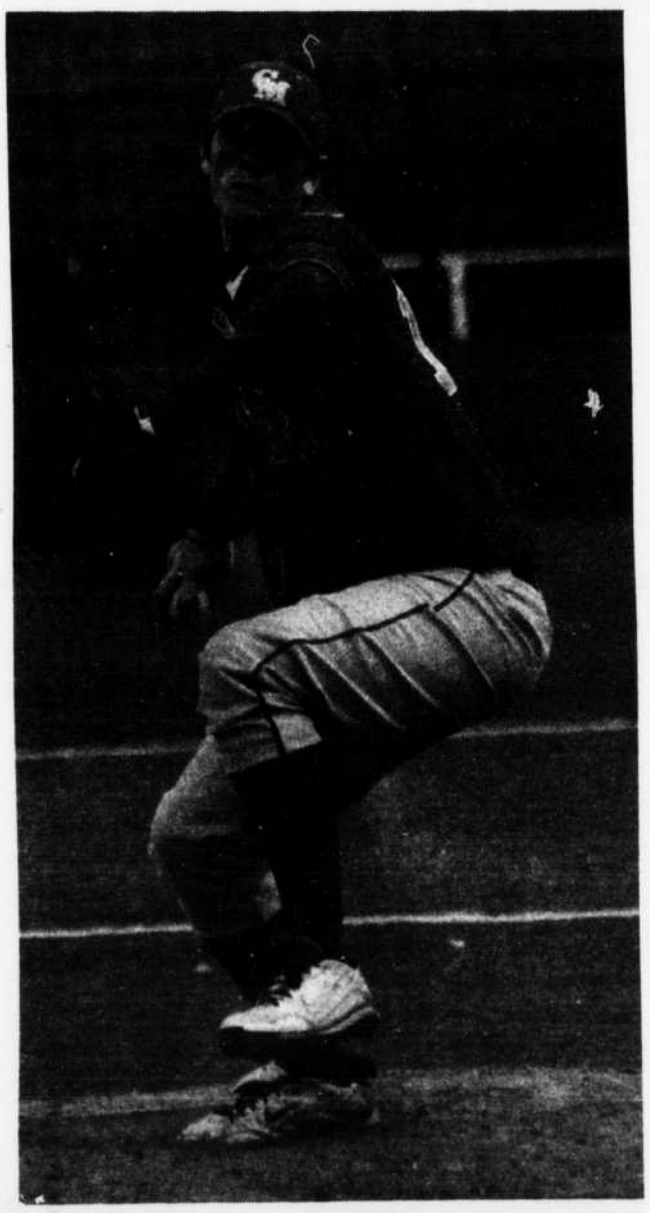
By SEAN BRENNAN

The future is full of possibility for Catholic Memorial senior Matt Goreham.

A Quincy native, the 6'3" right-hander, considered to be among the top high school pitchers in the Commonwealth, recently signed his letter of intent to play Division I college baseball at Northeastern University, beginning in the Fall of 2011.

His dream to someday toe-the-rubber professionally began at a young age. The path started in the Quincy Youth Baseball program, continued from ages 10-16 with participation in the South Shore Seadogs system, and continues to this day as the ace of the Knights baseball team.

"I've lived my entire life in Quincy," said Goreham in an interview at The Quincy Sun last week. "Growing up no one in my family played baseball but for some reason I was drawn to it. Ever sense I was little I always had real good coaches and I think that was a big thing because it helped me stay with it because if I didn't, I may have drifted away from (baseball)."



Drift away he did not. Instead Goreham honed his craft as a pitcher, willing to take instruction, always striving to become a more complete player.

"I think when you are little everyone wants to pitch," he continued. "But I always had a real good knack for pitching. As soon as I was little I started seeing pitching coaches and I always had good velocity, which wasn't like most ten-year olds; I just had a good arm. With my mechanics I really worked hard in the offseason and everything just flowed and it all came together."

When it came time to choose a high school, Goreham passed on the chance to attend Quincy or North Quincy High School, instead electing to attend Catholic Memorial HS in West Roxbury. It wasn't the smoothest of beginning, but, ultimately ended up being the perfect choice.

"I have a lot of people around me that went there," Goreham said. "One of my baseball coaches in eighth grade I was playing for, Kevin O'Leary, went to CM and one of the baseball coaches there was good friends with him. I took a visit there and at first I was a little skeptical being that it was all-boys, but I went there for eighth grade and I really liked it.

"Catholic Memorial is like a friendly competition. Not only athletically but academically you get pushed by the kids around you. I think if I went to NQHS or QHS I could have been a star athlete and slid by with grades, but CM doesn't allow you to do that; it has made me work a lot harder."

MATT GOREHAM, a senior at Catholic Memorial High School in West Roxbury, recently signed his letter of intent to pitch at Division I Northeastern University in Boston. Goreham grew up in Quincy.

High School Career

The last three seasons pitching in the Catholic Conference, Goreham has earned All-Conference honors three straight times, and he enters his final go-around with a career record of 18-6; he went 6-2 as a freshman, 7-2 as a sophomore and 5-2 last year, a season that was limited due to a minor shoulder concern of which Goreham is now fully recovered.

Averaging between 89-91 miles per hour and topping off at 92 mph, Goreham has dominated opposing batters with an arsenal of three pitches that includes a devastating fastball, curveball and splitter. His performance on the hill has brought CM to the Division I South Sectional finals two consecutive years. The Knights have been bounced in the South finals the last two tournament seasons by Catholic Conference rivals BC High and Xaverian, respectively.

"I throw a fastball, curve and splitter and I want to throw a changeup but I haven't got it down yet," Goreham stated. "Pitching in the Catholic Conference every game you're going to see a real good pitcher especially in the conference games when teams tend to throw their best (pitcher). It is a wood bat league so the scores are usually low scoring and it means every game is close.

"My freshman year we got knocked out in the first round. The last two years the team advanced into the South Sectional finals where we have come up short to BC High and Xaverian, both conference teams."

QUINCY'S MATT GOREHAM (right), a senior at Catholic Memorial HS, sitting alongside Head Coach Hal Carey, signed his letter of intent on Nov. 10 to play baseball next year for Division I Northeastern University.

When he is not scheduled to pitch for CM on game day, Goreham also sees time playing first base and last year, he played several games at third base. He batted .340 with two home runs in 2009.

"I am a pretty good high school hitter," he continued. "I don't know if I could hit in college; I guess with me it is a lot of power."

During his off-days, Goreham sticks to a regimented pitching schedule. He credits the coaching staff at Catholic Memorial, and especially Head Coach Hal Carey, with keeping his progress and health on track.

"During the week there is a three-man rotation because in high school you only really need three pitchers," explained Goreham. "That means I'll pitch once a week but I'll get my six days off. After I pitch I won't throw the next day but I'll run and the day after that I throw lightly and the next day I throw a bullpen and after that I'll do long toss; the next day or two I'll pitch a game again."

Consecutive defeats, just two wins away from a state championship, are what drives Goreham every time he takes the mound. The Knights, this spring, should be early favorites to represent Eastern Massachusetts in the Division I state finals as the squad returns the majority of its team.

"We should be very good," Goreham said. "We are returning almost our entire team and hopefully this year we can win those extra two games. Our goal is to make it to and win the state championship.

"My individual goals are to help my team win the conference and the state championship. Last year I was All-Conference and I hope to earn All-Scholastic honors this season as well."

The Road to Northeastern University

The dream of someday becoming a Major League pitcher continues for Goreham next fall when he steps onto the Huntington Avenue campus of Northeastern University in Boston.

The Huskies have been monitoring he's progress as a ball player from the early stages of his baseball career, and that, along with the university's stellar academic reputation, made the decision to sign his letter of intent with them an easy decision.

"They have always been around," said Goreham, who last year played for the Northeast Rays, a local AAU team, in a scout tournament down in Georgia, about NU. "I know the coach since he has seen me since I was young. Last year I visited Boston College, Wake Forest and Virginia Tech, and they were all talking to me heavily. Then after I had my shoulder problem the Atlantic Coast Conference schools drifted away, but Northeastern University since they have seen me throw so many times knew what I was capable of."

"Their interest became even heavier on me and they asked me to make my decision at the end of the summer," continued Goreham who plans on studying Criminal Justice and Psychology in college. "I told them I was going and I did my overnight. It was a great fit."

The Huskies play in the Colonial Athletic Association against colleges up-and-down the East Coast, including Delaware, George Mason, Georgia State, Hofstra, James Madison, Old Dominion, Towson, UNC Wilmington, Virginia Commonwealth and William & Mary; the CAC is a strong baseball conference which should provide Goreham, beginning as a freshman, with a chance to pitch against some of the best college players this side of the Mississippi River.

"NU is Division I and they play very good teams," he said. "Coach (Neil) McPhee told me that I should get a lot of innings my freshman year, and depending on how the rest of the team looks I may play first base, but mainly I am going to pitch and he told me I should be an impact player."

Northeastern may not produce MLB players at the rate of say a University of Texas or Arizona State, but the program has given rise to successful professional careers, most recently that of new Chicago Cubs and former Boston Red Sox and Tampa Bay Ray, first baseman Carlos Pena (1998).

For Goreham, maintaining the steady progression as a pitcher at Northeastern is the final stepping-stone toward his ultimate goal of making it to the next level.

"I think that is almost everyone's goal, but especially mine," he said of someday pitching in the Major Leagues. "It has been a long-time goal and I work real hard at my craft. I am still learning what it takes but I am willing to put in the time."

Played Each Other In Consolation Game; Presidents Won 51-44

Quincy and North Quincy Come Up Short In Holiday Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy and North Quincy both came up short of a championship banner in the second annual Abigail Adams Holiday Basketball Classic held at Weymouth High School last week.

The Presidents (5-1 overall) drew Weymouth in the semifinal round and despite, entering the game with a perfect 4-0 record; Quincy could not find any offensive rhythm and fell in defeat by a score of 48-38.

The Red Raiders matched up against neighboring Braintree in the other semifinal game. North Quincy (0-5 overall) allowed the Wamps to race out to a commanding 22-4 lead, and ultimately lost 56-41 setting up a consolation game against rival Quincy HS on Dec. 29.

Facing each other for the second time in less than a month, the Presidents jumped out to a 10-4 first quarter advantage, expanded that lead to 26-11 at the halftime break before holding on in the second half to walk away with a 51-44 victory.

Quincy vs. North Quincy

Not the tilt either Quincy or North Quincy wanted to play in, but the consolation game of the Abigail Adams Classic became the second meeting between the city's two high schools this year; the teams are set to meet, again at QHS, on Jan. 21 at 5 p.m. In the season-opener on Dec. 10, the Presidents eked out a slim 43-41 win over the Red Raiders.

Quincy came out in this game looking to unleash a defensive stranglehold. The Presidents held North Quincy scoreless for the game's first seven and half minutes; despite this performance, Quincy only held a 10-4 lead after one quarter of play.

A 16-7 second quarter advantage gave QHS a 26-11 lead at the break.

North Quincy made a second half run, but clutch three-pointers by Quincy senior Kori Sorensen in the fourth quarter helped the Presidents earn the win.

Sorensen finished with 16 points to go along with four three-pointers. Junior Katie Lowry contributed 14 points and 12 rebounds for the Presidents.

"We came out in the first quarter in our half court defense," said QHS Jeff Bretsch about his team's solid defensive plan against North. "We have been making strides on defense and to hold them scoreless for the first seven and a half minutes was strong. We did a great job on them."

"Our offensive woes continued against North," added Bretsch. "You have to give them credit as they fought back in the second half, but Kori hit those big three-pointers in the fourth quarter to put it away."

"We are happy with the win because playing North Quincy is always stressful," continued Bretsch. "We were in the tournament to win it, but this group of girls played together and it shows me that we are ready for the rest of the season."

North Quincy seniors Emily Gray (14 points) and Montana McBirney (13 pts., 10 rebounds) played well in the loss.

Quincy vs. Weymouth

A cold shooting night doomed the Presidents against the Wildcats of Weymouth HS.

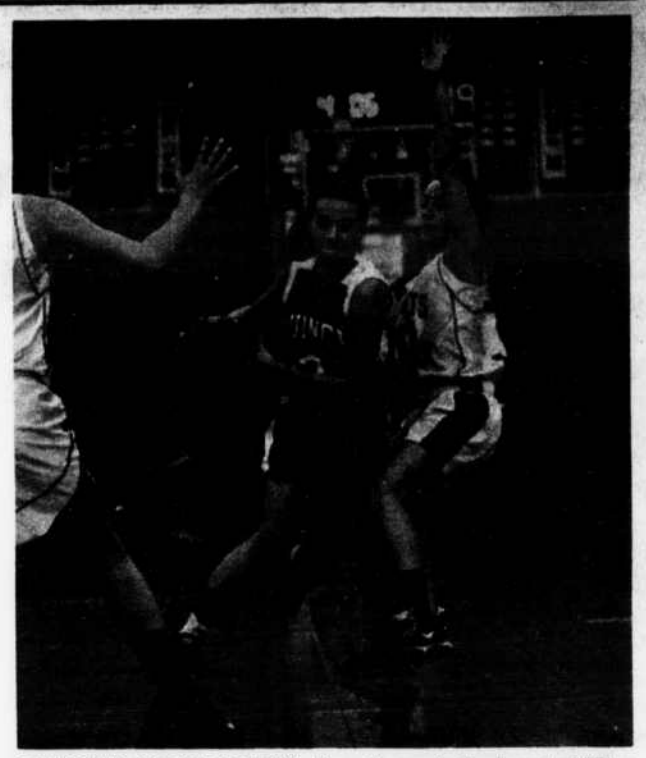
A two-quarter stretch (second and third) which saw Quincy score a combined 16 points placed the Presidents in a hole that they could not dig out of – the final score was 48-38 Weymouth.

"We played ok against them but we just had a really poor shooting night," said Bretsch. "We just couldn't find our touch and nothing would go down. We tried to shoot our way through the slump but give Weymouth credit, they played us tough."

Junior center Kiley McDonald had a career night against the Wildcats. McDonald went for 22 points and 16 rebounds. Lowry collected 12 rebounds in the loss.

"Kiley played a great game," added Bretsch. "She kept us alive with her rebounding and low post scoring."

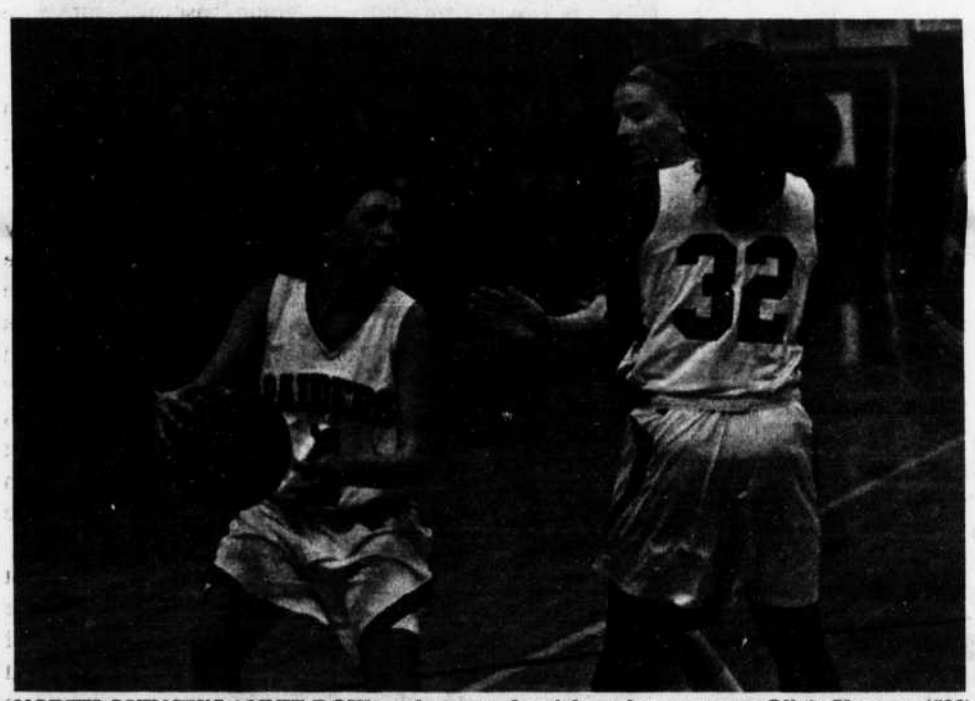
North Quincy vs. Braintree



The Red Raiders entered the semifinal game against Braintree in search of their first win of the season. A 22-4 Braintree scoring run to start the game put North Quincy behind the 8-ball and despite playing a more consistent game the rest of the way the game ended with the Wamps winning 56-41.

Emily Gray led all North Quincy scorers with 20 points while Montana McBirney finished just short of a double-double, 12 points and eight rebounds.

"We made some halftime adjustments," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "We kept trying to get back in the game, but Braintree kept matching baskets."



Both teams were scheduled to play Tuesday night. Quincy hosted Randolph HS and North Quincy traveled to Silver Lake Regional HS. On Friday, Quincy will play at home against highly touted Scituate HS at 6:30 p.m. and North Quincy makes a road trip to Duxbury HS.

Quincy will play Middleboro HS at home on Jan. 11 at 5:30 p.m.

Presidents Lost to Weymouth and Braintree; Red Raiders Finished In Second Place

Weymouth Defeats North Quincy In The Finals Of The John Adams Classic

The Munroe McLean Gymnasium at Quincy High School was the venue for last week's John Adams Holiday Tournament. The second annual event matched Quincy, North Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth High Schools against one another with semifinals games held Dec. 28 and the tourney's consolation and championship games held Dec. 29.

North Quincy (3-4 overall) opened with a semifinal game versus Braintree HS, winning by a score of 61-53; the Red Raiders played Weymouth HS in the finals and lost 80-63.

Quincy (2-4 overall) dropped its semifinal game against Weymouth by a score of 87-69 and came up short against Braintree, 63-57, in the consolation game.

North Quincy vs. Weymouth (Championship Game)

The Red Raiders faced a tough Weymouth team in the final game of the John Adams Classic on Dec. 29 losing by a score of 80-63.

North Quincy began the game by taking an early lead before falling behind by five points at the end of the first quarter. Weymouth (5-0) expanded its advantage to 38-28 at the halftime break behind the performance of sophomore guard Jared Terrell (tourney-high 25 points).

Trailing by ten points entering the third quarter, the Red Raiders watched as the Wildcats went on a 16-4 scoring run, increasing their lead to 22 points (54-32). Weymouth went up by 26 points (80-54) late in the fourth quarter to put the feisty Red Raiders away for good.

Terrell was named tournament MVP and his teammate, junior Jon Perez was also named to the tournament's All-Star team.

"What hurt us the most was our transition, which is something we will be working on as the season continues," said NQHS head coach Kevin Barrett. "We are a young team so it was good to get this kind of experience against such a strong opponent."

Juniors Tim Liuzzo and Paul Cunniff led North Quincy's offense. Liuzzo finished with 16 points while also earning his spot on the tournament All-Star team; Cunniff ended the championship game with nine points.

"One of the highlights for us during this tournament was Tim Liuzzo being named to the All-Star team," Barrett said. "He played well throughout the entire tournament and it was a well deserved honor."

As the game was slipping out of hands, North Quincy never gave up the fight. Junior Matty Costa and sophomores Dan and Patrick Gould fought hard until the end and continued working throughout the entire game.

Quincy vs. Braintree (Consolation Game)

The Presidents, behind the play of seniors Brian Malger (11 points), Lukas McDonough (14 points), and Ryan Schultz (13 points), kept with visiting Braintree HS (1-3 overall), but in the end, lost by a score of 63-57 in overtime.

Quincy's Malger earned a spot on the tournament All-Star team.

Quincy vs. Weymouth (Semifinal)

Host Quincy High School opened the John Adams Classic with a semifinal contest against Weymouth HS. Quincy lost 87-69.

The Presidents fell behind 7-0 to start the game before rallying back to tie the game at 11-11; however, Weymouth's Jon Perez (24 points, six three pointers) and Jared Terrell (20 points) kept pouring in buckets and keeping Quincy at bay.

Senior Oliver O'Sullivan connected four times from beyond the three-point line. He was ejected from the semifinal game after picking up two technical fouls. Senior Lukas McDonough finished with a team-high 12 points and Brian Malger added nine points for Quincy.

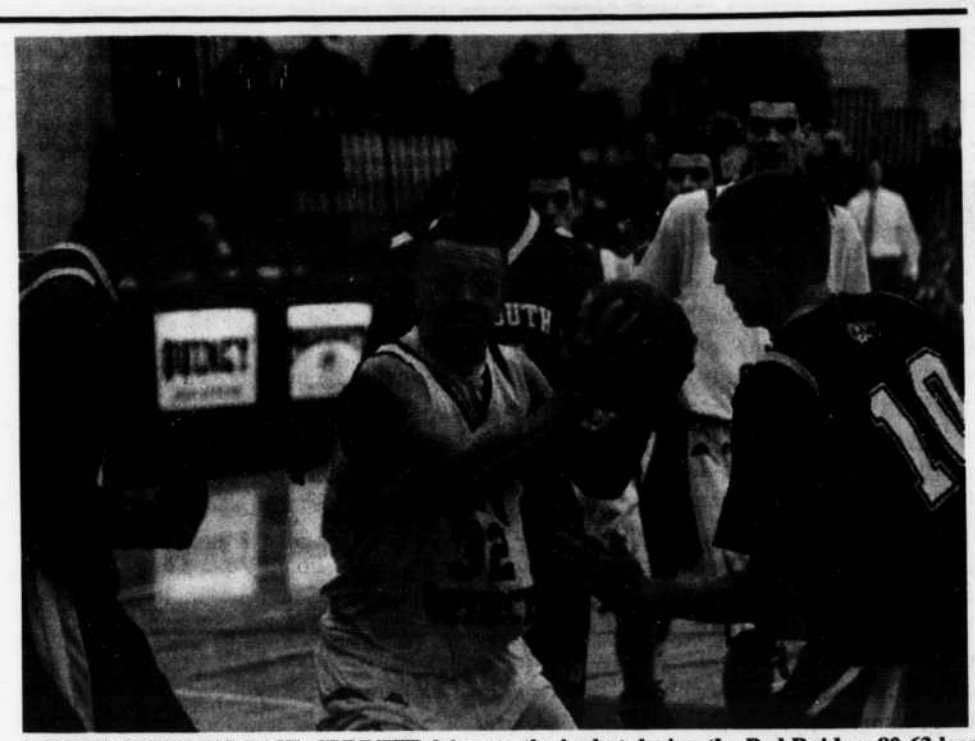
"I was happy with our effort but not the results," said QHS head coach David Parry.

North Quincy vs. Braintree (Semifinal)

Meeting for the first time since the 1980-1981 season, North Quincy and neighboring Braintree HS locked together in the other semifinal game with the Red Raiders pulling out a 61-53 victory.

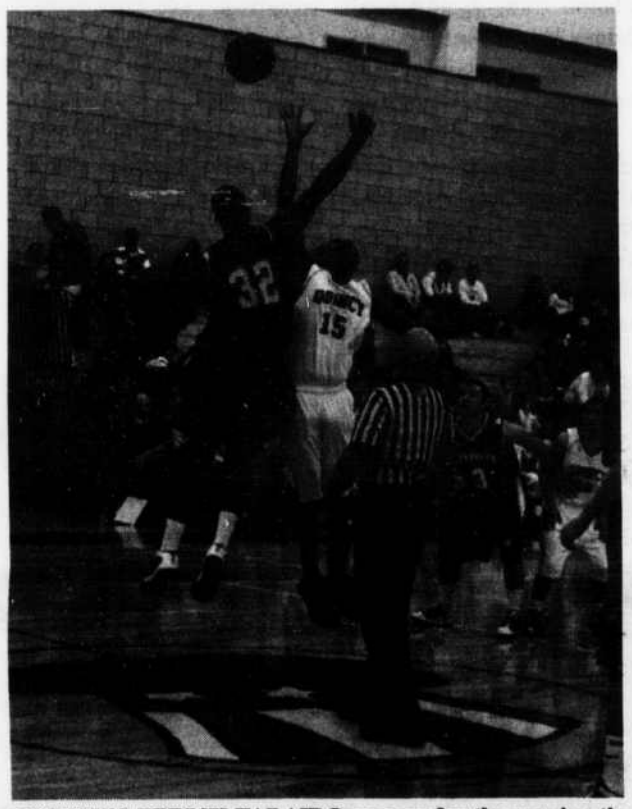
North Quincy started off slow, falling behind the Wamps, 10-5. Head coach Kevin Barrett's team then went on a 23-4 scoring run and led 28-14 at the halftime break.

"We finished the job," Barrett said. "We never let them back into the game."



Sophomore guard Dan Gould led all scorers with 20 points. Pat Gould finished with seven points and fellow sophomore Marquis McClendon chipped in with 14 points.

Junior Tim Liuzzo added 12 points and finished the John Adams Classic with 28 total points and a spot on the tournament All-Star team.



Notes: Quincy HS opened the New Year with an away game against Randolph HS on Tuesday. The Presidents will play at Scituate HS on Friday and at Middleboro HS next Tuesday (Jan. 11). The team's next home game is scheduled for Jan. 14 against Silver Lake Regional HS at 6:30 p.m. followed by a road game versus Whitman-Hanson HS on Jan. 18.

North Quincy HS played at home on Tuesday versus Silver Lake Regional HS. The Red Raiders will host Duxbury HS on Friday at 6:30 p.m. before traveling to Hanover HS on Jan. 14. The team will host Middleboro HS on Jan. 18 and rival Quincy HS on Friday, Jan. 21 at 7 p.m.

Blue Hill Adventure Museum Announces Winter Programs

The Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum announced last week a schedule of events and programs for the month of January.

The calendar is as follows:

The non-profit organization will hold a Skiing Workshop, focusing on back wood skiing, on January 8. This workshop will be led by Blue Hill Area ski leaders and instructors; you must RSVP by Jan. 2.

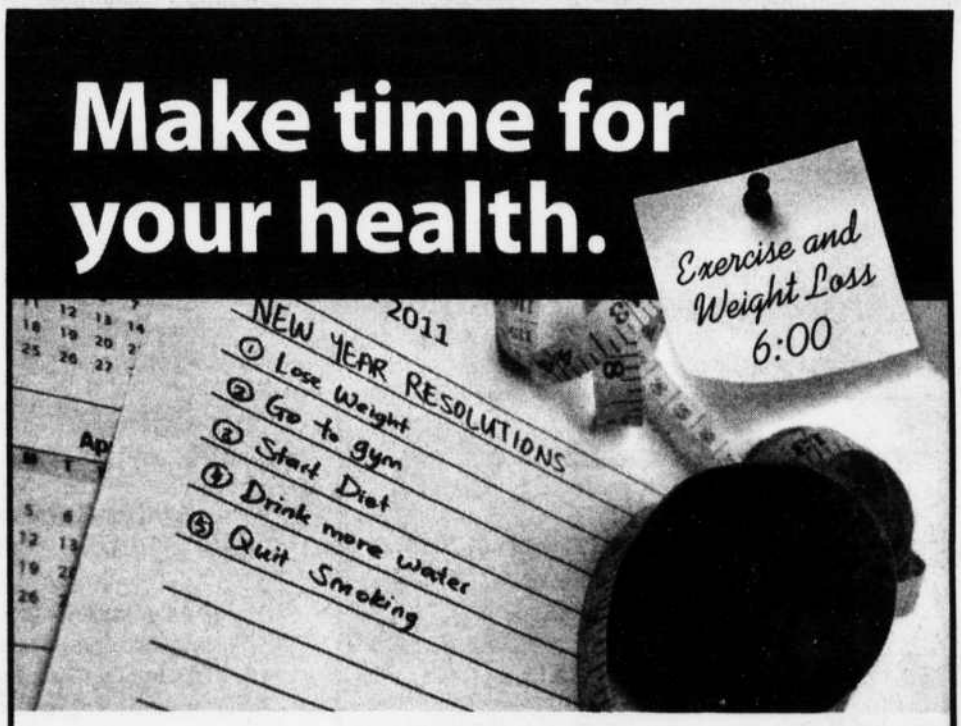
On January 9, the BHA will host a Nordic Cross Country Ski Workshop. Novice level, equipment, waxing, ski techniques and safety will be discussed; RSVP by Jan. 7.

The BHA and NSP Basic Avalanche and Mountaineering Level 1 Combined Courses will be held Jan. 14-16; RSVP by Jan. 2, and on Jan. 22, the BHA Nordic Ski/Mountaineering and Telemark Workshop will be held; RSVP by Jan. 20.

For additional information, locations, and questions regarding these programs, call the Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum at 781-326-0079.

QRD Announces Ice Skating Registration

The Quincy Recreation Department announced last week that they will conduct their popular low-cost nine-week program of Ice Skating Lessons with two classes on Wednesday afternoons at the Quincy Youth Arena.



This traditional Learn-to-Skate Program has for more than 30 years offered boys and girls age six through 14 the opportunity to learn the fundamentals of skating in a low-cost program with quality instruction.

Walk-in registration will take place at the main office of the QRD, One Merrymount Parkway, as long as openings exist. Online registration may be done on QuincyRec.com.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, the program will have two separate classes beginning at 3:10 and 4:05 p.m. on Wednesdays starting yesterday (Jan.5, 2011). Instruction will, again, be under the supervision of Mrs. Anne Eagles, a United States Figure Skating Association Professional, and will utilize the basic program of instruction designed by the USFA. Both classes offer the same levels of instruction and run for eight weeks.

The cost of the program is $76 for the nine-week session, which includes instruction and ice time; participants need to provide their own skates, which may be figure, or hockey skates with one blade.

Registration is done on a first-come-first-serve basis. Additional information may be obtained by calling the QRD at 617-376-1394 or online at QuincyRec.com.

SPOTLIGHT on HEALTH and FITNESS

Your Prescription Benefits May Be Changing

(NAPSA)—Seniors and other Medicare beneficiaries need to pay careful attention to their Medicare choices during the current enrollment period. There are some big changes on the way, especially when it comes to prescription drug plans.

The changes—from having fewer options to premium increases to new discounts on brand-name drugs—are enough to make anyone's head spin. Seniors who don't take the time to research their options and choose the plan that best suits their needs could leave hundreds of dollars in savings on the table.

Beneficiaries access the Medicare drug benefit known as Part D through private plans approved by the federal government, either through stand-alone prescription drug plans (PDPs) or Medicare Advantage prescription drug plans (MAPDs).

While shopping around for a prescription drug plan could save many seniors money, some beneficiaries have no option other than to find a new plan for next year. For 2011, the federal government directed insurers to eliminate duplicative plans and plans with low enrollment. That means a third fewer prescription drug plans will be offered nationwide in 2011 compared to 2010, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Here's some good news: There is a new 50 percent discount on brand-name drugs for those who land in the coverage gap known as the "doughnut hole." In addition, plans such as those available through PlanPrescriber.com will pay 7 percent of the cost for generic drugs in the gap. This generally applies only to prescriptions on the plan's list of covered drugs.

Things to keep in mind when considering options:

Cost and coverage—Plans vary in the coverage offered and how much they cost. Consider the cost of premiums and whether it includes prescription coverage while in the gap.

Pharmacy—Some plans restrict where you can use your drug plan. Determine whether your desired pharmacy is included in the plan you choose.

Formulary changes—Insurers may change drug formularies each year. Make sure you enroll in a Part D plan that covers your medications.

Other limitations—Some plans may limit the circumstances under which a drug is covered. Certain medications may only be covered after prior authorization, after you've tried other drugs through a process called step therapy, or in certain doses and quantities.

GETTING ADJUSTED TO WORKING OVERTIME

Working long hours places a great deal of stress on the body. Pain in the neck, shoulders, wrists, and other parts of the body caused by repetitive stress or overuse syndrome may be addressed with some adjustments in the workplace and the chiropractor's office. To begin with, a fit body is better able to withstand repetitive stresses. So, it pays to get in shape and maintain at least a modicum of fitness. Beyond that, the key to avoiding repetitive stress problems is to undertake ergonomic evaluations of the workplace and make sure that the equipment allows for changes in posture and position. Chiropractic adjustments can also help rebalance a body stressed by poor posture and repetitive movements.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are dedicated to helping you achieve ultimate goals and obtaining better health. With specialization in auto accidents and sports injury cases, as well as many other forms of common body ailments, our expertise and knowledge has made us one of the best chiropractors in the area. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we will devote the individual attention needed to your specific problem. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and start feeling better. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service. P.S. When sitting, be sure to maintain the curvature of the lumbar (lower) spine and keep the knees level with (or lower than) the hips.

A Healthy Smile Can Be Key To A Healthy Relationship

(NAPSA)-Keeping the love light shining in your life may mean doing some surprising things.

While many experts tout the importance of good communication in building a solid relationship, a recent study found that grooming, such as maintaining good oral hygiene, is also very important.

The Water Pik Sexy Smile Survey, fielded by Kelton Research, examined Americans' views on oral health care and revealed that a clean mouth, compared to other grooming habits, was most important for a healthy relationship.

Close to six in 10 Americans would be most disturbed by their partner not brushing or flossing his or her teeth for a week, as compared to only 24 percent who would be most perturbed if their significant other passed on wearing deodorant. Far fewer were bothered by their partner skipping shaving, hair combing or trimming toenails for a week, at 9 percent, 6 percent and 2 percent, respectively.

The study also looked at attitudes toward oral health care and intimacy, and unexpectedly found that good oral hygiene is significantly preferred over the traditional romantic overtures to set the mood, such as dimming the lights, lighting candles, wearing perfume or playing romantic music.

While quick to judge the oral hygiene habits of their significant others, the majority of Americans actually have difficulties in their own relationships with floss.

It appears that Americans are most likely to floss just before visiting the dentist or when they have food stuck in between their teeth. In fact, nearly six in 10 Americans say they deserve a "C" or lower for their daily flossing efforts and about one in five give themselves a failing grade. They also say they would pay an average of $53 for an alternative to regular string floss-if it meant that the process was faster, easier and more effective.

COULD GOOD ORAL hygiene be the key for keeping your romantic relationship in shape?

Walnuts – An Original Health Nut

(NAPSA)-Here's food for thought: Walnuts are unique among nuts as an excellent source of alpha-linolenic acid (ALA), the plant-based essential omega-3 fatty acid.

Naturally sodium- and cholesterol-free, 1 ounce of walnuts-approximately a handful- contains 2.5 grams of ALA, plus protein, fiber, vitamins, minerals and antioxidants.

The Romans called walnuts Juglans regia, or "Jupiter's royal acorn," and other ancient civilizations honored walnuts for their health properties.

A good value, convenient and versatile as a snack or ingredient, walnuts can add great taste and texture to many recipes.

For example, try this one that's easy to make and keeps for several days. You can toss pesto with noodles or use it as a sandwich spread or as a dip for fresh veggies.

WALNUTS ADD a nutrition boost to this delicious pesto.

Mollie Katzen's Walnut Pesto

(Makes 4 servings)

- 3 packed cups fresh basil leaves
- 3 large cloves garlic
- 1/3 cup lightly toasted walnuts
- 1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 1/3 cup grated Parmesan
- Salt and pepper to taste

Optional: additional extra virgin olive oil (for storage)

1. Place the basil leaves and garlic in a food processor or blender and mix well. Add the walnuts and continue to blend until the nuts are finely ground.

2. Keep the machine running as you drizzle in the olive oil. When you have a smooth paste, transfer to a bowl and stir in the Parmesan. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

3. If you are not going to use the pesto right away, place in a container that has a tight-fitting lid. Smooth out the top surface of the pesto and pour on enough olive oil to cover it completely. This creates an airproof seal that helps preserve it well. Cover tightly and store in the refrigerator.

Now, walnuts may be good for you in a new way. A nationwide "Quest For The Original Health Nut" is under way. Renowned authors and nutrition experts Dr. Brian Wansink, Dr. Michael Roizen, best-selling cookbook author Mollie Katzen and fitness expert Petra Kolber are searching for the one person in America who lives each day to the fullest, leading by example and inspiring others to make healthy decisions. The grand prize includes a trip to Napa, California. Those who nominate a Health Nut will be entered in monthly drawings for other prizes.

OBITUARIES

Rick Torraco
Retired Radio, Television Technician

A Mass of Christian Burial for Rick Torraco, of Quincy, a retired radio and television technician, was celebrated Wednesday in Saint Agatha Church, Milton.

Mr. Torraco died peacefully Dec. 30 surrounded by his family.

Born and raised in Watertown, he was a graduate of Watertown High School. Prior to his retirement, he worked as a radio and television technician at Channel 7, WHDH-TV in Boston.

RICK TORRACO

Mr. Torraco was a member of IBEW Local 1228 Electrician's Union and The Quincy Historical Society.

Beloved husband for 60 years of Joan M. (nee Johanna McCarthy). Loving father of Richard of Nebraska, Robert of Braintree, Joanne Harney of Reading, and Kathleen Torraco of Quincy. Brother of Nancy Mancusi of Medford and the late Mario and Italo Torraco. Rick is also survived by seven grandchildren: Lauren, Maureen and Nicholas Torraco, William and Catherine Harney and Brian and Christine Sorensen and by many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Mr. Torraco was a lifelong member of the Quincy Tennis Club. During more than 40 years as an active member, he had numerous lifelong friendships.

After a long and successful career in broadcasting, he spent his retirement years sharing his love of sports with his friends, children and grandchildren. He was also actively involved in parish activities at St. Agatha's Church in Milton. In addition to his ongoing parish involvement, he traveled extensively with many friends who also live in the parish.

Mr. Torraco's lifelong love was soccer. From his earliest days as captain of the Watertown High School team through semi-pro league play, he extended his participation in the sport as a referee at the high school level and as a coach with younger children.

Interment was in Milton Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Dolan Funeral Home, 460 Granite Ave., Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to Saint Agatha Church Renovation Fund, 432 Adams St., Milton, MA 02186.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

How satisfied are you with your personal life? Are you satisfied more often than dissatisfied? Or vice-versa? How often have you tried to determine the reasons - either way?

For example, are you sincerely trying to make the most out of what you have? . . . Do you appreciate and express your admirations? . . . Are you envious; do you covet someone else's possessions? . . Are you influenced by someone else's kindness of heart or gentle manners? . . Do you hate falsehood and misrepresentation and avoid it in your attitude and expressions? Are you saddened more often by the clouds in your life instead of trying to scatter sunshine in the lives of others? . . . Do you allow worry to pull clouds over your life instead of ignoring them in the radiance of hope? . . . Do you keep your heart free from hate? . . Do you think more often of your friends than those you dislike? . . .

Would not an honest answer to these sort of sample questions help change an attitude toward life – IF a change is longed for?

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A hectic period begins to wind down. Take time to draw some deep breaths and relax before getting into your next project. A long-absent family member makes contact.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to move forward with a new challenge that suddenly dropped in your lap. But you'd be wise to take this one step at a time to allow new developments to come through.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're almost ready to make a commitment. A lingering doubt or two, however, should be resolved before you move ahead. An associate could provide important answers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still the watchword as you move closer toward a decision about a new situation. If you act too fast, you might miss some vital warning signs. Go slowly and stay alert.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your new goal looks promising, and your golden touch does much to enhance its prospects for success. In your private life, Cupid does his best to make your new relationship special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That impatient side of yours is looking to goad you into moving before you're ready to take that big step. Stay calm and cool. Let things fall into place before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A legal matter you hoped could finally be settled could be a pesky problem for a while, until all the parties agree to stop disagreeing with each other. Be patient.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Partnerships -- personal or professional -- which began before the new year take on new importance. They also reveal some previously hidden risks. So be warned.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your associates are firmly on your side, and that persistent problem that has caused you to delay some activities should soon be resolved to your satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Favorable changes continue to dominate, and you should be responding positively as they emerge. Someone wants to become more involved in what you're doing.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friend wants to share a secret that could answer some questions you've wondered about for a long time. Meanwhile, travel aspects continue to be strong.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stay on your new course despite so-called well-meaning efforts to discourage you. Rely on your deep sense of self-awareness to guide you to do what's right for you.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: You have the capacity to meet challenges that others might find overwhelming, and turn them into successful ventures.

Dorothea K. Lundin, 93

Worked In Accounting Departments

A memorial service for Dorothea Kerstin (Holmstrom) Lundin, 93, of Quincy, a longtime resident of Houghs Neck who worked for several prominent companies in their accounting departments, will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. in Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear Street, Quincy Center.

The Rev. William C. Harding, Minister, and Rev. Gary W. Smothers, Associate Minister, will officiate.

Mrs. Lundin died Dec. 23 at Quincy Medical Center surrounded by her son, 13 grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Born in Forest Hills, she was the daughter of Frederick August Holmstrom and Annie May (Weeden) Holmstrom. She grew up in the Hyde Park area of Boston, skipped two grades in school and went on to study bookkeeping and accounting in Boston.

She was married to the late Lars Oke Lundin on Oct. 1, 1938 and had two sons, Lars Norman Lundin (Newnan, GA) and the late Steven Phillip Lundin. Her grandchildren include Cheryl A. Clarkin (Saunderstown, RI), Lisa M. Lundin (Weymouth, MA), Lori A. Durieux (Williston, VT), Terri L. Parent (Williston, VT), Wendy S. Clark (Seattle, WA) and eight great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Lundin worked for several prominent companies in their accounting departments – Grossmans Lumber, Dickenson Advertising, Industrial Luncheon (predecessor to Dunkin Donuts), Goldies, Inc. and Lars O. Lundin and Sons, Contractors.

She was also the treasurer for the South Shore Viking Association (The Viking Club) for approximately 25 years.

She was a Past Chief of the Stenkil Lodge #92, Independent Order of Vikings, Inc.

She also served as the Function Manager for many years at the Viking Club.

Dot and Oke's early hobbies included "Ringtime Kennels". They raised Beagles for show, field and obedience, raising several international Championship dogs. They belonged to the South Shore Beagle Club, the Tri-County Beagle Club and several other sportsman clubs.

While raising two sons, she was involved in the Boy Scouts of America as a den mother. Later, when raising two grand-daughters, she became a Girl Scout leader (10 years) andcoordinated many troop trips to various cities and states in New England.

Mrs. Lundin was also a member of the Quincy Chapter #88, Order of the Eastern Star.

She lived almost 70 years in the Houghs Neck area of Quincy in a beautiful beach front home overlooking Quincy Bay and Boston. She attended the Houghs Neck Congregational Church and Bethany Congregational Church.

Memorial donations may be made to the Bethany Congregational Church Scholarship Fund, 18 Spear St. Quincy, MA 02169.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION-HIGHWAY DIVISION

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

Quincy-Weymouth: Proposed Fore River Bridge Replacement
Project File No. 604382

A Public Meeting will be held by MassDOT-Highway Division to receive public comments on the Environmental Assessment for the proposed Fore River Bridge Replacement Project. The project is located in Quincy and Weymouth, Massachusetts.

WHERE: Fore River Club House
16 Nevada Road
Quincy, MA 02169

WHEN: Thursday, January 13, 2011 @ 6:30 PM

PURPOSE: The purpose of this meeting is to present the Environmental Assessment (EA) for the Fore River Bridge Replacement Project, Quincy-Weymouth made available for public review on December 13, 2010. The EA was prepared to evaluate a range of alternatives and impacts for the permanent replacement of the 1936 Fore River Bridge, which was demolished in 2004 and temporarily replaced with the existing movable lift bridge. The EA was made available to the community through a range of outlets, including the project website (www.mass.gov/massdot/foreriverbridge) and local public libraries. Comments on the EA are due by January 26, 2011 and should be sent to:

Richard Marquis,
Acting Division Administrator
Federal Highway Administration
Massachusetts Division
55 Broadway, 10th Floor
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02142
Attn: Damaris Santiago

and to

Frank A. Tramontozzi, P.E.,
Chief Engineer
MassDOT Highway Division
10 Park Plaza, Room 4260
Boston, Massachusetts 02116
Attn: Michael Furlong

Comments will also be accepted verbally and in writing during the public meeting on January 13, 2011. Following a brief presentation, MassDOT staff will lead a discussion to gather comments and answer questions.

PROPOSAL: The replacement of the Fore River Bridge, which carries Route 3A over the Fore River between Quincy and Weymouth, is being conducted under the Commonwealth's Accelerated Bridge Program (ABP). This is one of the largest projects being undertaken by MassDOT under the ABP and when completed, will create a permanent, movable bridge to replace the current temporary span.

The purpose of the proposed action is to replace the existing temporary bridge carrying Route 3A over the Fore River between Quincy and Weymouth with a permanent movable bridge that would be on the same alignment and have the same vehicular capacity as the 1936 bridge, while maximizing the vertical channel clearance to reduce opening frequency and duration, and widening the horizontal channel clearance to meet marine navigational needs. The alternatives considered in the EA include the No Build, a bascule bridge and a vertical lift bridge. The EA identifies a Preferred Alternative of a Vertical Lift Bridge with a 250-foot horizontal channel clearance and a vertical clearance of 58.5 feet above mean high water as the only alternative that meets the project's purpose and need. The proposed Fore River Bridge structure will have two travel lanes, a bicycle accommodating shoulder, and a sidewalk in each direction. The EA identifies impacts of the preferred alternative and proposes mitigation.

Print copies of the EA and Appendices are available at the Weymouth, Quincy, and Braintree Public Libraries. Compact disks and/or print copies may be obtained by contacting Michael Furlong at the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, 10 Park Plaza, Room 4260, Boston, MA 02116. Mike can also be reached at 617-973-8067 or Michael.Furlong@state.ma.us.

The community has declared that this facility is accessible to all in compliance with the ADA / Title II. However, persons in need of ADA / Title II accommodations should contact Angela Rudikoff by phone at (617) 973-7005 or email to angela.rudikoff@state.ma.us. Requests must be made at least 10 days prior to the date of the public meeting.

Winter Parking Rules 2010 - 2011

- NO PARKING allowed on either side of EmergencyArteries during a snow emergency.
- Emergency Arteries are identified by signs.
- Residents on side streets (not Emergency Arteries) are allowed to park on the EVEN SIDE of the street, this winter season.
- Overnight parking is prohibited without a resident parking permit. Permits are available at the Quincy Police Department 617-745-5852.
- Vehicles in violation of winter parking rules will be towed at owner's expense. Also, if your vehicle is hampering snow plowing operations (i.e. parked too close to an intersection, etc.) it will be towed.
- The average tow fee is $125.00, plus cost of storage. No exceptions can be made for short-term (10-15 min.) parking.

To find out if a snow emergency has been declared call 617-770-7669 for a recording or log onto www.quincyma.gov.

For other snow concerns call the SNOW HOTLINE 617-376-1927.

The dangers of snow and ice begin at your front door...

Please keep your sidewalk and steps free and clear of snow and ice for the mail carrier, oil delivery, and police and fire. Don't force school children to walk in the street. Help your elderly neighbors to shovel.

Public Meeting On Project Tonight

Mayor Wants New Fore River Bridge 'Centerpiece Gateway'

Mayor Thomas P. Koch will press state transportation officials to ensure that the design of new Fore River Bridge in Quincy Point accounts for its "vital importance" as a gateway to the City and the surrounding commercial areas and neighborhoods.

"The top priority is obviously that the bridge be more functional and more efficient than the old one, but that does mean this bridge cannot be designed and built in a way that makes it a centerpiece gateway to our City," said Koch, who plans to submit his comments on the project in writing at a public meeting on the bridge project on Thursday night at 6:30 at the Fore River Clubhouse.

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation is still considering two options when it comes to the specific type of structure that will replace the 1936 bridge – a bascule drawbridge like the original or a "vertical-lift" bridge with an opening that rises in the middle, like the current temporary structure.

Koch said he expects the state decision on the specific style of bridge to be determined by appropriate engineering and efficiency standards. But he said design elements can be achieved on either alternative that would eliminate the "erector-set eyesore" that stands as the temporary bridge.

"There are very high quality vertical-lift designs out there. If that's the decision ultimately made by the Department of Transportation, I would expect that the design be appropriate to the importance this bridge holds to Quincy and the South Shore," Koch said.

Koch credited state Rep. Ronal Mariano for "literally years" of work to secure funding for a new Fore River Bridge, and Gov. Deval Patrick for including it as part of his Accelerated Bridge Program. The Fore River project will be among the largest undertaken as part of the bridge program, state officials said.

At the public meeting, state officials are expected to present an Environmental Assessment for the project, a document that details a range of alternatives and impacts for the permanent replacement bridge.

Public comments on the environmental assessment are due by Jan. 26, and will be accepted at the public meeting or can e-mailed or mailed to the Massachusetts Department of Transportation via the project's website www.mass.gov/massdot/foreriverbridge.

For more information on the project, residents can contact the Department of Transportation's Public Outreach Coordinator, Stephanie Boundy, at 617-973-8049.

Focus On Reducing City Government's Energy Usage By 20 Percent Over Next Several Years

Recycling Coordinator Named Energy Manager

Mayor Thomas Koch has named John Sullivan, the lead coordinator of the City's innovative new trash collection and recycling program, as Quincy's first Energy Manager paid for by a grant from the Federal Government.

JOHN SULLIVAN

Sullivan helped author the three-City trash collection contract with Weymouth and Braintree and coordinates the Single Stream recycling program that has dramatically cut costs and increased and the City's recycling rate. He will now move into the new policy role with the goal of reducing City government's energy usage by 20 percent over the next several years.

City Braces For Second Major Snowstorm In Two Weeks

The City prepared to dispatch more than 120 pieces of snow removal equipment across Quincy as Mother Nature was expected to slam the City of Presidents with its second major snowstorm in the last two weeks.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch met with his snow removal leadership and emergency personnel on Tuesday to initiate the game plan for the storm that was expected to dump as much as 17 inches of snow on part of the City. The Mayor was slated to meet regularly with DPW and emergency officials throughout the course of the storm.

"We are ready – we have the manpower, we have the equipment, and we have full operation going. Keeping our streets open and safe is something we never skimp on, and that remains true for this storm," Koch said. "I'd ask that our residents do their part by not driving, removing cars from the street and checking on elderly and elderly neighbors."

Trash pick-up was cancelled for Wednesday, with pick-up delayed by one day for all routes in the City. Wednesday pick-up will be on Thursday. Thursday on Friday, and Friday on Saturday.

Department of Public Works Commissioner Lawrence Prendeville said the City team's of DPW drivers and private contractors reviewed performance of the last storm, and have already made a number of adjustments to target trouble spots.

"We identified the trouble spots, and we are addressing those through in this storm," he said.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said winter parking rules will be "strictly" enforced. All parking is banned on major arterial roadways in the City, and cars are allowed to parked on the even-numbered side of neighborhood streets.

"All others will be towed," Chief Keenan said.

Tucson Tragedy Underscores Threats To Public Servants

By JOE REARDON

William Keating was in a freshman congressional orientation meeting on Saturday when news of the shooting at a constituent question and answering gathering outside a Tucson, Arizona grocery store reached Washington.

The 10th Congressional representative somberly gathered with many of his stunned colleagues, trying to make some kind of sense of the horrific shooting rampage authorities say 22-year-old loner Jared Lee Loughner unleashed that critically wounded Arizona Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, left six others dead and 13 wounded.

Congressmen were in disbelief over the shooting of Giffords, one of the more popular and respected delegates on Capitol Hill. Many of the congressmen Keating spoke with knew Giffords well and were in a state of shock over the tragic event in Arizona.

Congressman
WILLIAM KEATING

Norfolk County D.A.
MICHAEL MORRISSEY

"Being in a setting with so many other congressmen, it was a very somber mood," Keating said. "I was reflecting on the individuals and their families and I thought how can I limit violence in every day life."

Back in Massachusetts on Monday, Keating asked for a moment of silence for the victims and their families at a dedication as part of the Southfield Project he attended in Weymouth at the former Naval Air Station.

President Barack Obama was expected to travel to Arizona on Wednesday to speak at a memorial service at the University of Arizona and then visit with the victims' families.

As the Norfolk County D.A. for 12 years Keating knows first hand the feeling of being on the receiving ends of death threats, as does his former staff of prosecutors.

"I've had to deal with threats," said Keating. "It's a world we were used to being in. I've lived in a world the last 12 years where we've dealt with issues of security."

Killed in the shooting spree were U.S. District Judge John Roll, 9-year-old Christina Taylor Green, who was born on Sept. 11, 2001, the day of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Towers and Pentagon; Giffords' aide Gabe Zimmerman, Dorothy Morris, Dorwin Stoddard and Phyllis Scheck.

Keating doesn't intend to let the shooting affect the work he has ahead in his new position. "I'm going to continue to do my job," he said.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey has been following the progression of events of the last week and believes local and federal authorities will meet and map out how to go about prosecuting Loughner.

Morrissey is confident the case against Loughner will be put forth aggressively. "We'd prosecute the person and throw away the key," said Morrissey if a similar situation were to happen locally.

Morrissey said that added security of public officials only goes so far and the cost would become astronomical. Unfortunately, Morrissey said, people who are considering working as public servants have to go in with their eyes wide open.

"People shouldn't have to look at it that way and it's too bad they have to," he said. "Meeting with constituents is a critical part of the job. An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us."

Morrissey recalled the murder of Assistant Attorney General Paul McLaughlin, who was building cases against drug dealers and gangs when he was gunned down in 1995 by a reputed gang member.

"It can be troubling, but you can't let it interfere with your ability to do the job. All you can do at the end of the day is go out and do the job people elected you to do. We should be able to do that without fear."

MLK Breakfast Monday At Germantown Neighborhood Center

Tickets At The Door Or Call 617-376-1384

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's annual Martin Luther King, Jr. breakfast is on.

The event will be held Monday 9 to 11a.m. at the South Shore YMCA's Germantown Neighborhood Center, 91 Palmer St., Germantown.

A full program is planned and all are welcome, according to Kathy Quigley, Director.

Reservations may be made by contacting the center at (617) 376-1384. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Monday's event will mark the 15th consecutive year that Quincy leaders, residents and friends celebrate diversity and renew efforts for understanding on the King holiday.

The event almost didn't happen this year.

The Quincy Human Rights Commission which has sponsored the program for the past 14 years didn't have the funds and announced the event's cancellation last week.

However, Quigley stepped up to the plate and then spearheaded the move to save the breakfast.

"It's so important to have this because we're such an amazing city," said Quigley "We can't have something like this not happen."

No sooner had Quigley announced her efforts to hold the event than support materialized.

"I'm thrilled that Kathy took the torch on this," City Council President Kevin Coughlin said Tuesday, adding that he was "stunned and saddened" when he learned the breakfast was cancelled.

Coughlin pledged the council's support.

While lack of funding was a major problem for Human Rights Commissioners, one donor called almost immediately, assuring the breakfast's success.

Germantown's Kathleen Picard donated $1000 for the breakfast in memory of her husband Joseph Picard who died this year. Mrs. Picard, also, donated $300 in memory of Jessica Brackett, the 24-year-old Germantown native who, also, died in January, 2010.

And Mayor Thomas Koch will donate $500 through the Mayor's Charitable Fund, according to Tom Fabrizio who heads the Office of Constituent Services.

"I give Kathy Quigley a lot of credit for putting this together on very short notice and hope it's a huge success," said Fabrizio, adding he will definitely attend.

Quigley said she welcomes additional donations to cover the cost of the event which will offer a full breakfast and hopes to publish a list of donors.

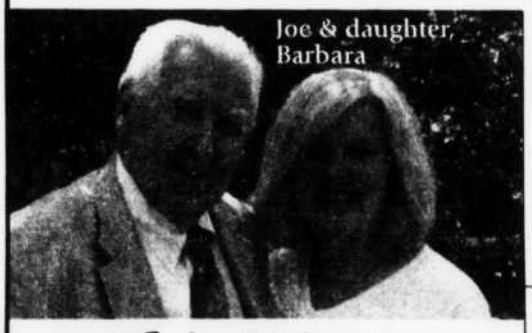
Members of the Human Rights Commission welcomed Quigley's plans, pleased that the event they supported so long will continue.

"I'm very grateful that she and the neighborhood center are stepping up," Anne Yeomans, the Commission's Chair, said Monday, adding, "I have great confidence in Kathy."

Yeomans said the Commission had no funds for the event and had decided to steer their efforts towards workshops and other projects this year. Quigley, a former Human Rights Commissioner, described her initial steps for the breakfast.

First, she asked Paul Gorman, CEO of the South Shore YMCA, if she could organize the breakfast.

"He didn't even hesitate," said Quigley. "I know our city officials also support this."



Mayor Koch will attend, according to his spokesman Chris Walker who issued this statement on Koch's behalf. "We were happy to offer our support to the Human Rights Commission in hosting this event as we have in the past and the same offer stands for the Germantown Neighborhood Center and the South Shore YMCA in their efforts to continue this tradition."

The current program includes keynote speaker Revered Canon Edward Rodman, a professor of Pastoral Theology and Urban Ministry, Episcopal Divinity School. Canon Rodman is also a counselor at Harvard, published author and consultant.

Karen Marshall, Social Work Professor, Eastern Nazarene College and Director of the Center of Responsibility and Justice will perform 'spoken word.'

Snug Harbor students who attend the center's after-school program will perform as will Samantha Tan, a junior from North Quincy High School.

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

A STERLING CHOICE

Sterling silver jewelry makes a sparkling, contemporary style statement and is very affordable. To make it harder and give it greater performance qualities, pure silver is alloyed with other metals to create "sterling silver." Buyers of this precious metal can be sure they are getting what they paid for by looking for the minimum silver content of the piece, stated as 925 parts per thousand of pure silver (the figures "925" or "92.5" might be used to designate silver content). The remaining 7.5 percent of sterling silver content is usually copper, which makes the silver harder but also gives rise to a tendency to tarnish. Some people enjoy the lovely patina of silver jewelry that is continuously worn.

Whether your preference leans toward sterling silver, shimmering gold, or dazzling platinum, we invite you to see our amazing array of beautiful fine jewelry. And if you are uncertain in your choice of precious metal, setting, or gemstone, just ask us. That's why we're here—to help you experience the wonder, beauty, excitement, and pleasure of owning fine jewelry. Including Gate On Penn Street

Lowe's Expected To Solve Issues Before Opening

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Building Inspector Jay Duca said Monday that he expects that all neighborhood issues will be resolved before the new Lowe's Home Improvement Center opens next week.

One of the major issues involves the erection of a fence to block access and egress from Lowe's to a section of Penn Street.

Other minor issues include tree plantings, landscaping and fencing which will be addressed in the spring, according to Duca who said company officials have signed off on those issues.

Lowe's is scheduled to open its new Quincy outlet next Friday on four acres off Burgin Parkway, South Quincy.

The project took more than four years of planning and construction as rezoning and permitting agreements were negotiated between city officials, neighborhood residents and company representatives.

One major hurdle remains a concern for residents: the construction of a gate which will prevent access or egress through the Penn Street neighborhood.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said that gate has been installed, but in the wrong place.

The gate was installed directly in front of the middle of a duplex at 65-67 Penn St., and across from W.C. Canniff & Sons Monuments.

On Tuesday, a worker at Canniff's pointed to the recently installed gate and said it blocks access for his company's trucks and deliveries and also interferes with a second neighboring business.

The gate needs to be moved closer to the Lowe's property where a "STOP" sign currently stands, the worker said.

Duca, who must issue a certificate of occupancy assured residents, said, "The gate situation will be resolved; the neighborhood issues will be taken care of."

"It's been a very dynamic negotiation," said Duca, adding that Lowe's officials have been cooperative.

City and company officials spent four years in the planning and permitting process which involved parkland and zoning changes for 15 parcels.

Committee Presents Paul D. Harold Student Grants

Emily Hajjar, Adam Moreschi 2010 Recipients

The 2010 recipients for the Paul D. Harold Student Grant recently accepted their grants at the Offices of the Quincy Credit Union.

This year's awards were presented to Emily Hajjar of Quincy High School and Adam Moreschi, 2010 graduates of Quincy High School and North Quincy High School respectively.

Moreschi was unable to attend the presentation. His award was accepted by his mother, Kathy Moreschi.

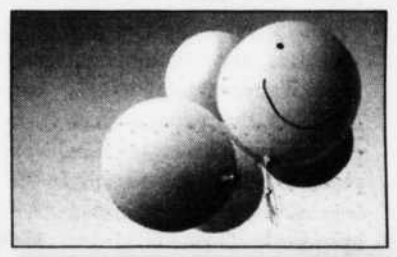
Both students have completed the requirement of their freshman semester and are continuing on with their second semester at the college of their choice.

Emily is a student at University of Massachusetts Amherst, her major is political science and is a member of the woman's rowing team.

Adam is attending Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Worcester, where he is double major is actuarial science and industrial engineering. He is a member of Habitat for Humanity, Adam was unable to attend the check presentation because he was in Louisiana with Habitat for Humanity during he winter break helping to rebuild homes destroyed by hurricane Katrina.

The Paul D. Harold Student Grant Committee was pleased to present awards to both of these deserving students. They have been involved in their community and beyond. Adam in his younger years at Quincy Youth Hockey was a player on the Paul D. Harold Hockey Team.

Each year the Grant committee selects one student from each North Quincy and Quincy High to receive the five hundred dollar grant in memory of Paul. Also the committee continues to sponsor a Quincy Youth Hockey and Youth Soccer Team, continuing a commitment to the youth of Quincy that Paul Harold believed was an important part of the fabric of the community.



To continue these programs, donations to the Paul D. Harold foundation may be sent to the Paul D. Harold Foundation c/o Quincy Credit Union 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Finally fed up enough to move your checking account to another bank?

The new free checking account customers we're seeing lately have something in common. They're aggravated beyond belief with their old bank. They've had it with not being able to call their branch directly. They're sick of the constant staff turnover. When their old bank dropped overdraft protection and started charging monthly fees, these folks got fed up and decided to make a change too. They came to Colonial Federal – where free checking is convenient, easy and still free. You get everything you're accustomed to, without the aggravation. You can come see us or call any time. We answer our own phones, no call center. We'll even help you move your Direct Deposit/s. Our customers love being with a neighborhood bank that's 100% local, stable and strong. Looking for a new home for your checking account? Come check us out! • On Jan. 23, 1775, London merchants petition Parliament for relief from the financial hardship put upon them by the curtailment of trade with the North American colonies. Most critical to the merchants' concerns were the 2 million pounds sterling in outstanding debts owed to them by their North American counterparts.

• On Jan. 18, 1882, A.A. Milne, creator of "Winnie-the-Pooh," is born. Milne wrote his volumes of verse for his son, Christopher Robin: "When We Were Very Young" (1924), "Winnie-the-Pooh" (1926), "Now We Are Six" (1927) and "The House at Pooh Corner" (1928).

• On Jan. 19, 1915, during World War I, Britain suffers its first casualties from an air attack when two German zeppelins drop bombs on Great Yarmouth and King's Lynn on the eastern coast of England. The zeppelin, a motor-driven rigid airship, was developed by German inventor Ferdinand Graf von Zeppelin in 1900.

• On Jan. 17, 1953, a prototype Chevrolet Corvette sports car makes its debut at General Motors' Motorama auto show in New York City. The car featured an all-fiberglass body, a white exterior and red interior, a 150-horsepower engine and a starting price tag of around $3,500. An AM radio and heater were extra.

• On Jan. 20, 1961, 87-year-old Robert Frost recited his poem "The Gift Outright" at the inauguration of President John F. Kennedy. Although Frost had written a new poem for the occasion, titled "Dedication," faint ink in his typewriter made the words difficult to read, so he recited "The Gift Outright" from memory.

Making Sense Of The Census

Massachusetts will lose a Congressional district according to the 2010 Federal Census.

That much we know.

What's unknown is how the new population figure for the City of Quincy will impact how the city's 30 precincts are apportioned. Those changes could cause a ripple effect in terms how the city's legislative districts are drawn.

It could also bring a significant shift in who represents Quincy in Congress in two years.

But before any precinct, ward or district line can be re-drawn, the city must wait for the federal government to release Quincy's new population figure.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said he hopes – and expects – the 2010 census to show Quincy has at least 90,000 residents. According to the city's street listing taken in 2010, Quincy has 92,700 residents.

SHEA

Shea says it's important for the city to clear the 90,000-mark because grants for public safety and municipal planning are tied into the federal census. So too are reimbursements for school projects.

The last federal census – 2000 – pegged Quincy's population at 88,025 – an all-time high. That was a 3,040-person increase over 1990's figure of 84,985. Shea said the Marina Bay development was one of the key reasons for the jump.

The 1980 count – if you're counting – was 84,743.

Regardless of what the new population figure is, Quincy will still have 30 precincts arranged by six wards with five precincts each.

But the new census number could mean some shifts in how those precinct lines are drawn. That's because the precincts must correspond to the "one-man, one vote" law that mandates legislators must represent the same number of people within one percent (it used to be five percent.)

"The city will have to re-draw its 30 precincts (based on the new population). Everything's on the table but I don't see a lot of changes," Shea says.

There were some subtle changes because of the 2000 Census.

Shea noted several streets in Quincy Center shifted from Ward 1 to Ward 5 so that most of the Center was in one ward.

A few streets in North Quincy – such as Ocean Avenue and Hummock Road – that had been in Ward 6 Precinct 3 were reassigned to Ward 6 Precinct 5.

Where could the new growth in the city's population come from this time around?

Shea says three potential surge spots are Marina Bay (Ward 6 Precinct 3); HighPoint Apartment Buildings on Quarry Street (Ward 3 Precinct 1); and the top of Ricciuti Drive (Archstone Apartments, Ward 4 Precinct 3.)

The city's Board of Registrars is responsible for re-drawing the lines. The Registrars are William Draicchio, Daniel Dewey, Rev. John Swanson and Shea who is the chairman. The plan must be submitted to the city council for approval and signed by the mayor by April, Shea noted.

Once the city's plan is signed off, it will be submitted to the state. A commission then gathers all the precinct information submitted by every municipality. The commission takes data and re-draws every state representative, state senate and governor's council district. (County lines are exempt.)

This is where it could get interesting.

Quincy has three state representatives and one state senator. Only one legislator has a district that's entirely in Quincy. The other three represent precincts in other communities.

• State Rep. Bruce Ayers represents the 1st Norfolk District. In Quincy, Ayers represents Ward 3 Precincts 3, 4; Ward 4 Precincts 1, 3; Ward 5 Precincts 2, 5 and all of Ward 6. But the district also includes two precincts in Randolph.

• State Rep. Ron Mariano represents the 3rd Norfolk District. In Quincy, Mariano represents all of Ward 2 and Ward 4 Precinct 5. But the district also includes three precincts in Holbrook and five precincts in Weymouth.

• State Sen. John Keenan's Norfolk-Plymouth District comprises all of Quincy, Holbrook and eight precincts in Braintree (Norfolk County) and two towns in Plymouth County: Abington and Rockland.

State Rep. Tackey Chan, who represents the 2nd Norfolk District, is the only Quincy state legislator whose district is entirely in the city. That district comprises all of Ward 1, Ward 3 Precincts 1, 2, 5; Ward 4 Precincts 2, 4; and Ward 5 Precincts 1, 3 and 4.

With redistricting occurring in every municipality, it's possible these districts could change too. Ayers, for example, might lose a precinct or two in Randolph and gain a precinct or two in Quincy. Or, moving one street out of one city precinct and into another could mean moving to a new state representative district, too.

But perhaps the most intriguing of all scenarios has to do with the number of Congressional districts dropping from 10 to 9 as of the 2012 election.

Quincy is currently part of the 10th District. Some political observers think the city could become part of a district with Boston two years down the road. Right now, Quincy is the largest and northern most municipality in the 10th District that spans the South Shore to the Cape and Islands.

Some also think the biggest boon in population in the state over the last 10 years has occurred in Barnstable County which is essentially Cape Cod.

So, theoretically, Quincy could be severed from the 10th as we know it today and connected to Boston in a new district.

That could also mean that two incumbent Congressmen – Bill Keating who represents the 10th and Stephen Lynch who represents the 9th District – may be forced to run for one lone seat. On the flip side, there are some political observers who think Lynch may challenge U.S. Senator Scott Brown who is running for a full six-year term in 2012. That could leave nine incumbent congressmen running in nine re-drawn districts.

KEATING

One final thought:

It is not unprecedented that a large city in Massachusetts be divided into two Congressional districts.

From 1993 to 2002, the City of Brockton – which is bigger than Quincy population-wise – was part of two different Congressional Districts. Sixteen of Brockton's 28 precincts were in the 9th District which for most of those 10 years was represented by the late Joseph Moakley. The other 12 precincts belonged to the 10th District represented by former Cong. William Delahunt.

After the 2000 Census, all of Brockton was reapportioned into the 10th District. (Those census figures ranked Brockton 6th in population among cities in Massachusetts with 94,304 residents; Quincy ranked 10th with 88,025 residents. (All of Brockton and all of Quincy were part of the old 11th District represented by former Cong. Brian Donnelly during the 1980s.)

There will be no 10th District when the 113th U.S. Congress convenes in January, 2013.

And Quincy will be part of a new district.

But will the city be part of two different districts?

It could happen.

With redistricting, everything's on the table.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD POSTCARD view of St. John's Catholic School on Phipps Street in Quincy Center. Opened in 1909, it was the first and for many years the only parochial school in Quincy. The first class graduated in 1913 the year this postcard was postmarked. Thousands of Quincy youngsters attended classes here until 1974 when the parish council decided to close the school. This old school building is still used for religious education and the building is also home to a number of self-help and social service organizations. Father Bill's Place had its beginnings in the basement here in the late 1980's and a section of the basement is still set aside for use when the main shelter on Broad Street is overcrowded. Over the years, five of Quincy's Catholic parishes had parochial schools. Today, there once again is only one: the new Quincy Catholic Academy next to Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy. George DePaulo: An Extraordinary Citizen

On Jan. 2, Quincy lost an extraordinary citizen, when George DePaulo passed away.

George was a custodian at Sterling Middle School for 60 years. I moved diagonally across from the school 60 years ago and immediately struck up a friendship with a remarkable man.

About five years ago, George was assigned four students to work under his supervision for the summer months. Each morning, George DePaulo would drive down to Dunkin Donuts, purchase a breakfast for each kid, and make them sit on the wall and eat it before sending them to work. The expense for this came from George's own pocket.

I mention this to illustrate the kind of man George was. He would not want people to know about this, so I hope you forgive me George.

His funeral procession today (Jan. 6) left Sweeney Brothers Funeral Home and on the way to St. Mary's Church, passed Sterling Middle School. The kids from the school lined both sides of the street, each holding the American flag. It was quite a sight and a fitting tribute to a great man.

Principal Christine Barrett and the teachers of Sterling, not forgetting the students, should be commended. I know that his entire family was touched by this display in honor of a great husband, father and grandfather.

During World War II, George won many military honors for bravery, such as the Bronze Star and Four Bronze Service Stars, the French Legion of Honor, France's highest award.

In addition to his family, Quincy, Massachusetts, the United States of America, and indeed the world, lost a super man.

Rest in peace, George.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Delivery Of Coal Is Rationed

By FRANK McCAULEY

Stressing that Eastern Massachusetts has been hit by an anthracite coal shortage Quincy fuel dealers voted to curtail coal deliveries to residential users to one ton at a time, at a meeting called by Mayor Charles A. Ross.

This Week
68 Years Ago

In a move to stop hoarding and "shopping around" of domestic users, the fuel men further agreed to refuse deliveries to any residential user who has two tons or more than a month's supply of coal on hand.

The action taken during the meeting which saw Mayor Ross named chairman of the fuel committee which had J. Everett Robie as vice-chairman and William O'Meara, Wilfred C. Rhodes, Carl Cherubini and Robert F. Grassick as members.

The new rationing plan affects anthracite deliveries only. While mine strikes were blamed chiefly for the shortage, hoarding and conversion of heaters from oil to coal were given as contributing factors.

BAN ON PLEASURE DRIVING BRINGS WEEKEND TRAFFIC TO RECORD LOW

As a result of the ban pleasure driving, Quincy experienced its lightest automobile traffic over the weekend since the first Sunday Driver joke was uttered more than a generation ago, police said.

Despite the scarcity of traffic, two accidents occurred, three persons were injured and police were hot on the trail of a hit and run driver who sent one man to the hospital with injuries.

Quincy Police Chief John J. Avery said that his men had turned in registrations of 35 more motorists over the weekend that were suspected as pleasure drivers. Their cars were found parked near amusement resorts of one kind or another.

1944 BUDGET SURPASSES U.S. EXPENDITURES BETWEEN 1789-1930

How much money is $108,903,047,923?

Here are a few ideas:

If you had been able to start spending it at the rate of $106 a minute when Christ was born, you'd have enough money to last you until the end of 1943.

It took the U.S. Government 141 years – 1789-1930 – to spend $100,000,000,000. That financed the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Spanish-American War and World War I as well as all of the nation's official living expenses in those years.

Next year's budget represents $825 for every man, woman and child in the country.

Kim and Reggie will also lead and conduct the Sunday, MLK Service, "Keeping the Dream Alive" in the sanctuary of United First Parish Church (Unitarian-Universalist) Sunday, Jan. 16 at 10:30 a.m. The community is invited.

Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union Seeks New Members

The Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union invites adults who love to sing to join its 70-voice choir comprised of ENC students and community members.

All adults are welcome to join the Choral Union, regardless of singing experience or music-reading ability. Auditions are not required and membership is free.

"The Choral Union is a fun and relaxing opportunity for people to learn about music, develop their voice and experience the power of live music in an unforgettable way," said Delvyn Chase, the group's conductor.

The Choral Union's upcoming concerts, Cased noted, include a May performance of Mozart's Requiem that will also feature professional soloists and the Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra.

Those who are interested in joining the Choral Union are invited to attend one of the group's upcoming rehearsals, which are held from 7:30 to p.m. Tuesdays in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the ENC campus in Wollaston.

The first rehearsal for the spring season will be held Tuesday, Jan. 18. New members will also be welcomed at the following rehearsal Jan. 25.

Film Series Concludes At Temple Shalom

Temple Shalom of Milton will conclude this season's Winter Movie Series on the theme "Jewish Culture Around the World" on Saturday, Jan. 22 at 7 p.m., with the documentary "Minyan in Kaifeng," narrated by Leonard Nimoy.

The public is invited to attend.

The last rabbi of Kaifeng, China, died well over a century ago, and today's descendants of the ancient Jewish community there have never celebrated Shabbat. Now two curious Chinese Jewish families have invited a modern group of Jewish travelers into their homes, leading to a reunion one thousand years in the making.

"Minyan in Kaifeng" shows the unexpected meeting of cultures through the eyes of modern travelers from Australia, China, Israel, and the United States. It is a story of ancient Diaspora, of old dangers and newfound wisdom. Informative and entertaining, this film is an excellent opportunity to experience a little-known area of Jewish culture and history.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call 617-698-3394.

Temple Shalom is located at 180 Blue Hill Avenue (Rte. 138), Exit 2B off Rte. 93/128, and is handicapped-accessible with free parking.

'No Impact Man' Film Screening Jan. 20

The 2008 documentary film "No Impact Man" will be shown Thursday, Jan. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

After the film, representatives from the City of Quincy and Energy Smart will discuss Quincy's trash and recycling efforts. Free waste-saving products will be available for attendees.

New York City writer Colin Beavan has big plans for his new book, "No Impact Man." He decides on a grand experiment to live one year with as little impact on the environment as possible.

He turns off the electricity, stops making garbage, and gives up TV and take-out, but he can't do it alone. His young daughter and caffeine-loving, retail-obsessed, TV-addicted wife must join him.

Can less really be more?

The 93-minute film is not rated.

The screening is sponsored by the library and Energy Smart Quincy.

Wollaston Garden Club Educational Programs

The community is invited to attend Wollaston Garden Club Education Programs.

Day and evening programs are offered. All programs are held at the Wollaston Congregational Church Social Hall, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy (corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues).

Programs are free but donations are appreciated as they help defray the cost of providing quality educational programs and support the Club's Civic Beautification Projects throughout Quincy.

Here's a list of this year's educational programs:

• "Landscape Design Do's and Don'ts" - Thursday, Jan. 20 at 7:30 p.m. Steve Tomasi of AJ Tomasi will give a visual presentation on landscape design and will answer audience questions on the best way to start designing their own gardens.

• "Chocolate: From Tree to Table" - Thursday, Feb. 24, 12:30 p.m. Betsy Grecoe of Keeping Time, Lecturer and Gardener, will discuss the history of chocolate in America and discuss current trends. A chocolate tasting and recipes are included with this program.

• "Organic Gardening, Part 2" - Thursday, March 17, 7:30 p.m. Rita Wollmering returns again this year to discuss organic gardening, with a focus on weeds, pests, and the best companion plants to include in your gardens.

• "Flower Arranging, Plain and Simple" - Thursday, April 28, 12:30 p.m. Betsy Williams will create several arrangements while discussing how and when to buy, pick, cut and condition flowers and greens. Simple, practical mechanics of flower arranging will be presented.

• "Rose Lecture: The Basics of Rose Growing" - Thursday, May 19, 7:30 p.m. Irwin Ehreneich, owner of the Rose Man Nursery in Carver, will give a visual presentation covering the history of roses, classification of roses, a year in the rose garden from spring pruning to winter protection, as well as a photo gallery of his own gardens. Rose plants will be available for purchase.

The Wollaston Garden Club will also hold its Spring Plant Sale Saturday, May 21, 10 a.m. to noon, rain or shine, Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

The Wollaston Garden Club is a member of The National Garden Club, Inc. and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. (GCFM).

McCauley Hat In Mayoral Ring

By FRANK McCAULEY

This Week
29 Years Ago

City Councillor at-Large Francis X. McCauley announced that he was running for mayor of Quincy. McCauley, a 51-year old banker from Houghs Neck, had served seven years on the City Council in two split terms. He was also a member of the School Committee for six years.

In March 1969, Governor Francis Sargent appointed McCauley to a five-year term as the state appointed member of the Quincy Housing Authority.

During his announcement at the Neighborhood Club, McCauley told the group gathered there that he "suspects that there will be at least one more candidate in the race."

McCauley said his campaign slogan would be: "Frank McCauley is the right man for the right job at the right time."

KELLY PLEDGES REASONED COURSE BY COUNCIL

Ward One Councillor Leo J. Kelly was sworn into his second one-year term as Council President by City Clerk John M. Gillis.

President Kelly noted that the City Council has entered its second year of a new decade; we confront new challenges and constraints in the operation of this city government.

Items to be considered include the implementation of Proposition 2 ½, 100 percent property valuation, school autonomy and property classification – all items that the City Council must deal with in the coming season.

Partnership Aims To Reduce Opiate Overdoses, Control Narcotics

Opportunity Is Knocking, Please Answer the Door

LIEUTENANT DET. PATRICK GLYNN
Quincy Police Department

Opportunity appears in many forms, today the citizens of Quincy are fortunate these agencies; Mayor Thomas Koch's Drug Task Force, Impact Quincy, Bay State Community Services, Department Public Health, Quincy Drug Court and the Quincy Police Department, have formed a partnership and are the new problem solvers of the city. The goal of the partnership is to reduce opiate overdoses and control the narcotics issues that affect our community.

Let us remember life is about choices, the choice to call for help is in the hands of the abuser. Today, we now provide a valuable option, the chance to live and turn your life around. The effort fostered by the partnership empowers the substance abuser to choose a path and assist them in a journey to a drug free life.

The monster lives within your medicine cabinet. It's not the officer in the police cruiser. They represent your future. In 2010, a pilot program was launched in Quincy; as a result the partners literally put nasal narcan in the hands of the first responding officer. Quincy police officers are trained and have access to nasal narcan 24/7. Narcan has been deployed on the streets of Quincy, waterways and within the booking area, of the police station. Nasal narcan is truly a lifesaver. It is designed to reverse the effects of an opiate overdose.

It is evident; the collaborative partnership demonstrates there is more to the Quincy Police Department than enforcement alone. While it is true when one hears the police are involved or responding a sense of fear and apprehensiveness may over shadow the situation. Our response is a multi-disciplinary approach. We provide emergency medical assistance, restore order, provide referrals, listen to both sides and yes at times, arrest individuals.

One must remember, our mission is to serve the needs of the community and attain the highest quality of life for the citizens of Quincy. As we continue to see young adults overdose, they or their friends must not fear calling 911 for assistance. Granted, addiction is extremely difficult to overcome, provide yourself, your friend or family member that valuable chance at life. In these situations you literally control your future.

Our objective is seen through the acronym: (P-E-T-E-R), Prevention, Education, Treatment, Enforcement and Recidivism (reduce overdoses/arrests). Clearly, arrests alone will not resolve the problem of addiction. It requires the multi-disciplinary approach, as mentioned. I firmly believe the unwritten motto of police officers is "to have compassion for those less fortunate than ourselves".

In closing,

Quincy Police like our partners adapt to the current situations in society today. In the words of --- Ralph Waldo Emerson----- "Do not go where the path may lead, go instead where there is no path and leave a trail".

Spread the word, call 911, life is about choices; help is in your hands, make the right choice and just trust us.

Impact Quincy:

iMPACT QUINCY

A Community-Based Coalition

Impact Quincy (IQ), a program of Bay State Community Services, founded in 1991, is a community-based coalition consisting of educational, health, law enforcement, religious, professional and business organizations dedicated to fostering an environment which strengthens communications and relationships within the community.

Impact Quincy provides opportunities for the creation and support of community collaborations which promote and sustain a drug-free community and healthy living. This collaboration with key members of the Quincy community is invaluable to IQ's efforts.

IQ is currently working on three initiatives. First, a substance abuse prevention program to educate the Quincy community about responsible choices regarding underage drinking. The second initiative is promoting a social marketing campaign to educate students and parents of middle school in Quincy to promote and reinforce healthy behaviors. The third initiative addresses the issue of opioid overdose in the City of Quincy.

IQ is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Bureau of Substance Abuse Services, and by the Office of National Drug Control Policy, Drug-Free Community Program.

Garden Club Federation Scholarship Applications Available

Applications are available for The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. annual scholarship program.

The program is for high school seniors, undergraduates and graduates who plan to major in horticulture, floriculture, landscape design, conservation, forestry, agronomy, city planning, environmental studies, land management, botany, biology and allied subjects.

Students must be attending or planning to attend an accredited college or university.

Applications are due by March 1.

Eligible students must be residents of Massachusetts, have a minimum of "B" avaerage (3.0 on a 4.0 scale), be of good character, and demonstrate financial need.

Applications are avaiable on the GCFM website http://www.gcfm.org or from guidance departments at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

"In the past, the most successful applicants are students who have organized and led a significant and well-documented environmental, conservation, or landscaping project," said Wollaston Garden Club President Par Artis.

"An Eagle Scout project or a science project that relates to the goals of the state garden club would put an applicant in solid contention," added Jane McGilvery, Wollaston Garden Club Youth Gardening chairwoman.

Students planning careers in these fields are welcome to contact the Wollaston Garden Club at 617-328-5520 for suggestions about local community projects.

Proper Puppy Care Carries Enornmous Responsibility

By JOE REARDON

The kids who were lucky enough to find a Chihuahua, Basset Hound, Labrador Retriever or Shizhu under the tree on Christmas morning may not fully know the enormous responsibility it is to properly care for a puppy or dog.

And that's where PETCO steps in.

The nationwide pet and supply store is offering free half-hour potty training seminars every weekend during the month of January. The classes are run by trainers who offer advice and answer questions on an array of topics.

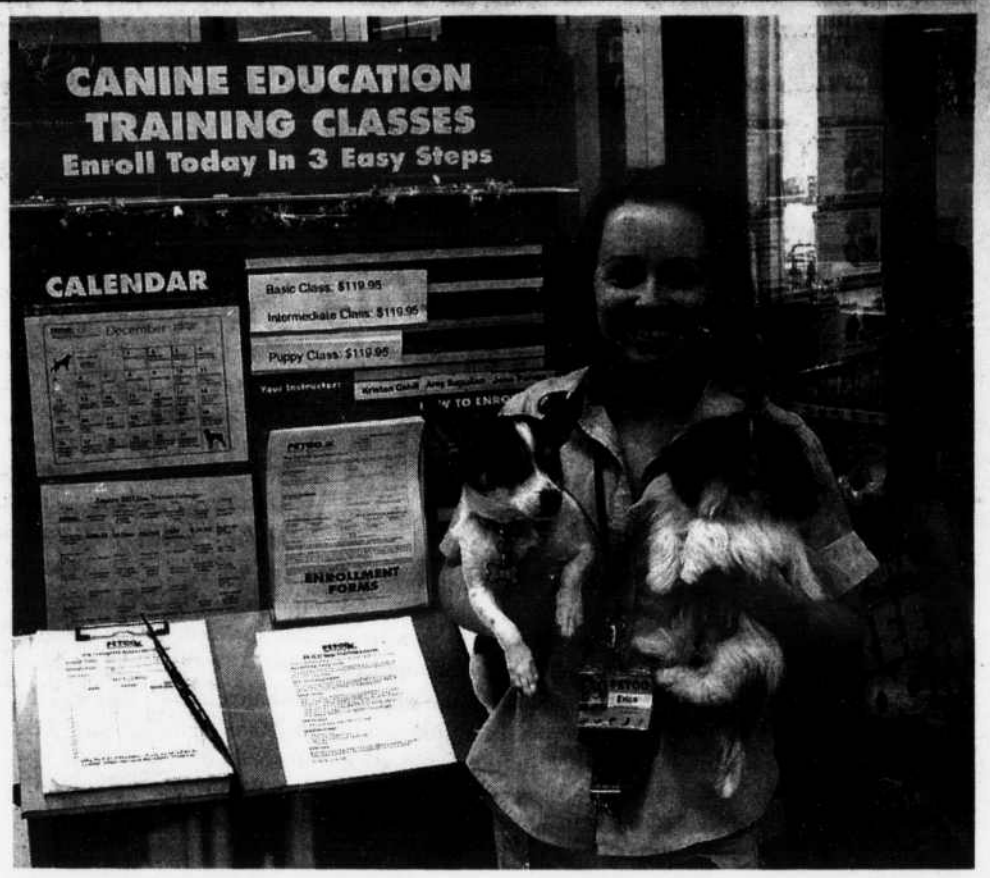
The potty classes are just one of several classes offered at PETCO. A basic course runs for six weeks and is designed to help socialize and train older puppies and adult dogs over six months old. The class includes walking the dogs on a loose leash, teaching techniques so they will come when called and the following of other commands.

The class is designed as a bonding experience for the dog and its owner.

Erica Manganiello, the assistant manager of the Quincy PETCO said that the potty training is best started early.

"The more things you can expose a puppy too, the better," said Manganiello. "The classes are always catered to the customer no matter what. Having a dog is a new social scene."

Positive reinforcement is important to teach the puppy from the get go. It entails rewarding behavior that you want to continue and ignoring the behavior you want to stop. Rewarding the good behavior ensures the owner and dog learns a common language, which leads to building a strong bond.



Potty training for dogs has many layers. Puppies and dogs do not understand right off where their owners want them to eliminate. The majority of dogs do not eliminate where they sleep or eat. A crate, then, becomes their safe spot to "hold it" and have a chew toy or treat. Dogs should be in their crates for no more than four hours at a time and less for a puppy.

If a dog does have an accident in the house, it's not cause to panic. The dog is still learning. The best way to handle a potty accident is by prevention. When they are loose indoors, puppies and dogs should be supervised at all times. If you notice an accident in progress the best course of action is to say nothing and bring the dog to an approved potty area, outdoors for example.

Manganiello said PETCO has expanded in the past two years offering classes. She is constantly reading to keep up to date with new training methods with the dogs and puppies. "To be a good dog trainer you have to pick and choose, and make your own evaluation," she said. "We've definitely grown in the past couple of years. It's all about educating and being pro-active."

Managniello especially follows the teaching of Dr. Nicholas Dodman, an animal behavior therapist who teaches at Tufts. Dodman is one of the most noted therapists in the world. She also confers with other dog trainers when she needs help or has a question regarding a certain type of dog or situation. Managniello has taught dog training to several individuals over the years and can't think of a job she loves more.

"There's always going to be that dog with a problem that you're not sure about," she said. "I like it a lot. I always wanted to do it when I was younger and never thought I'd have a chance. Now that I do, I'm having a lot of fun."

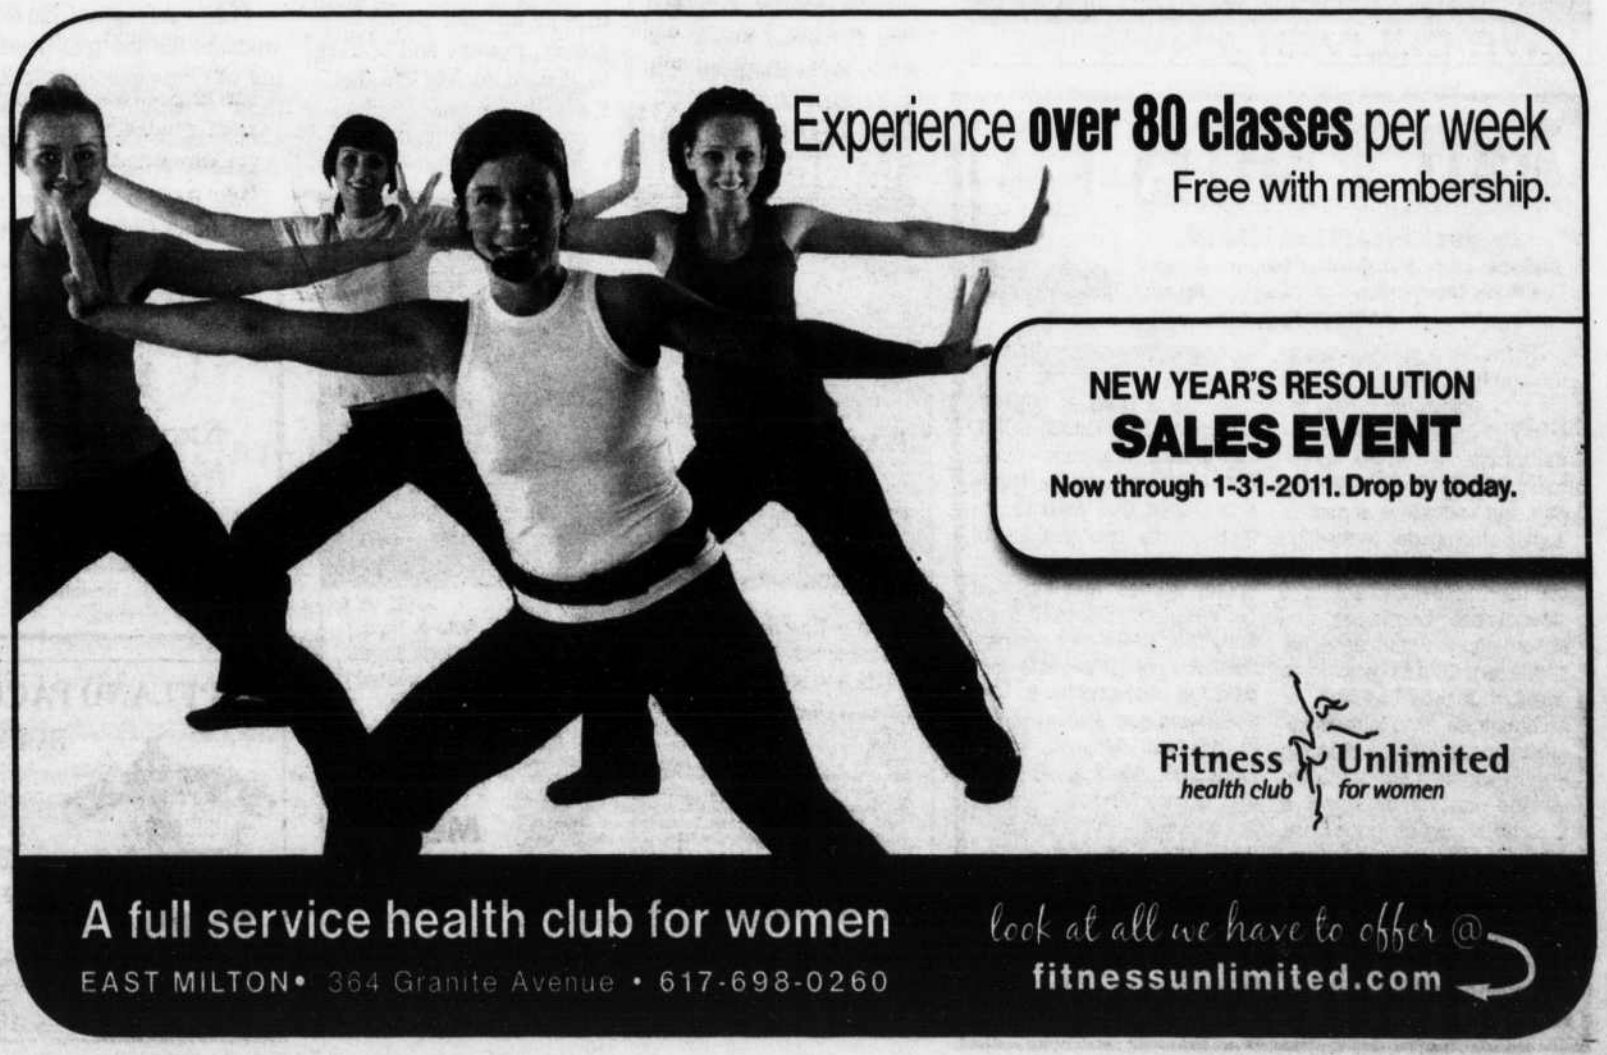
"John was instrumental in establishing and coordinating our environmental policy when it comes to trash collection and recycling, and I know he will take the same leadership, policy expertise, and contract knowledge to all of our government operations as we look to reduce the City's carbon footprint in coming years," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The move also makes sense economically, Koch said, as Sullivan's position in the DPW will not be replaced, creating salary savings in the City budget. The energy manager's position is funded by an $880,000 Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant, and Sullivan will be paid $75,000 from the grant for the next two years.

"There were several factors involved in making this decision, and we could not ignore the fiscal sense it makes to fill this position in house," Koch said. "John has great knowledge of how contracts work, about developing new policies, and has great contacts in the field, so we are happy to move him to this position."

Sullivan will now be responsible for coordinating the City's energy policy, including a full efficiency plan, monitoring energy use in City buildings and making recommendations on improvements, and community outreach on the City's efficiency efforts.



The Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant is also being used to pay for new energy efficient street-lights and intersection improvements in Brewer's Corner; energy efficient windows and other systems at Quincy Community Action Program's new Head-Start facility at the former St. John's School; traffic synchronization systems at intersections around Quincy to reduce vehicle idling; and a broad public outreach campaign that will encourage residents to take part in a number of energy efficiency and cost-savings programs.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Oil Burner Fuel Lines

For some time now, oil burner fuel lines have required protection in the event a leak occurs. These lines run from the oil tank to the oil burner.

Since I've worked within this office, every time a modification is made to an oil burner or oil tank beyond the yearly maintenance requirements, the fuel line has to be updated and protected to conform with the newer regulations if it hasn't been already.

There are two methods of doing so. One is a sleeve within which the copper fuel line is placed. Should a leak occur, it is more apparent while to some extent confined within the sleeve without seeping into the ground undetected. The other method requires a valve referred to as an OSV. It stands for an oil safety valve, which is designed to shutdown the flow should a leak occur within the line. It is the easier fix between the two while some installers discourage their use.

As of July 1, 2010, the DEP requires protection from one or the other. Instead of having the issue addressed when a change occurs, you now have to have the issue addressed proactively.

It has to do with a new state initiative that requires homeowners to take steps to prevent costly spills within a home. In the event of a leak, where oil seeps into the basement or floor below, costly cleanups will be prevented when the lines are protected.

Meanwhile, the law includes a provision that insurance companies that presently write homeowner policies within Massachusetts provide coverage for leaks from heating systems that use oil. Most homeowner policies do not currently include such coverage leaving many to pay for costly cleanups out of their own pocket. Although it is mandatory that insurance companies offer this coverage as of July 1, 2010, the insurance is an optional purchase for homeowners.

Both these provisions affect owners of 1 to 4 family residences that are heated with oil. Again, they must already have or install either an oil safety valve or an oil supply line protective sleeve. A licensed oil burner technician must perform the installation of these devices. Technicians are typically employed by companies that deliver home heating oil or are independently self-employed. Either way, they must hold a oil burner technician's certificate issued by the state in order to work on these systems.

You will find more information at http://www.mass.gov/dep/cleanup/laws/hhsl.htm.

The reference is titled: HOMEOWNER OIL HEATING UPGRADE AND INSURANCE LAW. Meanwhile you are welcome to contact us in the fire prevention bureau for further information as well.

Thank you.

Stuffed Clams Or Quahogs

When we go to a restaurant and there are stuffed clams or quahogs, for appetizers, we always end up having them as an appetizer.

I decided to make them at home, and serve them in large shells instead of the usual smaller ones.

They can be made ahead of time and then baked in the oven when ready to serve.

The shells can be purchased in most stores. Today's recipe makes ten large shells.

STUFFED CLAMS OR QUAHOGS

1-pound fresh minced clams or quahogs (or a mixture of both)
10 slices of bread (white or wheat)
¾ cup seasoned breadcrumbs
2 tablespoons fresh parsley
1 small onion (chopped)
1 garlic clove (crushed)
3 tablespoons cooking sherry
Juice of a half lemon
Lemon wedges for serving
Oil for sautéing

In hot oil, sauté the chopped onion and garlic and add the parsley, sherry and lemon juice. Set aside.

Soak the bread in water. Squeeze and place in a bowl. Add the sautéed mixture, the uncooked clams, and the breadcrumbs and mix until well blended.

Salt if you wish. Mixture will be moist.

Brush each shell with oil and fill each one with the stuffing. Top it with a small sprig of parsley, and I used a sliced black olive and a strip of red pepper for presentation. And sometime, they can be topped with cheddar cheese.

Place the shells on a cookie sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for about 35 minutes until cheese is melted (if used) or the stuffing is hot. Serve with lemon wedges.

Quincy Catholic Academy Students Donate To My Brother's Keeper Christmas

During a recent event at Quincy Catholic Academy called "Santa's Secret Workshop" where students can purchase Christmas gifts for their family members, students had the opportunity to think for those in need and purchased hats, gloves, mittens and scarves to donate to My Brother's Keeper Christmas Program.

Helping to deliver the donations were Alexandria Scanlan, Katherine Scanlan, Casey Stevenson, Isla Griffin, Kevin Pedro, Timothy Keohane, Andrew McGuinness, Henry McBride, Matthew Keohane and Sean Scanlan.

"I feel very proud that our students felt the true meaning of Christmas in helping those in need," said Cathy Cameron, Quincy Catholic Academy Principal.

My Brother's Keeper is a volunteer Christian ministry located in Easton. They deliver furniture, household items and food, free of charge, to those who seek assistance.

In 2010, My Brother's Keeper Christmas Program reached out to more than 2,400 families in 74 communities.

Established in 2010, Quincy Catholic Academy is a Roman Catholic School enrolling students in Pre-Kindergarten through Grade Eight.

WINTER WARNING

There are a great variety of fun and healthy outdoor sports for your enjoyment during the winter months. Unfortunately, participation in winter sports, such as skiing and skating, puts feet and ankles at particular risk of injury due to the high speeds required. These activities use the feet and ankles to steer, break, accelerate, and absorb shock. For those winter sports enthusiasts who have corns, bunions, calluses, or hammertoes, a trip to the podiatrist prior to buckling or lacing up this winter is a must to determine what sort of protective food gear may be necessary. Also, it is critical to learn proper stretching techniques to ready the muscles for participation in winter sports.

When your sport has your feet hurting, get the advice and treatment from a professional foot care specialist. Whatever is causing pain in your every step, we're here at MILTON MEDICAL BUILDING, SUITE 221 to help. If you are new to the Milton area and don't have a podiatrist yet, we'd like to take on the responsibility of your family's foot care, from sports injuries and inherited deformities to just plain tired, achy feet. Call us for comprehensive, compassionate foot care at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building and Quincy Medical Center. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Do not put children in skates that are too large. The lack of proper support will leave the ankle susceptible to sprains, strains, and fractures.

Welcome Back From Combat Zones In Afghanistan, Iraq

City Council Salute For Local Guard Members Tuesday

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Home, sweet home is never so sweet as when savored by soldiers welcomed back from a combat zone.

For hundreds of Massachusetts soldiers, that day came just before Christmas when 420 members of the Massachusetts National Guard returned home for the holidays.

Ceremonies were held in Framingham, Hingham, Dorchester and Worcester.

For those soldiers the war is over, at least for now.

Local Guard members from Quincy and the South Shore were in those units and they will be honored next Tuesday by the City Council.

Council President Kevin Coughlin and councillors will salute the returning military and offer prayers for the 1899 members of the Massachusetts Guard who are still abroad and still in danger.

Among the returning military were Sgt. Joseph Zero of Quincy who served in Afghanistan and Sgt. Jimmy Lok of Randolph who served in Iraq.

Both have close Quincy ties as Zero is the son-in-law of City Clerk Joseph Shea and Lok is engaged to Coughlin's daughter Maria.

Coughlin and his family joined Lok's friends and family at the Armory on Victory Road, Dorchester, and welcomed the 164th Transportation Battalion back to Massachusetts.

"There was no better gift than their safe return," Coughlin said last week during the city's mid-term ceremonies.

Coughlin recalled that the lead officer read the roll call and declared, "All soldiers present and accounted for."

The words meant every soldier returned with that unit; no one was left behind.

From Lok's first stint in 2003 to his third call-up last year, he has seen the beginning and the beginning of the end of the United States' action in Iraq.

During Lok's first tour in 2003, Saddam Hussein was found and arrested.

"When they found him in the spider hole, I was in Iraq,' said Lok who, also, witnessed bloodshed and casualties during previous deployments.

His unit scouted for I.E.D.'s or roadside bombs to protect the military convoys.

Lok and other unit members also interacted with Iraqi nationals, sharing supplies, candy and water and playing soccer with youngsters.

On his second tour in 2005, some 70 to 100 insurgents attacked his base from outside the wire with "mortar rounds and rockets."

Lok was commended for his bravery during that attack which lasted over two hours and injured at least seven soldiers.

During this last tour, his unit packed up military equipment and engaged in the "largest drawdown (of military equipment) since World War II."

Both Lok and Sgt. Zero chose the National Guard for their careers with Lok already serving 17 years and Zero ten. Zero is assigned to G.Co.186BSB.

During his deployment, Zero, also, witnessed bloodshed One member of his unit was killed when a convoy was hit with an I.E.D.

In past wars and conflicts, American soldiers suffered the cold winters of Europe and the jungles of Southeast Asia. For these soldiers in the desert sands, heat was a second enemy.

"It got to 100, 120, 130 degrees," Lok said.

But many of these soldiers had access to technology only dreamed of by soldiers of the past.

They could see and talk to loved ones and friends while serving on the frontlines.

Many were outfitted with cell phones for chats with home and many, like Lok, had access to webcams for face-to-face visits to the kitchen, the living room and the nursery.

During this last assignment, Lok not only talked to his fiancé Maria Coughlin but they saw each other three to four times a week across an eight-hour time zone.

"It was great we were able to use that," Maria Coughlin said of her frequent face-to-fact chats with Lok. She said she couldn't imagine what it was like waiting "by the door" for letters from loved ones on the battlefield.

The technology is good and bad, according to Zero who said the folks at home, also, become more aware of dangers and problems facing the soldiers.

Zero, also, kept in touch with his wife Amy and two children, Anthony, 10 and Christina, 7, via a webcam.

Lok and Maria, a 3rd grade teacher at Catholic Academy, Quincy, plan an August wedding.

Both Lok and Zero will return to their National Guard positions after their current leave.

Louis' Crossing Reopens For Business

The restaurant Louis' Crossing, a Houghs Neck landmark since 1933, has reopened for business after briefly closing its doors.

Owner John Boyd told the Board of License Commissioners last Tuesday afternoon that he would be paying delinquent real estate taxes that were owed over the next couple of days. The taxes had to be paid before the restaurant's liquor license could be renewed.

"I know what's required and I'm ready to do it, but not now," said Boyd.

License Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea said he had been in contact with Boyd and that the city had a long, positive relationship with the family at the location. Shea went on to say the state has strict laws when it comes to issuing liquor licenses and had been fielding calls from other business owners who have paid for their license.

The deadline for the 2011 liquor license applications, which cost $2,000, was Dec. 31.

"I don't take any pleasure in this," said Shea. "This is new to me. We're bending over backwards to resolve this issue. I feel administratively that we don't need another meeting unless the solicitor says so."

The popular restaurant is located at 1269 Sea St.

Liquor licenses for both the Outback Steak House and the Wine Messenger were not renewed in 2010 when each went out of business, while the licenses for the V.F.W. and American Legion Post were cancelled.

Film Screening Tonight At Library

The 2009 UK-USA comedy-drama "Bomber" will be screened tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Alistar and Valerie have been planning a special trip to Germany for a very long time. When their son Ross stops by the house to send them off, happenstance turns into a impromptu family road trip of the most tortuous kind.

The 84-minute movie is in English. The film is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Jan. 4 at approximately 4 p.m., Officers David Zupkofska and Steve Kelly were dispatched to Elm Street regarding an unwanted grandson who was in the hallway. This property is a multi family dwelling with six units, three on each side.

LT. DAN MINTON

Due to past problems, the property owner took steps to prevent outsiders from entering the building by having locks on the main exterior doors. As the officers were en route, the dispatcher informed them that the grandson is 14 years old, ran away from a DCF home and there may be a warrant. Upon arrival, Officer Kelly went to the side door while Officer Zupkofska walked around to the rear door.

Officer Zupkofska looked inside the glass door and saw four people inside the hall, with one of them trying to hide by crouching down. The door was locked so the officer instructed them to open the door. At this time, one male suspect (#1), 14 years of age, fled up the stairs while a second male suspect (#2), 18 years old, fiddled with the door lock. As Officer Zupkofska yelled to Officer Kelly for assistance, suspect #1 ran out a side door, immediately chased by Officer Kelly. Suspect #2 did not unlock the door until suspect #1 escaped, then opened the door.

Officer Zupkofska questioned the three remaining suspects in the hallway if they lived there, while additional units responded to assist Officer Kelly in the chase. The three suspects said that they did not live there, so they were asked for identification. One female suspect provided her information without incident. Suspect #2 outright stated that he was not giving his information. When advised that he was not a tenant of the building and he was trespassing or he possibly committed a break to gain access to the building, suspect #2 provided a Quincy High School Identification Card.

The third suspect, a male, also cooperated. While determining their identification and warrant status, Officer Kelly requested assistance via the radio for an ambulance on High School Avenue. Once the three suspects checked out (not having any warrants) and due to Officer Kelly's call for help, Officer Zupkofska told the three suspects to leave. Just as they did, one of the apartment doors opened and a female told the officer that she was the grandmother who called on her grandson, wanted by DCF.

Officer Zupkofska proceeded to Officer Kelly's location and learned that the suspect (#1) jumped over a fence and ran off. Officer Kelly attempted to scale the six-foot chain link fence, sustained cuts on his hands from the top of the fence. He was treated at the scene by Fallon ambulance, who provided him with gauze wraps and subsequently received stitches on both hands.

Officer Kelly relayed that two males fled out of the side of the building and ran up Elm Street through traffic, dodging cars towards Hancock Street. He provided a thorough description of the two suspects.

Officer Kelly got into his cruiser and searched the general area, located one of the youths who had removed his blue sweatshirt and was now walking with it in his hand. As Officer Kelly approached in the cruiser, the suspect (#1) ran around the side of the fire headquarters, discarded his blue sweatshirt, hopped the fence, ran around a home and was apprehended in a yard on High School Ave., by Officer Kelly. Officer Kelly retraced the path the male took and located a baggie with what he believed to be possible marijuana residue.

This male suspect provided a name, but had no identification. Officer Bill O'Neil detained this suspect while officers continued their search. As Officers Zupkofska and Kelly conferred, they observed suspect #2 again, along with the other occupants who were in the hallway, now standing in the street watching.

Suspect #2 was standing in the middle of High School Avenue and there was a car behind him waiting for him to move. Officer Kelly approached #2 to move along, but instead of heeding this simple request, suspect #2 called Officer Kelly "a f@#$%^&." The other two suspects were cooperative and walked away.

Suspect #2 then started gesturing, placing his hands up in the air in front of him as if challenging the officers to fight. Officer Zupkofska walked up to suspect #2 and told him he was under arrest for being a disorderly person. After a brief struggle and assistance from Officer O'Neil, the suspect was handcuffed.

Suspect #1, being detained by Officer O'Neil, was brought back to the apartment where his grandmother lived. She went out to the cruiser, confirmed that she knew the name provided by the suspect, but this was not that person – it was her grandson.

The 14 year old was placed under arrest for a parole violation warrant issued by DYS, and charged with "Trespassing, Disorderly and Interfering with Police." Suspect #2, a Quincy resident recently released from jail, was charged with "Trespassing, Impeding A Police Officer, and Disorderly Person. Nice Work!

COLD-WEATHER Car Care

AAA Offers Easy-To-Follow Wintering Motoring Advice

Winter driving is tough on motorists and vehicles. To help drivers make it through the toughest winter conditions, AAA Southern New England offers the following tips:

Charge!! - Cold weather is tough on batteries. At zero degrees, a car's battery loses about 60 percent of its strength. At a comparatively mild 32 degrees, a battery is 35 percent weaker. Keeping battery terminals clean helps, but a battery performance test performed by a qualified technician will help determine whether a car's battery is strong enough for winter starts.

Get a Grip - Make sure your car is equipped with tires that are able to handle New England's winter weather.

For most motorists, all-season tires are generally adequate. Although for maximum traction for both starting and stopping or in more northern or mountainous regions, switching to snow tires may be needed

If you are using snow tires on a front-wheel-drive or all-wheel-drive vehicle, four snow tires are required. Modern snow tires have changed, Today's snow tires are more about complex rubber compounds that provide traction in cold weather than heavy/noisy snow tires of years ago.

See and Be Seen - Danger must be seen to be avoided. Driving with a snow-covered windshield, windows, side-view mirrors or lights invites a crash.

Clear windows, mirrors and lights with an ice scraper, brush or spray de-icer. Make certain windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order and that washer reservoirs are filled with no-freeze windshield washer fluid.

Remember to clean snow off the roof of the vehicle. Consider switching to a winter wiper blade that helps prevent ice and snow from building up on the blades.

Slippery When Wet - In temperatures at or just above 32 degrees, a thin layer of water can cover the ice, causing extremely slippery conditions. The distance needed to stop on ice at 32 degrees is twice as long as at zero degrees. This makes intersections, where idling vehicles can cause melting extremely dangerous during winter travel.

Keep Your Engine Cool - Make certain cooling system antifreeze is mixed with an equal portion of water for maximum protection.

Fast Solution - A squirt of de-icer spray is a quick method to overcome frozen door locks. Once thawed, lubricate the lock with silicone or lightweight oil – avoid penetrating oils.

Air It Out - Don't let frigid temperatures tempt you into starting your car in a closed garage or idling your engine for long periods with the windows closed. Carbon monoxide, present in exhaust fumes, is almost impossible to detect and can be fatal when breathed in a confined area.

Finish Up - Road salt, slush and grime are especially hard on a car's finish. To help prevent rust and paint damage, keep cars washed and waxed. A full or self-service car wash makes the job easier when temperatures are low.

Conservation Should Be Top Of Mind

As gasoline prices continue to rise, motorists need to think about fuel conservation, says AAA Southern New England.

In the winter it is easy to get in a daily habit of warming up your car. Although you may be more comfortable getting into a warm car, it does nothing for the car. According to the Consumer Energy Center, for every two minutes a car is idling, it uses the same amount of fuel it takes to go about one mile. Even in winter, you don't need to let your car sit and idle for ten minutes to "warm it up" when 30 second will do. Having a remote car starter is certainly a convenience, but before you push the button to start the car, consider the fuel that will be wasted.

Saving fuel doesn't stop with reducing or eliminating idling. The most significant action you can take to improve fuel economy is by paying attention to your driving habits. According to the website www.fueleconomy.gov, aggressive driving (speeding, rapid acceleration and braking) waste gas. Jackrabbit starts and aggressive driving can lower you gas mileage by 33 percent at highway speeds and by five percent around town. Speeding also wastes gas. Although different engines and different vehicles will reach their optimal fuel economy at different speeds, you can assume that each 5 miles per hour you drive over 60 mph is like paying an additional 24 cents per gallon for gas.

Just because the weather has gotten cold isn't an excuse to ignore the air pressure in the vehicle's tires. Tire pressure should be checked at least once per month. Properly inflated tires will give your vehicle better traction in the snow as well as better fuel economy.

If you ski, having a ski rack or storage box on the roof of your vehicle is a great way to carry your equipment, but these boxes can also cause a substantial drop in mileage when driving on the highway. A large cargo box can reduce fuel economy in some cases by up to 20 percent. Even the cross bars on a roof rack can reduce fuel economy by 1-2 percent. When you don't need the storage box or cargo rack, remove it to restore your vehicle's fuel economy.

Even the best maintained vehicle will see a decline in fuel economy in the winter. This has to do with the blend of gasoline that allows for easier starting when the temperature drops. But with a little thought and a little restraint, you can do your part to maximize the fuel economy of your vehicle.

Emergency Equipment Kit

Because even the best maintained vehicles can fall victim to frigid winter weather, AAA recommends every vehicle carry the following items to ensure safe winter travel:

Flashlight - A working flashlight should be stored where the driver can access it without leaving the vehicle. That will enable the motorist to see obstacles and be seen by other drivers when exiting the vehicle in an emergency. Also carry spare batteries.

Lock De-Icer – In a short period of time, lock de-icer can thaw frozen locks on your vehicle. A reminder, though – make sure to keep the de-icer with you or in your home so that it's not locked inside the vehicle when you need it.

Jumper Cables - Jumper cables can be an essential tool for starting vehicles with weak or dead batteries, but they should only be used by individuals familiar with the proper safety precautions. Vehicle owner's manuals should be consulted for instructions.

Abrasive Material - Sand or non-clumping cat litter can be spread under the wheels to improve traction when a vehicle becomes stuck in snow or ice. Special traction mats and even floor mats also can be used for this purpose.

Shovel - A small shovel can be used to carefully dig snow away from the wheels.

Warning Devices - Flares or reflective triangles alert other motorists that you are broken down or stuck and helps give them enough time to slow down in order to pass safely.

Blankets - Cold weather can quickly turn an inconvenient breakdown into a life-threatening situation. Blankets can provide valuable protection against the cold and can help keep you comfortable until help arrives. Floor mats and newspapers can also be used to provide insulation in emergencies.

Snacks, water and a small quantity of necessary medications can make a breakdown more bearable.

Gas Prices Up Two Cents, Says AAA

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are up for the sixth consecutive week, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's Jan. 10 survey of prices in Massachusetts found self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $3.08⁹ per gallon, two cents more than last week. The current price is even with the national average for self serve unleaded of $3.08. A year ago at this time the Massachusetts average price was $2.70.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 30 cents, from a low of $2.97 to a high of $3.27. AAA advises motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area, and to make sure they and their passengers buckle up — every time.

Find the most up-to-date local gas prices with the AAA Fuel Finder by logging onto AAA.com and clicking on Gas Saving Tips & Tools. AAA members can also obtain a copy of the Gas Watcher's Guide at their local AAA Southern New England office.

AAA Fuel Saving Tip of the Week

Be gentle on the pedals. One of the easiest and most effective ways to conserve fuel is to change driving styles. Instead of making quick starts and sudden stops, go easy on both pedals. Aggressive driving can lower a car's fuel economy by up to 33 percent.

Quincy's Robert Hudson City's Newest Eagle Scout

By JOE REARDON

Robert Hudson joined Cub Scouts as a 5 year old in the first grade when his mother, Karen, decided it would be an exciting organization for a youngster to try out. At the time, Hudson was shy and for the most part, kept to himself.

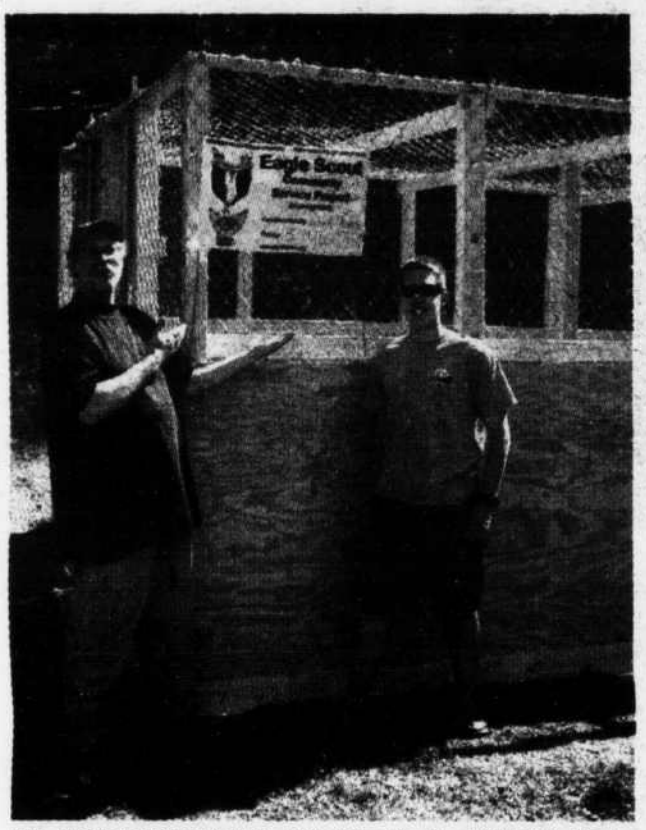
It didn't take long, though, before Hudson realized he'd found his niche and the Saint John's Pack 42 became a second home for him.

"When I joined I was the first Tiger Cub," said Hudson, now 17. "The next year my friends joined and a whole lot others too. It's not always the coolest thing, but I really enjoyed it. Scouting has definitely helped me become a leader and balance my time with other activities."

That first day of scouts feels like another lifetime now to the North Quincy High senior. On Sunday, Hudson achieved the highest honor in scouting when he ascended to the prestigious rank of Eagle Scout.

Hudson remembers focusing on becoming an Eagle Scout on another milestone day of his scouting career as a fifth-grade 10 year old "It became a goal at my Arrow of Lights ceremony," said Hudson. "It's the last thing you do before you become a Boy Scout."

The project he conjured up to earn his Eagle Scout status required months of work in planning alone. Both the preparation and the actual building of a raccoon enclosure at the New England Wildlife Center in Weymouth were extensive.



Hudson decided to focus on that project when a raccoon was struck by a car in front of his home and he brought the babies to the wildlife center. A veterinarian, who Hudson spoke with, told him the center needed a raccoon pen to hold them during their transition period back into the wild. With those words Hudson had his project.

The logistics of the 12x22x8-foot tall structure of wood, covered with chain link fencing, had to be hammered out, keeping the enclosure the proper distance away from nearby marshlands, per order of the Weymouth Conservation Committee.

A 13-inch deep trench was dug around the area and filled with 3,000 pounds of cement, donated by Grazia-no Concrete of Braintree, to prohibit the raccoons from escaping the structure.

It took Hudson and 34 scouts, friends, including North Quincy High carpentry teacher Robert Burke, 166 man-hours, working every weekend for a month to complete the structure. The final cost was $1,557, $1,323 of which came in the form of donations.

Hudson said the final product was well worth the effort. "We were pretty happy with the finished result," he said.

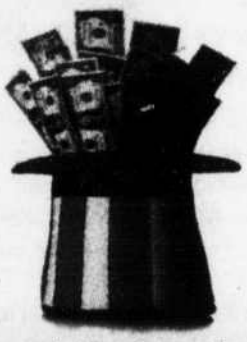
Hudson is in the twilight of his Boy Scout career, but still has some goals he'd like to reach before he turns 18. He's already accumulated an impressive 66 merit badges and wants to earn the final nine. Hudson has already earned three of the four badges that were brought back as part of the 100-year anniversary of scouting.

Scouts has left Hudson with friends, confidence, character and the knowledge to lead others. "I really liked being with my friends and it taught me a lot about character and morals," he said. "It also gave me role models."

Hudson's most notable role model is Ray Theberg, the scoutmaster of Troop 242. "He told me to keep my goals in sight," said Hudson. "He also told me I could accomplish anything I wanted to."

As an Eagle Scout, Hudson recognizes his responsibility and the realization that he has become a role model for the younger scouts. It's not a role he takes lightly. "They (scouts) generally go to the older scouts because they've done everything before.

"Even if they're frustrated because of things they don't know, you reinforce the things they do know. If you take five minutes you can usually explain it to them."



With college now in the foreseeable future, Hudson is looking to bring aspects of scouting with him to succeed both in school and whatever life throws his way. He has narrowed his choices to UMass-Lowell, Georgia Tech, Wentworth and the University of Central Florida, where he plans on majoring in mechanical engineering.

Scouting will be taking a back seat to college, but Hudson won't be straying far from it. "I always want to be involved in scouting, whether it's my own kids or other kids," Hudson said.

New England Sports History, Trivia Topic For Quincy Lions Club Luncheon Jan. 20

The history of New England's most popular spots franchises will be the topic of a presentation at the next luncheon meeting of The Quincy Lions Club Thursday, Jan. 20 at noon at The Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd., Quincy.

Michael King, a Quincy native and self-proclaimed "sports archaeologist," will discuss the history of the Red Sox and the New England Patriots, offering fun trivia on both beloved teams.

King's presentation will draw from his new book on the New England Patriots. Autographed copies of the book will be available at the luncheon.

Tickets for the luncheon are $13.50 for Lions Club members, $20 for non-members.

For tickets, call Jennifer Logue at 617-429-3080.

Tickets may also be purchased on line by visiting www.quincylionsclub.org and clicking on the "donate" button.

Two Quincy Students On Keene State Dean's List

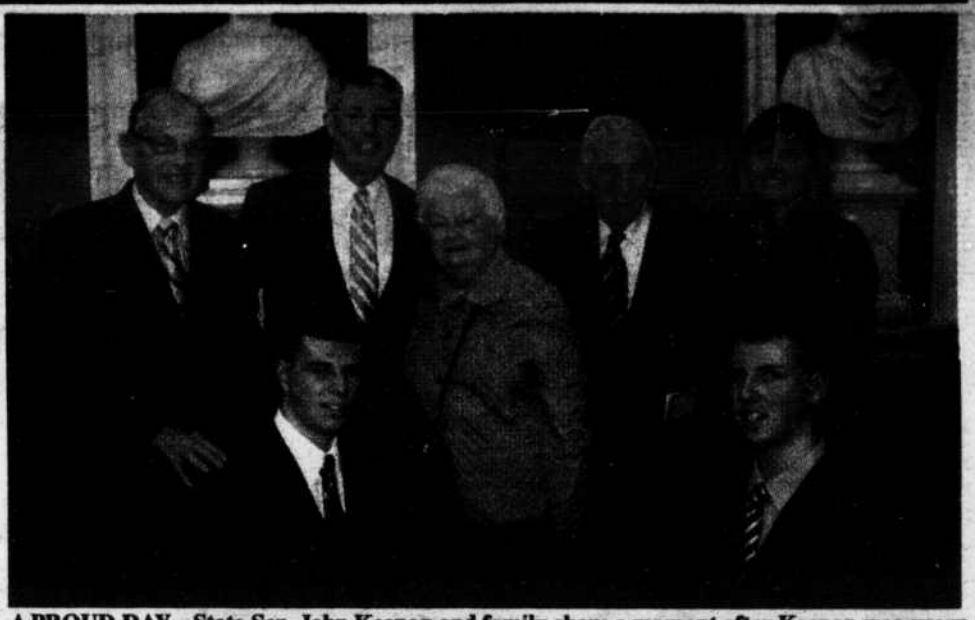
Two Quincy residents have been named to the Dean's List at Keene State College for the fall semester.

They are:

Allison Marie Russell of Quincy and Megan Ellen Therrien of North Quincy.

Keenan Sworn-In As State Senator For Norfolk & Plymouth District

Joined by his family, friends and new colleagues, State Senator John F. Keenan was officially sworn-in to the Massachusetts State Senate Jan. 5, pledging to partner with local communities and to continue providing exemplary constituent services to the residents of Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, Quincy and Rockland.



Keenan has served as a Quincy city councillor-at-large for the past eight years, including seven years as chairman of the council's Finance Committee. He succeeds Michael W. Morrissey, who was elected in November as Norfolk County District Attorney.

"Being elected state senator is both a great honor and tremendous responsibility," said Keenan. "Our Commonwealth is facing a number of major challenges that will require hard work and tough choices to address. My pledge has been and remains to make decisions only in the best interest of my district."

Sen. Keenan's said his top priorities include advancing legislation relative to the $1.3 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project, which will bring thousands of jobs and new opportunities for economic development to the city and surrounding communities, authoring measures to further reform the Commonwealth's pension system, protecting local aid to communities, along with working with local officials and residents to address the issues facing the communities in the district.

"We cannot continue to force our cities and towns and critical social service programs to bear the brunt of our fiscal problems," Keenan added. "We need to balance our budget responsibly, grow jobs, protect our most vulnerable populations and support our communities."

Keenan and his staff can be reached at his State House office by phone at (617) 722-1494 and by e-mail at John.Keenan@masenate.gov.

A PROUD DAY – State Sen. John Keenan and family share a moment after Keenan was sworn in as the new state senator for the Norfolk & Plymouth District which includes Quincy. Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Expands Internet Index

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces a major historical expansion of the internet accessible land records research available at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

This ongoing project has now extended and made available all recorded land indices back to 1900.

"Recorded land records are referenced by a book and page number based on the traditional Common Law recording system. This project enhances our internet accessible library and provides a valuable online researching tool," O'Donnell said. "Both the practitioner and consumer will find this is a real benefit as indexing by name is the primary way to locate the appropriate book and page reference."

O'Donnell praised the Registry staff on the diligence needed to review the individual book and page entries.

"Many of the older index records contain phonetic or generic spellings for last names so a thorough review was needed to modernize the electronic index using exact spellings," he said.

The next phase of the expansion will be to index the handwritten, pre-1900 records expected to take the online indexing capacity back to inception of Norfolk County in 1793.

"Our goals are to improve the usefulness of the system for both real estate professionals and the general public and to make the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds records available in the homes, municipalities and businesses of Norfolk County," O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk Registry's internet imaging library now includes every recorded document from over 28,000 volumes since the Registry's inception on Sept. 3, 1793, and over 1.2 million documents filed in Norfolk County's Land Court District dating back to 1901.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

To contact the Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6101 or visit at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Easy Ways To Save Water

(NAPSA)-Using water wisely can save homeowners money, reduce energy costs and help protect the planet.

Here are a few easy conservation steps you can take:

1. Check for leaks. Even the smallest leak from a worn faucet washer can waste gallons of water every day. You can also use your water meter to check for hidden leaks. Just read the water meter before and after a time when no water is being used. If the meter shows water has been used, there is a leak. Talk to your plumber.

2. Only use your dishwasher and clothes washer when you have a full load. Washing smaller loads of laundry can use twice as much water per pound of laundry.

3. When you wash dishes, don't let the water run to rinse them. Fill a second sink with clear water for rinsing. Don't rinse dishes before loading in the dishwasher.

4. Install water-saving showerheads. A four-minute shower can use up to 40 gallons of water, and while you can take shorter showers, you can also save water with a low-flow showerhead.

Speakman has engineered several low-flow showerheads to meet LEED and WaterSense standards. The company's eco showerheads are designed to conserve water while still providing a full, satisfying spray to the user.

With the company's low-flow showerheads, you can save more than 2,300 gallons per year. Since this also reduces demands on water heaters, households will also save energy.

All products that bear the WaterSense label are tested and certified by an approved third- party laboratory to ensure they meet EPA criteria. For example, showerheads that earn the WaterSense label must use no more than 2.0 gallons per minute.

5. Turn off the tap after wetting your toothbrush. In general, any time water is running, you are wasting it. That includes shaving and cooling water to drink.

Quincy Community Action Programs Home Buyer Education Series

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will offer a free, First-Time Home Buyers Workshop series consisting of two sessions.

The sessions are scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 29 and Feb. 5 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, Quincy Center.

Attendance at both sessions is required in order to receive a certificate.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the homebuying process. Real estate professionals will discuss topics ranging from mortgages to home insurance.

In addition, participants who complete the 10-hour program may be eligible for downpayment/closing cost assistance of up to $10,000 and for the Soft Second program.

Participants may also use their Certificate of Completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnership.

Registration is underway. For more information about the program and/or to register for the workshop, contact Sandy Perkins, QCAP's Housing Assistant, at 617-657-5327.

North Quincy Currently In First Place In Patriot League With 4-1-2 Record

NQ Red Raiders Score Big Win Over Scituate, 3-1

THE NORTH QUINCY RED RAIDERS are coming together as a team this winter as is evident by its 4-1-2 overall record including an impressive 2-0-2 record in the Patriot League games. The Red Raiders earned as big victory over Scituate HS, 3-1, on Jan. 8 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

By SEAN BRENNAN

The turning point of Saturday's Patriot League showdown versus high-powered Scituate High School came just two minutes after the Sailors had knotted the score at 1-1 with a tinge over six minutes left in regulation.

North Quincy (4-1-2, 2-0-2), which up until that point held a 1-0 advantage, took umbrage to the post-goal, bench fly-by celebration by the Scituate scorer. But instead of taking their collective frustration out in penalty minutes, the Red Raiders buckled down and got payback the right way by playing hard and causing traffic in front of the Sailors' goal.

The result was a game-winning tally from senior forward Dereck Graham. After the Red Raiders had retaken the lead, Scituate was whistled for two penalties (slashing and roughing) and senior defenseman Tim Marks responded with a power-play goal to close out the scoring at 3-1.

The victory was large. In the broader picture it gives first-place North Quincy an early leg up in the race for the Patriot League championship. But for Head Coach Matt Gibbons, the win, more importantly, showed him that his team is buying into the team first concept always looking to improve and get better game-to-game.

"We should have won against Silver Lake the game before and I felt like we had left a point out there," he said in reference to North Quincy's 2-2-tie against the Lakers on Jan. 5. "We had two solid practices on Thursday and Friday and we really came to play against Scituate."

The Raiders struck first against the Sailors before anyone really had the chance to settle into their seats. Just eleven seconds into the first period, sophomore forward Nick McGaughey put North Quincy up 1-0. The hosts would maintain this one-goal advantage up until Scituate evened the game at 1-1 late in the third period.

Junior goaltender James Dunn (1.70 goals against average on the season) made several quality saves in the second period to keep Scituate off the scoreboard.

The late Sailors' goal woke the North Quincy bench up and instead of responding with undisciplined play, the team took it to Scituate and, in the process, showed a maturity that comes with having a team that is loaded with leadership and with talent up-and-down the lineup.

"That goal woke the guys up," said Gibbons. "Sometimes you need a spark to get yourself back into the game. That did it as Dereck scored that game-winner minutes later. The coaching staff talks to the team all the time about playing with discipline in the third quarter, which has been a problem for us in some games this year.

"This game proved to me that we can play a disciplined game for all three periods. It was a big win for the team in that respect."

Through seven games and with thirteen games remaining on the schedule, North Quincy is only two victories shy of equaling last year's win total; the Red Raiders finished a disappointing 2009-2010 at 6-12-2. The number one factor for this improvement has been evenly placed contributions from player one down to player nineteen on this year's roster.

Star forward Brendan Glynn (nine points in seven games) is North Quincy's most explosive player and he is the skater that all opponents tend to key on defensively, but, unlike last year, the Red Raiders are getting scoring output from every line and, as an added bonus, considerable offensive production from its defensive core.

Graham already has seven points (three goals) while Marks has scored three goals. Overall, defensemen Marks, Michael Adduci, Nick Furey, Rudy Tryon and James Doherty have produced twelve points; a high number for a unit whose main purpose is to shut teams down.

"This season we are getting contributions from everyone not just Brendan," Gibbons stated. "Last year if he didn't score we didn't win. He has been great so far but the bonus is that everybody is chipping in including our defensemen who have already put up twelve points through seven games."

With the offense and defense firing on all cylinders, the goaltending of junior James Dunn may be the story of the early season schedule. Dunn, as was noted above, is sizzling right now between the pipes. His 1.70 GAA is near the top of the Patriot League and his confidence in net has been a revelation.

"James is playing with confidence," said Gibbons. "He doesn't seem to be fighting the puck. He has also been vocal with the defense, setting up the play in front of him."

Gibbons is happy with his team's start, but the goal this winter wasn't to start fast and then fade away. It is to be playing good hockey no matter the opponent.

"We may have been the only ones to think that we could compete for a league championship," he said. "It has been a good start, but we have played games where we felt like we left a point or two on the ice. The Scituate game was a huge win for us because it really showed me that these guys are buying into what we are coaching them. They came out and responded with a victory after a tough game against Silver Lake."

Notes: North Quincy watched as Silver Lake opened up a 2-0-second period lead on Jan. 5. The Raiders' Nick McGaughey scored on a power play late in the second before Tim Marks knotted it at 2-2 with five minutes left in the game... North Quincy traveled to Brockton HS on Wednesday... The team will host Whitman-Hanson HS at 8:20 p.m. on Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena... A home game versus Hanover HS is scheduled for Jan. 19 at 6:10 p.m.

Team 3-1-1 Over Its Last Five Games

Q/NQ Hockey Surprising Opponents

By JOE REARDON

The Q/NQ girls' hockey team took a break from its recent 3-1-1 stretch to concentrate on tightening up play at both ends of the ice. With the team currently on a strong roll, the populous would say the squad would benefit more with a slew of games, taking advantage of the newly found momentum.

Head coach Dan McLean thinks otherwise.

McLean still sees holes in the team's overall play that he hopes can be corrected with a few consecutive practices on the ice before its Jan. 15 contest against Dover-Sherborn.

"We're really stressing defense," he said. "There's no checking in girls hockey so if someone gets moving they're very hard to stop. The offense is too close to the net. I tell the girls that when you're too close to the net you don't have as much of the net to shoot on.

"Now it comes down to knowing where your teammate is," said McLean. "It's nice to know where they are without having to look."

Q/NQ is coming off a 3-0 loss against a tough Medfield team Saturday that is currently white-hot at 6-0 on the season. McLean was happy with his team's effort and said the score didn't reflect how well Q/NQ played. He knows the team will have to right itself and step up against the Medfields of the state when tourney time rolls around.

"They capitalized on some of our mistakes," said McLean. "We beat ourselves."

The coach was more pleased with how the squad played in its loss to Medfield than last Wednesday's sluggish 2-2 tie against Westwood. Simply put, Q/NQ let one get away.

Junior co-captain Christina Walsh's second tally of the game with 4:19 made it 2-2. The game wouldn't have been that close without co-captain Shannon Coleman between the posts. "She has kept us in most of these games," said McLean. "She's very, very good."

Q/NQ started its three-win run on Dec. 20 with an 8-1 rout of Brookline. The offense against the Warriors was spread out with freshman Natalie O'Donovan being the lone multiple goal scorer with a pair of tallies. Q/NQ had the game very much in the bag after banging home four first-period goals.

Q/NQ probably scored its biggest win of the season in its next game, a 2-1 thriller over a very good Franklin squad. O'Donovan and Jamie Shaughnessy had the tallies this time around, but the real key to the win was Coleman's 24 saves in net.

McLean had planned to use back-up Erin McGinnis more in goal, but his junior goaltender has been battling a tenacious bout with the flew that she has been unable to shake. "She's going to be my starter next year so I want her to play in some pressure situations," McLean said.

The scoring was once again spread across the lineup in the team's third win of the season over Boston Latin. Kennedy Harding blasted home a pair of goals in Q/NQ's easy 5-2 win.

McLean believes teams are taking Q/NQ somewhat lightly because the squad hasn't had much success in recent seasons. "I told my girls to be ready," said McLean. "I think these teams go into games with us thinking it's going to be a cakewalk. It is what it is."

N. Quincy Hockey Fundraiser

The North Quincy boys hockey program will host a Bowl-to-Puck fundraising event; an evening bowling tournament to be held Jan. 22 from 8-11 p.m. at O'Lindy's on Quincy Avenue.

The bowling tournament will consist of teams of four with each foursome bowling two strings – the highest team score moves on.

Additional teams are still needed and the cost is $100 per team. There will also be cash prizes, raffle prizes and a 50/50 raffle. Spectators are welcome to attend.

There is an after-party scheduled at the Stadium Sports Bar & Grill located at 1495 Hancock Street.

The money raised will go directly to support the NQHS hockey program.

Interested teams need to send their request to nqhockey@hotmail.com.

NQ Basketball Fundraiser

The North Quincy boys basketball program will host a Super Bowl-themed Meat Raffle, to benefit the NQHS basketball program, on Jan. 22 from 2-4 p.m. at Malachy's Saloon, 51 Granite St., Quincy.

The available meat trays will be provided by Prevites.

Quincy Is 6-2 Overall, 3-1 In The Patriot League

Impressive Presidents Are On The March To Tourney

By SEAN BRENNAN

Eight games into the 2011 season, the girls' basketball team at Quincy High School is reminding the rest of the Patriot League, that this winter, they mean business.

Despite dropping a league showdown to Scituate High School last Friday by a score of 68-61; the Presidents are already on the path to state tournament qualification. Sitting at 6-2 overall and 3-1 in the Patriot League, Quincy is on a steady pace to not only reach the ten-win playoff cutoff, but possibly, challenge for a league title, or at the least grab a high seed come tournament time.

This success can be attributed to several factors. At the top of the list is Quincy's loaded and experienced roster, which consists of four quality seniors and seven productive juniors.

For a team with tournament aspirations, a senior class that includes guards Kori Sorensen and Christina Cahill and forwards Stella Edwards and Nelida Rodriguez provides a solid foundation.

Sorensen is a star. She is a four-year varsity player who brings energy and enthusiasm to the parquet each and every game. It doesn't hurt that she is one of the best shooters to come through the program in years. She is a fearless competitor who plays the game with an edge; she is a player who isn't afraid of the big moment.

"Kori is a leader," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch. "She is a rock in terms of leadership. A four-year varsity player, Kori never blinks and she is willing to take charge when things start going in the wrong direction."

"She is our best outside shooter," continued Bretsch. "You can always count on her to make the right decision."

Sorensen almost single-handily lifted Quincy by league-leading Scituate (7-0, 4-0). Her 26-point effort, including five three-pointers, kept the Presidents within striking distance of one of the better teams on the South Shore.

Cahill, Edwards and Rodriguez also play important supporting roles for QHS.

Cahill, a second-year player, is the team's backup point guard; Edwards provides quality minutes off the bench as a forward/swing player, and Rodriquez, a first-year forward, has done an impressive job working with her teammates and contributing on the court when called upon.

"These three all bring senior leadership to the team," said Brestch. "They each contribute in their own way. Stella has been giving us some great minutes as our swing player, Christina is doing a nice job as one of our backup guards and Nelly works so well with her teammates and contributes where she can."

The guard position in basketball usually determines success. Quincy, in that respect, hit the lottery. Besides Sorensen, two juniors have already established themselves as go-to-players.

Juli Tomer and Nicole Lamie are providing quality minutes for QHS this winter. Tomer, a defense star, is a third-year varsity player while Lamie is making the most of her opportunities playing the majority of her time at the point guard position.

"Juli is taking over the role of our speed guard," said Bretsch. "She is playing solid defense and has been a factor in running our fast break offense."

"Nicole has been scoring and she is really adding to our offense," continue Bretsch. "Playing mostly at point guard, she is making the most of her opportunity."

Lamie, earlier this season, had a four-game stretch where she went off for point totals of 18-13-11-12-points.

The Presidents' perimeter game is stacked; yet, the team's best all-around player resides in the paint with her back to the basket. Junior center Kiley McDonald is a matchup nightmare. Her ability to score from almost anywhere inside the three-point line opens up shooting lanes for Sorensen, Lamie and Tomer while also leaving the rest of the front-line core open to get clean looks at the hoop.

McDonald had her best game against Weymouth HS in the semifinals of the Abigail Adams Basketball Classic; she finished that contest with 22 points and 16 rebounds.

"Kiley gives us inside scoring and her presence forces defenses to always be aware of where she is on the court, which opens up scoring lanes for the guards and the other forwards," said Bretsch. "Only a junior, she is a rock in regards to leadership. She is a take charge type of player."

Joining forces with McDonald down low is junior forward Katy Lowry. A tremendous athlete, Lowry is making a name for herself as a defensive stalwart and rebounding machine; she finished the Weymouth game with 12 boards.

"Katy gives us a little bit of everything," stated her coach. "She is hardworking, disciplined and patient when playing defense and she is quickly turning herself into our stopper."

Junior Maria Berberan, the team's backup center, set a school-record with nine blocks versus Hanover HS and scored ten points in a tilt against Pembroke HS. Junior guards Emily Nguyen and Victoria Wallace are providing sparks off the bench through the early part of the schedule.

"Our bench offers me some great depth," Bretsch said. "We have a deep team."

By the start of next week, Quincy will have played six Patriot League games (the team hosted Middleboro HS on Tuesday and plays at Silver Lake HS on Friday). It is a challenging league and balanced, which means every game is going to be highly contested.

"If everyone is clicking, this league is really balanced," Bretsch stated. "It is tough competition, but I believe that the league title is still up for grabs."

The seven-point loss to Scituate slowed down Quincy's Patriot League title hopes, but, by no means was it the final straw; the Presidents, including this week, have ten additional league games remaining.

Lost in the shuffle of Quincy's hot start, Jeff Bretsch, currently coaching his tenth year as QHS head coach, picked up his 100th career victory on Dec. 21 following his team's 60-36-win over Hanover HS.

The milestone win gave way to reflection.

"It really is just another game," he said humbly, "but it is fun to look back. It gives me pause to remember all the players and different assistants I have had the pleasure of coaching and working with over the years. I can't believe it has been ten years.

"I am most happy about the program we have built. I owe a debt of gratitude to a lot of people."

HS Basketball Updates

The Lady Red Raiders have opened 2011 with consecutive losses to Patriot League opponents Silver Lake (Jan. 4) and Duxbury (Jan. 7).

Against the Green Dragons, North Quincy (0-7, 0-4) lost 55-34. Senior tri-captain Montana McBirney led all scorers with 18 points; she also finished with seven rebounds and five blocks. Junior guard Amber Jones contributed six points and four rebounds.

Senior tri-captain Emily Gray scored 16 points and collected six boards in North's 71-49-loss to Silver Lake. She was 4-for-7 from three-point range; McBirney scored 14 points and pulled down nine rebounds in defeat.

The boys' team at NQHS fell to Duxbury HS, 60-46, on Jan. 7. Junior Tim Liuzzo led the Red Raiders with 12 points.

QHS, behind 24 points and 18 rebounds, from senior forward Lukas McDonough, held on to defeat Scituate HS, 67-60, on Jan. 7. The Presidents (4-4, 3-1) also got contributions from seniors Brian Malger (15 points) and Kevin McDonagh (ten points).

QRD Announces Girls Soccer Skills Program

The Quincy Recreation Department announced this week that the department would once again conduct an eight-week Soccer Skills Program for girls as part of its evening recreation gym program.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, this program will feature activities and instruction to improve the fundamental soccer skills of each youngster. All participants will also take part in mini-games.

The program is offered on Monday nights starting Jan. 24 and there are two separate sessions; from 5-6:30 p.m. the program is for girls in Grades 5-7; the second session is from 6:30-8 p.m. and is for girls in Grades 8-11. The program will be conducted at the Broad Meadows Middle School gym.

Don Martin, head coach of the Quincy High School girl's soccer team, will direct the program. Members of the QRD staff will assist Martin.

Registration will be taken on the first night of the program and will be limited. After the registration period, participants will engage in their first night of training.

The program will conclude on March 21 and there will be no program on President's Day (Feb. 21.)

City Champions Crowned in Three Age Divisions

QRD Holds Annual Elks 'Hoop Shoot' Free Throw Contest

Coming off of a year that saw two Quincy youngsters become State Champions, six Quincy boys and girls have captured the title of City Champion and are moving to the Circle District Championship in the Elks National Free Throw Competition for 2011.

The winners are champions from three different age categories in the first step of the National Championship. This local event is sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 with supervision provided by the Quincy Recreation Department.

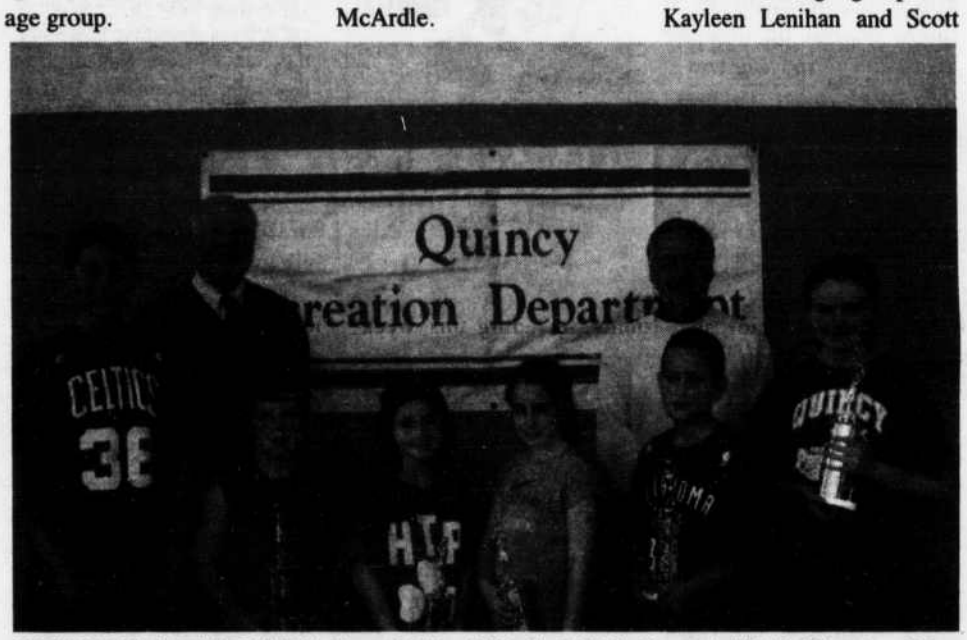
The champions for 2010-2011 are:

Katie North and Aaron O'Toole in the 8-9-age group; Liana Cunningham and Kyle Murphy in the 10-11-age group and Julianna Kane and Quinlan Evans in the 12-13-age group.

These City Champions will move ahead to compete in the District Hoop Shoot Event on Jan. 28 at the Marshfield High School gymnasium. This will be Quinlan Evans' second year representing the Quincy Lodge of Elks in the District competition.

Last year in the national competition, Kayleen Lenihan and Colin Evans won the state championship and advanced to the New England Regionals. Over three million boys and girls participate in the first level of shooting and the competition includes shooting 25 free throws with the best shooters moving on to the next round.

The Quincy Recreation Department directs this event in partnership with the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 under their Exalted Ruler Sean McArdle.



Quincy Lodge of Elks Hoops Shoot Chairman Ed Miller and Recreation Director Barry J. Welch presented the trophies to all the champions and finalists at the City Championship on Dec. 30.

According to Welch, "the free throw contest is just one example of the involvement of the Quincy Elks reaching into the community to contribute to the quality of life of youth growing up in Quincy. We are always thankful for their generosity. Participation and opportunity are key to this program. However, last year's championships were icing on the cake."

The runner-ups in each age category were Katelyn Fox and Michael Levine in the 8-9-age group; Bridget McDermott and Ryan Mele in the 10-11-age group and Kayleen Lenihan and Scott Mele in the 12-13-age group.

Other boys and girls who won their local gym contests were Lindsey Sheridan, Julianna Tracey, Jillian O'Toole, Fallon Hobin, Mikayla Kennedy, Jennifer Segale and Peggy Tam in the girls 8-9-age bracket; Milo Santangelo, Benjamin Egan, Thomas McCormack, Joey Champagne, Alex Kennedy, Omer Canca and Ian Lei in the boys 8-9-age group; Aine Farrell, Samantha Striffler, Cecilia Gonzalez, Danielle Pacione and Celia Murphy in the girls 10-11-age group; James Tan, Kevin McDonald, Tim Layden, Steven Chen, Ryan Malloy, Jacob Bianculli, Brendan Keaveny, Max Gustin and Frank Wahlberg in the boys 10-11-age bracket and Mike Monroe, Paolo Filippi, Bryant Wang, Dominic DiPalmo, Brandon Beal, Joshua Helfrich and Tim Murphy in the boys 12-13-age group.

Mr. Welch also praised his Recreation Leaders who supervised the event at each center championship at 13 different sites as well as the City Championship; Welch also thanked Hoop Shoot Chairman Ed Miller of the Elks Lodge.

Q/NQ Swimming-Diving Making Waves In Pool

The Quincy/North Quincy swimming and diving teams continue to impress competing in the Patriot League this winter. Coach Bob McGillicuddy's girls' team is currently 2-2 overall while his boys' team is 1-3.

The following are meet results from the team's last two competitions:

Q/NQ vs. Hanover

Junior Taryn Urbanus improved her own one-meter diving program record, but Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving still fell to visiting Hanover High School, 107-72, on Jan. 7 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool in Quincy to even its record at 2-2. It was the program's first Patriot League loss (2-1).

Urbanus did not receive a single score lower than 6.5 to tally 251.65 points, beating the only opponent, Niki Delorey, to have defeated her in duel meet competition last year.

Senior captain Kendra Johnston won the 200-yard individual medley (2:25.41) and 100-yard breaststroke (1:19.16) events. Sophomore Kat O'Connor, who had not broken the one-minute barrier in her young high school swimming career, qualified for sectionals with a time of 59.46 in the 100-yard freestyle. Johnston and O'Connor teamed with Olivia Goldson and McKayla Johnston to win the 400-yard freestyle relay with a state-qualifying time of 4:04.41.

Q/NQ vs. Randolph

The girls' team used a complete team effort to best visiting Randolph HS, 82-48, on Jan. 4 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool to improve to 2-1 on the season and remain undefeated in the Patriot League (2-0).

Q/NQ outscored the visitors by a total of 22-6 in the 200-yard medley relay and 200-yard freestyle relay events displaying its depth in all the strokes. Two members of the latter relay, sophomore Leslie David and junior Samantha Enbar-Salo cleared the wake for Q/NQ's victory with their spectacular individual efforts. David's time of 1:26.47 in the 100-yard backstroke paced the field while her 3:13.41 mark in the 200-yard individual medley landed her second behind teammate Hillary Wong. Enbar-Solo clinched the win, swimming 2:51.19 in the 200-yard freestyle, then finished second (34.15) behind teammate Kat O'Connor in one-quarter the distance, the 50-yard freestyle.

Senior Madeline McDonough held Q/NQ's ground in the long distance events, winning the 500-yard freestyle (9:15.58) and placing second in the 200-yard freestyle, clocking 2:51.19. Freshman Sarah Tran earned the meet's best 100-yard freestyle mark of 109:16 and Kat O'Connor, Kendra Johnston and Taryn Urbanus won the 50-yard freestyle, 100-yard butterfly and one-meter diving events, respectively.

Q/NQ vs. Hanover (Boys)

Despite three lead changes in a hard-fought competition, the Q/NQ boys swimming and diving team lost to visiting Hanover, 80-74, at the Lincoln Hancock Pool on Jan. 7. The loss drops the team's overall record to 1-3.

Hanover secured the lead at 57-52 after the 200-yard freestyle relay en route to the six-point victory.

The Q/NQ duo of senior captain James Lee and sophomore Emmitt Harrow touched 1-2 in both the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle events. The pair also participated in the meet-winning, 400-yard freestyle relay contingent with teammates Tom Nigl and Elio Daci that clocked 4:24.37.

Three times in the meet, Q/NQ finished second and third including the 200-yard freestyle when Nigl swam 2:48.19 followed by Austin Rowe at 2:57.80. Diego Espinola was third behind Daci in the 100-yard butterfly. Sean Lerlevikarn and Phil Zeng placed second (1:32.03) and third (1:38.47), respectively, in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Q/NQ vs. Randolph (Boys)

Quincy/North Quincy finished 1-2-3 in the 100-yard backstroke to cement its first win of the season, beating Randolph HS, 78-60, on Jan. 4 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool.

That 13-point outburst by senior captain Austin Rowe, followed by Jack Fisher and junior Chaz Waterman, eclipsed Randolph's two-point effort and deflated the visitors who had hovered 10 points down throughout the swim meet by solidifying a 68-46 advantage with two events remaining.

Sophomore Emmitt Harrow picked up a pair of victories in the 50-and 100-yard freestyle events, swimming 28.19 and 1:04.46, respectively.

Freshman Elio Daci won the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:55.94. Tommy Nigl beat the field in the 200-yard freestyle (2:48.34) then took second in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 8:22.21.

The Q/NQ program travels to Duxbury HS today (Thursday) for a 3:30 p.m. meet start.

Baby Your Skin, Hair During Colder Weather

(NAPSA)-In an effort to balance their budgets and maintain beautiful skin during the colder months, many women are skipping the department store counter and instead visiting the baby aisle for their beauty products. As part of a growing trend, women are enhancing their beauty regimen with products that are developed for babies' gentle skin, yet are sophisticated enough for adults.

According to a survey conducted by Harris Interactive and commissioned by JOHNSON'S Brand, nearly 40 percent of adults said they regularly use baby products on themselves, and almost 80 percent of adults say they would feel comfortable using baby products for purposes other than those pertaining to babies.

To help temperature-related skin and hair problems, celebrity makeup expert Tia Dantzler suggests these tips:

• Don't forget to hydrate. Stay hydrated by drinking water and using moisturizing body care products to protect your skin from the harsh winds and drying effects of indoor heating. Tia prefers an oil-based moisturizer for ultimate hydration. She recommends Johnson's Baby Oil Gel after a shower, while skin is still wet, to lock in up to 10 times more moisture. "As a makeup artist, this is a great product to have in my kit at all times, especially when working a photo shoot. I apply it to my clients before the red carpet, to achieve a high shine to their bodies, which looks great on camera."

NEARLY 40 percent of adults say they regularly use gentle baby products, such as lotion and shampoo, on themselves.

• Don't shampoo too often. Shampooing hair daily can strip essential oils and add to the dryness already caused by winter conditions. Try shampooing every other day; if you need to shampoo every day, try a gentle baby shampoo formula designed for babies' sensitive eyes and fine hair, or use baby powder as a dry shampoo.

• Do deodorize. As women pile on the winter layers to avoid the bitterness of low temperatures, they often find themselves in a sweat before they can get to where they are going. Tia always carries Johnson's Baby Powder to keep her feeling fresh all day long. "My favorite scent is the new Magnolia Petals. It smells better than regular deodorant and is a great base layer for my perfume."

• Do exfoliate. Exfoliating will remove dead cells and allow the skin to absorb extra moisture. Aim to do this at least twice a week.

10 Questions To Ask Before Joining A Gym

Losing weight is one of the most common New Year's resolutions after the gluttony of the holiday season. If you're pledging to lose some pounds this year by joining a gym, the Better Business Bureau recommends asking 10 questions before signing on the dotted line.

In 2009 alone, BBB received 7,787 complaints about gyms and health clubs, putting the industry in the top 20 for most complained about businesses. Not only does BBB receive a lot of complaints about gyms, but complaints increased by 21 percent in 2009 over the previous year.

"Regardless of how eager you are to start losing weight in the New Year, take the time to do your research before joining a gym and don't give in to high-pressure sales pitches," said Paula Fleming BBB spokesperson. "Always check the health club out with your Better Business Bureau, inspect the facilities closely and read the contract carefully, making sure that all of the promises are in print."

BBB recommends asking the gym and yourself the following 10 questions before signing up for a membership:

Questions to ask the gym:

What are the terms of any introductory offers?

Gyms often use special introductory offers to lure in new members. Just make sure you understand the terms and what the price will be once the introductory period is over.

Will my membership renew automatically?

Every year, BBB receives a large number of complaints from people who joined a gym and didn't realize that their contract would renew automatically and that they would have to take specific steps to cancel their contract.

How can I get out of my contract?

Getting out of a gym contract isn't always as easy as getting into one so make sure you understand what steps you would need to take to cancel your membership

What happens if I move?

Gyms have any number of different policies when it comes to how moving will affect your membership. It might depend on how far away you're moving and if they have other locations nearby.

What happens if you go out of business?

BBB often receives complaints from people after their gym suddenly closed up shop and took their money with them. Ask the gym to explain what will happen to your money if they suddenly go out of business.

Questions to ask yourself:

What are my fitness goals?

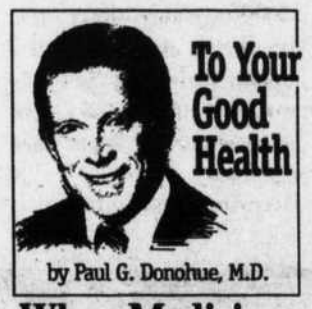
Determining your fitness goals in advance will help you select a facility that is most appropriate for you. If you have a serious health condition, consult with a medical professional when setting your fitness goals.

Is this location convenient?

If the gym is across town, you'll be less likely to workout. Choose a fitness club that is convenient to work or home so the location is not a deterrent to getting exercise.

Can I really afford this every month?

Monthly gym fees add up and, after any introductory periods are over, the price could jump higher than your budget can handle. Do the math before you join and make sure you can afford a gym membership.



Am I feeling pressured to join?

Do not give in to high-pressure sales tactics to join right away. A reputable gym will give you enough time to read the contract thoroughly, tour the facilities and make an informed decision.

Did I get everything in writing?

Read the contract carefully and make sure that all verbal promises made by the salesperson are in writing. What matters is the document you sign, so don't just take a salesperson's word for it.

When Medicines Fail to Quell Heartburn

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 25. I have a serious case of GERD. I've been put on four different medicines. They aren't working.

I also have palpitations throughout the day. I've been told by doctors and nurses that there is nothing dangerous about them. I'd like to know if this true. – J.C.

ANSWER: GERD – gastroesophageal reflux disorder – is heartburn. It's the upward spurting of stomach acid and digestive juices into the esophagus, the swallowing tube, a place that is not able to cope with these corrosive juices the way the stomach is.

Eliminate or go easy on foods that make GERD worse: citrus fruits; tomatoes; onions; carbonated drinks; spicy, fatty or fried foods; chocolate; peppermint; and caffeine. If you're overweight, weight loss lessens GERD symptoms. Don't lie down after eating. Don't smoke. Sleep with your head, chest and stomach on a slope by putting 6-inch blocks under the bedposts at the head of your bed. That position keeps stomach acid in the stomach. Don't wear anything that constricts your stomach, like tight pants or tight belts.

Medicines called "proton pump inhibitors" nearly completely turn off acid production. Nexium, Prevacid, Prilosec, Protonix, Aciphex and Dexilant are their names. If you still have heartburn while on these medicines, it's OK to use an antacid along with them.

If medicines fail, other causes of heartburn need consideration, things like bile reflux or eosinophilic esophagitis. If these conditions aren't found, then surgical treatment of GERD is an option that's open to you.

Palpitations mean a thumping or racing heart. They can be felt as a thud in the chest. The cause is an extra beat – or more correctly, a premature beat – one that comes before it should. The beat after a premature beat is delayed. During the delay, the heart fills with more blood than usual, and that causes a thump in the chest when the heart empties. Premature beats are almost always innocent and need no treatment. You can believe your doctors and nurses.

The booklet on GERD explains this common malady and its treatment. To order a copy, write: Dr. Donohue – No. 501W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you give me insight into the Hamman-Rich syndrome? My father passed away from it. – L.R.

ANSWER: I can tell you only a little, because only a little is known about it. It's a lung injury that comes on suddenly, with damage to the lung air sacs (the alveoli) and the spaces between the air sacs, the interstitium. The cause is unknown. Because of such destruction, oxygen cannot get into the blood. Patients are severely short of breath, have a fever and they cough. The only medicines are ones to keep the person going as best as possible. There is no cure medicine. Even with a ventilator, death happens to more than 60 percent of these patients.

It's an illness that reminds doctors that they don't have an answer for every malady. You and your family have my condolences.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

ARE YOU IN PAIN?

A recent survey indicates that more than 76 million Americans live with daily pain. Fully 48% of the survey respondents didn't feel that proper treatment could ease their chronic pain, and 41% believed that pain is to be regarded as a normal part of aging. Moreover, 36% of the respondents would refuse doctor-recommended or physician-prescribed pain medication due to the fear of becoming addicted. Thirty-four percent said that they believe that pain medications cause side effects worse than the pain for which it is prescribed. For their parts, chiropractors can speak to the concerns of chronic pain sufferers by reiterating that chiropractic offers a drugless, natural treatment for pain relief that directly addresses the causes (not the symptoms) of pain.

Millions of patients love chiropractic and appreciate the unique and safe approach to recovery from pain. Significant research suggests that chiropractic is the safest approach available for relief from neck pain, back pain, headaches and other health complaints. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have many years of experience to ensure that each adjustment is precisely delivered. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The survey mentioned above noted that 31% of respondents would not speak to doctors about their pain because they fear they could not afford treatment.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

2 + 2 = HEALTHY TEETH AND GUMS

By adhering to the "two plus two" rule, patients can help better their oral health. Most dentists recommend that at least "two" minutes of tooth-brushing is required to thoroughly clean teeth. Although many people think they are following the two-minute tooth-brushing regimen, actual timing of their routines may prove otherwise. If necessary, patients must use an old-fashioned egg timer to time themselves. Flossing is also a must at least once a day because it reaches between teeth where toothbrush bristles cannot go. Regarding regular visits to the dentist, "two" visits a year is acceptable for most patients, while visits every three to four months is preferable for those with bridges, crowns, or a history of gum disease.

Your personal satisfaction with your oral health and appearance is important. You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care using the most up-to-date techniques and equipment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our trained professional staff works as a team to make your visits pleasant. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We provide a full range of dental treatments. We will always discuss your treatment options with you. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Brushing the tongue is important because that is where the bulk of bacteria collect that cause bad breath.

Local Advocates Encouraged By Tone Of Papal Response

Pope Decides Not To Intervene On Star Of The Sea

Friends of Star of the Sea co-chairs Sean Glennon and Maureen Mazrimas confirm they will pursue a new round of Canonical appeals to save Star of the Sea Church in Squantum, even though a letter on behalf of Pope Benedict XVI has informed them that His Holiness has decided not to accept a direct appeal the Friends made to him last year.

The recourse was hand-delivered to a Vatican official this past October by Peter Borre, Chairman of the Council of Parishes, a national advocacy and support group for organizations like the Friends of Star of the Sea. The recourse asked the Pope to overturn Cardinal Sean O'Malley's 2004 Decree of Suppression of Star of the Sea Parish in Squantum.

Although the Pope has decided not to accept the Friends' recourse, the co-Chairs are actually encouraged by the tone of the Papal response.

"I am pleasantly surprised with the content of the letter on many levels," said Glennon. "Not only did the letter come from the number two ranking official in the Secretariat of State of the Holy See, but the response was sent on behalf of the Pope himself. This is a colossal success for us. We never expected our appeal to reach the Pope's desk, let alone get a response from him."

The Pope's decision involves nine parishioner groups in the Archdiocese of Boston, including Star of the Sea.

The letter states, in part, "The Holy Father was apprised of the question, which was also carefully studied by this office." The "office" to which the letter is referring is the "First Section - General Affairs" in the Secretariat of State, which is responsible for policy coordination and Vatican relations with all Catholic dioceses (about 5,000) worldwide.

Borre, who received the letter on behalf of the nine parishioner groups, is also encouraged by the letter.

"Our principal objective in submitting our 'Extraordinary Recourse to His Holiness' was to bring the plight of parish destruction in Boston to the attention of the highest levels of the Vatican - including the Pope," said Borre. "This has been achieved."

Borre, Glennon, and Mazrimas are also encouraged by the letter's closing comment, which states, "He [the Holy Father] has likewise asked me to assure you of a remembrance in his prayers at these difficult times."

They say this statement shows the pastoral concern of Pope Benedict towards the nine Boston parishioner groups, and encourages them to press ahead to protect their parochial churches from being sold.

"We continue to be strengthened – emotionally, spiritually and financially – by our members," said Mazrimas. "The recent outpouring of financial support tells us that rather than 'move on' as the RCAB has suggested, we should 'move forward' to explore every option open to us."

The Papal response means Star of the Sea will remain suppressed as a parish. However, the new round of appeals are aimed at stopping the property from being sold, which, in turn, could prompt the Boston chancery to reopen the church in some fashion.

The Friends say the current status of Star of the Sea is a "lose-lose" situation for the chancery because the church is not generating any revenue being closed, and because it can't be sold until the appeals process is exhausted.

The co-Chairs say they are prayerfully optimistic of achieving a "win-win" outcome for the chancery and their faith community, and that they look forward to working with the Cardinal to make that vision a reality.

The Friends co-Chairs were in contact with their Canonical Advocate in Rome earlier this week to discuss next steps at the Vatican. Borre will be flying to Rome in a few weeks to meet with the advocate on behalf of the Friends.

OBITUARIES

Edward J. Wyckoff, 52
Financial Aid Supervisor At University of New Mexico School of Medicine

EDWARD J. WYCKOFF

Edward J. Wyckoff, 52, of Albuquerque, New Mexico, formerly of Wollaston, died Jan. 3 after an eight-year battle with cancer.

Born in Boston, he attended Boston Latin and graduated from Harvard University in 1980. He worked as the Financial Aid Supervisor at the University of New Mexico School of Medicine. When he was forced to retire from the School of Medicine, his excellence and dedication was such that a scholarship was set up "In Honor of Edward J. Wyckoff."

Mr. Wyckoff, at one time, was a journalist for the Billerica Minuteman and he was also an expert at chess.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Troubles . . . We all have them. We all complain from time to time about them, but they are still there. In our daily lives we continually face difficult decisions, trying circumstances and situations.

A wise and philosophical man once asked how he overcame his difficulties . . . He replied: "How do I get through a trouble? Well, first I try to go around it, and if I can't go around it, I try to get under it, and if I can't get under it, I try to go over it, and if I can't go over it, I just plow right through it." Then he added, "God and I plow right through it." Good advice? We think so . . .

Here's another good piece of advice. . . "Warning! Following are the names of the seven Mischievous Misses who are responsible for most of our troubles: Miss Information, Miss Quotation, Miss Representation, Miss Interpretation, Miss Construction, Miss Conception, Miss Understanding. Don't listen to them! Beware!" - William J. H. Boetcker.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Aspects call for care in preparing material for submission. Although you might find it bothersome to go over what you've done, the fact is, rechecking could be worth your time and effort.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The week is favorable for Bovines who welcome change. New career opportunities wait to be checked out. You might also want to get started on that home makeover you've been considering.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might have to be extra careful to protect that surprise you have planned, thanks to a certain snoopy someone who wants to know more about your plans than you're willing to share.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Family ties are strong this week, although an old and still-unresolved problem might create some unpleasant moments. If so, look to straighten the situation out once and for all.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although the Lion might see it as an act of loyalty and courage to hold on to an increasingly shaky position, it might be wiser to make changes now to prevent a possible meltdown later.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your gift for adding new people to your circle of friends works overtime this week, thanks largely to contacts you made during the holidays. A surprise awaits you at the week's end.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't hide your talents. It's a good time to show what you can do to impress people who can do a lot for you. A dispute with a family member might still need some smoothing over.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be open with your colleagues about your plan to bring a workplace matter out into the open. You'll want their support, and they'll want to know how you'll pull it off.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Trying to patch up an unraveling relationship is often easier said than done. But it helps to discuss and work out any problems that arise along the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While your creative aspect remains high this week, you might want to call on your practical side to help work out the why and wherefore of an upcoming decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Dealing with someone's disappointment can be difficult for Aquarians, who always try to avoid giving pain. But a full explanation and a show of sympathy can work wonders.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting a job-related matter past some major obstacles should be easier this week. A personal situation might take a surprising but not necessarily unwelcome turn by the week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can be both a dreamer and a doer. You consider helping others to be an important part of your life.

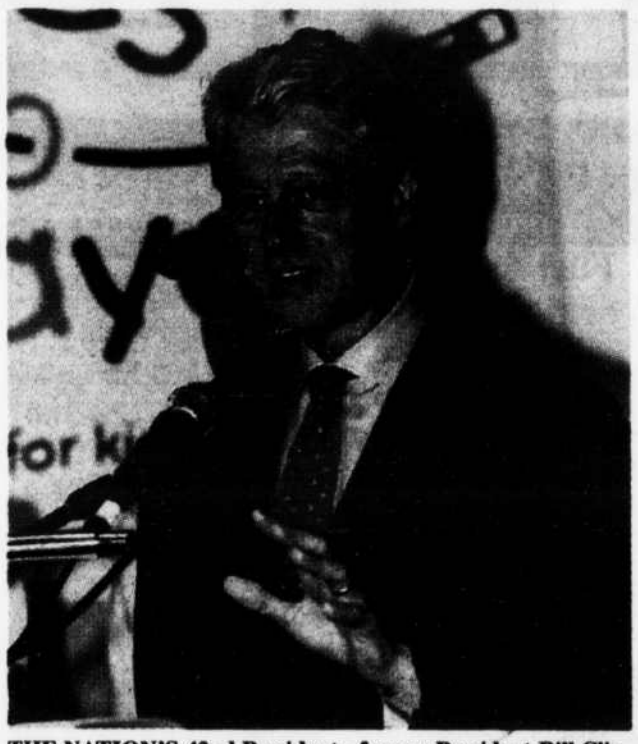
Opportunity To Assist More Children At Larger Location

Quincy-Based Cradles To Crayons Moving To Brighton

By JOE REARDON

With the opportunity to expand and assist even more children, the Quincy-based Cradles To Crayons organization is moving to a bigger location in Brighton.



Last year was an enormous success for the charity organization as it distributed more than 45,000 KidPacks to children in the Commonwealth.

With the move, the company is looking to expand and more than double that number over next three to five years working out of the new 37,000-square-foot building, located at 155 North Beacon Street. Since being founded by CEO Lynn Margherio in 2002, Cradles To Crayons has provided necessary items to more than 200,000 children.

"This will allow our off-season storage and every day flow to be under one roof," said Cradles To Crayons Director of Development Jennifer White.

The search for a building that suited the needs of the organization took over two years. In that time more than 100 buildings were considered before finally settling on the Brighton location. The building's size and availability of loading docks were two of the main selling points for Cradles To Crayons selecting it.

The charity organization proved to be a big boon for local Quincy children, helping more than 3,000 with items last year alone. It partnered with several organizations within the city and the hope is it will continue to keep ties.

THE NATION'S 42nd President - former President Bill Clinton – visited Quincy-based Cradles to Crayons in April, 2005 in support of the non-profit organization. After his visit to Quincy, Clinton attended a fundraiser in Boston to help raise more than $1 million for the organization.

FORMER PRESIDENT Bill Clinton lauded the efforts of Cradles-to-Crayons during a visit to the Quincy-based charitable organization in April, 2005. Clinton toured the organization's Quincy warehouse which distributes toys, clothing and other essentials for low-income households in Massachusetts.

Cradles To Crayons accepts new or gently used clothing (kids' sizes 0-20 and adult sizes S, M, L), shoes, sneakers, sandals, spring/fall jackets, new socks and underwear, books, brand new arts and crafts/school supplies, baby supplies, diapers, baby strollers and car seats. Other items needed are new toys (for birthday gifts), new hygiene supplies, laundry detergent and batteries.

Last year Cradles To Crayons utilized more than 20,000 volunteers, the lifeblood of the organization. "They're the engine that makes Cradles To Crayons run," said White.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, the Ward 3 representative, said there is a definite feeling of loss with Cradles To Crayons relocating. "I hate to see organizations like this leave the city," said Coughlin. "I felt the same sense of loss when Work Inc. relocated to Dorchester.

"Organizations like this become so interwoven with the fabric of the community."

Coughlin went on to say that organizations similar to Cradles To Crayons are very easy to stand behind because of what they provide for those less fortunate. "You kind of cheer them on as they grow and expand," said Coughlin.

"There's a lot involved in running a non-profit organization. You still have to have a fundamental staff and structure."

Along with Boston, Cradles To Crayons also has an office in Philadelphia, PA, which garners large amounts of donations as well.

Margherio put her stamp on the organization quickly. With more than 20 years of business consulting, public policy and nonprofit experience, Cradles To Crayons had a more than qualified individual at the helm.

She also helped launch former President William J. Clinton's HIV/AIDS Initiative as its executive vice president. The program assists countries to help implement large-scale HIV/AIDS care and treatment programs.

Margherio oversaw the procurement service operation that helped reduce the prices of AIDS drugs and tests by a whopping 50-90% of the world's lowest marked prices, and as a result, saved hundreds of millions of dollars globally.

An accomplished business strategist, Margherio has also advised Fortune 500 companies on growth strategies, competitive positioning, and investment/acquisition opportunities. She has also included public policy roles at the national and state levels. She directed the U.S. Commerce Department team that produced the Emerging Digital Economy report, the first U.S. government report to describe and measure the impact of information technology and the Internet to the longest peacetime expansion in history.

Clinton Visit Spotlighted Cradle To Crayons' Work

Cradles To Crayons received a huge shot in the arm back in 2005 when former President Bill Clinton visited the charitable organization's headquarters in North Quincy to praise the work it had done.

A fundraiser for the organization at the Boston Convention Center, that Clinton attended while in Massachusetts, raised $1 million and brought awareness of Cradles To Crayons to the forefront.

Kevin Coughlin, city council president and Ward 3 representative, met Clinton and was extremely impressed with how down to earth the country's 42nd president was.

"For me it was the opportunity of a lifetime," said Coughlin of meeting Clinton in his first visit to the city. "I found him to be very effective in terms of his presidency and the work he has done since leaving office. I give him a lot of credit for donating his talent to the issues of social concerns."

Cradles To Crayons CEO Lynn Margherio worked under Clinton during his presidency and was instrumental in securing his visit to Quincy.

FORMER PRESIDENT Bill Clinton (right) met briefly with then Mayor William Phelan (center) and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin during his visit to Cradles to Crayons in Quincy in April, 2005. Coughlin presented the former Commander-in-Chief with a City of Presidents tie and tie tack.

"He lent his name and his cache to the organization," said Coughlin.

Coughlin presented Clinton with a tie and a lapel pin of the city, something, he said, that was unique and would represent Quincy. Coughlin went on to say how engaging Clinton was during their conversation.

"He made you feel like you were the most important person in the room," said Coughlin. "He was really interested in what you had to say and looked you straight in the eye when he spoke to you."

Clinton praised the work done by volunteers at Cradles to Crayons after taking a 30-minute tour through the organization's headquarters. "Poverty remains a serious issue that must be confronted at all levels," said Clinton. "Cradles to Crayons has made tremendous strides during its short existence to engage the community and help provide needy children in Massachusetts with basic necessities."

Margherio said that the Cradles To Crayons organization gives needy children the items they need to get along. "No child should have to suffer through a New England winter without shoes or a coat," she said. "No mother should be prevented from taking her newborn home from the hospital because she can't afford a proper car seat. No child should have to endure the embarrassment of starting school without a backpack or other basic supplies."

John Gillis To Receive Henry W. Bosworth Memorial Citizen Award

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

John M. Gillis, a lifelong Quincy resident whose public service career as spanned more than 50 years as a "champion of the little guy," has been selected to receive the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award.

Gillis was selected for the award – formerly The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year renamed in memory of the newspaper's founder and longtime publisher – by a judging panel among 22 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. The award will be presented by The Quincy Sun at a reception in Gillis's honor in the spring.

"I'm honored to receive this award. I considered Henry to be one of my very best friends. I knew him for 70 years and I knew him well," Gillis said after being informed of his selec-

$9 Million Financing Request For Land Acquisition, Demolition Costs

Mayor Submits Central Land Plan

Mayor Thomas Koch on Tuesday submitted a $9 million financing request to the City Council to pay for land acquisition and demolition costs associated with building a new Central Middle School.

The formal submission marks the most substantial progress on the long-planned new school to date, and sets in motion a process that could see construction begin this year, officials said. The proposal includes money needed to purchase St. Ann's School from the Archdiocese of Boston, two houses, and a parcel owned by Eastern Nazarene College, in addition to financing needed to demolish existing buildings on the 4-acre site.

The City will avoid potentially lengthy and costly eminent domain proceedings, as all acquisitions are being negotiated as friendly sales, Koch said.

"Negotiating purchases without eminent domain in a City like Quincy with so little available space for a new school is a great first step, and one that will save our taxpayers money in relocation costs and avoid potential legal issues," Koch said. "Our work is just beginning, and we will be working hard in coming months to see this vital project for our students become a reality."

With the Archdiocese agreeing to sell the St. Ann's School, a previous Central site that would have included a car wash and the Presidents City Inn was scrapped. That plan almost assuredly would have required eminent domain, and

Downtown Legislation Heads To Beacon Hill

Mayor Thomas Koch headed to Beacon Hill on Wednesday to hand-deliver special state legislation that is a key component of the City's $1.3 billion redevelopment agreement for Quincy Center.

The legislation, adopted as a Home-Rule Petition by the City Council, aims to ensure that language in state redevelopment laws coincide with the City's master agreement with Street-Works Development LLC. The Council last month authorized Mayor Koch to sign the Master Agreement and agreed to send the special legislation to the State House.

"Our delegation at the State House is tremendously enthusiastic about the legislation and they have already been a great assistance. We are greatly looking forward to working closely with the delegation and seeing this process through to passage," said Mayor Koch.

Once formally received from the City, the bill will be filed by the Quincy members of the State House delegation and move through a committee process toward a vote by the both House and Senate with an end goal of a signature by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The Legislation also lays out details related to how labor rules will work for the project, a parking management plan between Street-Works and the City, and required flexibility in financing that is outlined in the master agreement.

The master agreement, called a Land Disposition Agreement, sets the legal and financial terms for a plan that calls more than 1 million square feet of new office space, more than 700 housing units, two hotels, a cinema and entertainment complex, and 570,000 square feet of new retail and restaurant space in Quincy Center.

The project, which will

City Census Forms In Mail This Week

The city is mailing out some 56,415 census forms this week.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said the census information is used to generate a street-by-street listing of residents and to compile jury and voting lists.

The census information is also used for fiscal planning, to help predict school enrollments and to get federal aid and reimbursements.

According to state law, each city and town in Massachusetts must conduct an annual census separate from the federal census.

Commitment, Action Theme At MLK Breakfast

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Some 300 people braved Monday's frigid weather to attend Quincy's 15th Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. breakfast where speakers challenged them to revive and spread King's message of community, inclusion and justice for all.

"We lost the notion of coming together and working for the common cause," warned Canon Edward W. Rodman who, also, fears the country has "lost our sense of vision" and "lost our sense of purpose."

Canon Rodman, the keynote speaker, is a professor of Pastoral Theology and Urban Ministry, Episcopal Divinity School, a published author and consultant at Harvard.

"You tell me if we're living in an absurd time," said Canon Rodman who outlined the violence in the country's history and traced King's evolvement from having a single goal to wider goals of peace and social justice, such as the Peace Movement and embracing all "the poor people who had been pitted against each other."

Successful movements must have four foundation blocks, according to Canon Rodman who cited the importance of knowing "true history and the pain of that history," having compassion, developing vision and being willing to sacrifice and "pay the price."

Canon Rodman touched on today's political climate likening some movements to the "Know-Nothing Party" of the 1840's, and stating, "You may find a chilling resemblance to some other party running around the country at this time."

"If you don't understand it, you will repeat it," Canon Rodman said of history and past mistakes and asked rhetorically, "What civil liberties are we willing to give up in the name of safety?"

John Ireland, Vice President of the South Shore YMCA, introduced the event's speakers at the Y's Germantown Community Center where organizers offered a bountiful hot breakfast and entertainment.

For entertainment, Soloist Samantha Tan and two dozen local youngsters sang; Chris Cherry played the piano and DiAndre Nixon and Emmanuel Janvier danced.

At the conclusion of the event which had been jeopardized this year by lack of funds, Ireland said, "See you next year."

Local leaders offered messages of hope and inspiration and mourned the Jan. 13 death of eight-year-old Brandon Yang, a student at Snug Harbor School.

Congressman Bill Keating referred to last week's tragedy in Tucson, AZ, where six people were killed and 14 injured by a crazed gunman.

That tragedy highlights "how much work we have to do" and "how far we still have to (go)," said Keating who supported efforts for those suffering from domestic violence, injustice and mental illness and urged his listeners to share their stories.

Keating described his recent encounters with Congressman John Lewis who marched with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. during the Civil Rights struggles of the 1960's and was awarded the country's Medal of Freedom.

"Change can occur," said Keating

"Truth has been replaced by silence," lamented Karen Marshall in her poetic commentary, The Spoken Word which speaks of slaves fleeing through the Underground Railroad "with dreams on our backs."

"Freedom does carry a cost," said Marshall.

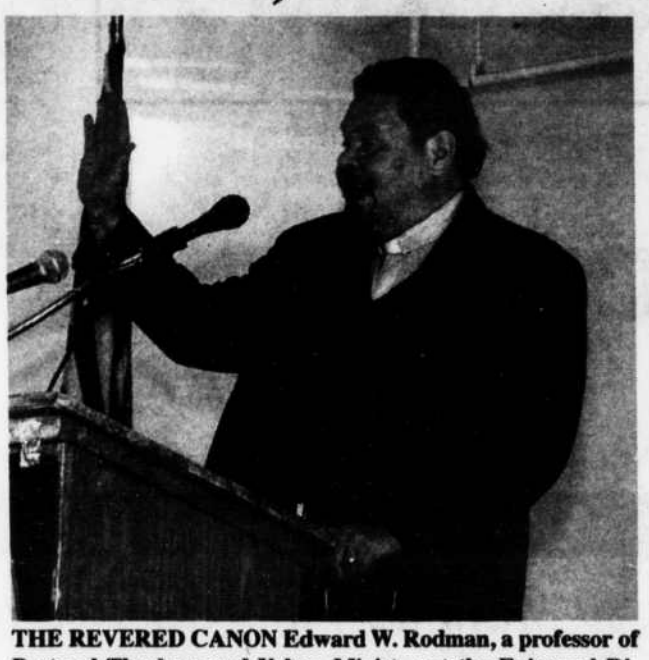
District Attorney Michael Morrissey praised Kathy Quigley, Director of the Center and YMCA officials who made Monday's breakfast possible after funds dried up for other venues and the event was almost cancelled.

"Thank you for saving one of the city's premier events," said Morrissey who observed "how the city has changed" and is growing in diversity.

Morrissey saluted his former staffer Rep. Tackey Chan who grew up in the area and attended the breakfast.

"This is what makes us community," said Mayor Thomas Koch who urged his listeners, "Let us today recommit. When we see injustice, when we see evil, we speak out."

Prior to his public speech, Koch said he was pleased with the turn-out, suggesting that the change may have reinvigorated the annual event which drew an overflow crowd.



Claire Brennan, Associate Director of the Center, said they'd set up tables for over 220, but roughly 80 more attended and shared seats.

Paul Gorman, CEO of the South Shore YMCA, welcomed the participants and said, "We can see around the world the countries who do not embrace diversity and the problems (they encounter)."

On hand as well was Kathleen Picard whose donation in memory of her husband Joseph kicked off the fund-raising that saved the event. Picard spoke reluctantly, to this reporter, "I just wanted to do it quietly."

"I couldn't believe it wasn't going to happen," said Picard, adding, "I couldn't think of anything that would make my husband happier."

Among the local officials attending the event were community leader Rosemary Wahlberg, City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney, School Committee member Emily Lebo, Police Chief Paul Keenan, and school principals Frank Santoro, Quincy High School and Dan Gilbert, Snug Harbor School, and Tom Fabrizio, Director of the Office of Constituent Services.

THE REVERED CANON Edward W. Rodman, a professor of Pastoral Theology and Urban Ministry at the Episcopal Divinity School in Boston, was the keynote speaker at Monday's Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast held at the Germantown Neighborhood Center/YMCA, 366 Palmer St., Germantown.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST®

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN

THE VIOLET GEMSTONE

The violet gemstone known as iolite is commonly referred to as "water sapphire" because it bears a resemblance to a faceted blue sapphire. Iolite is also "pleochroic," meaning that it transmits light differently when viewed from different angles—iolite will appear blue when seen down the length of prismatic crystals but may appear colorless when viewed across. Interestingly, the Vikings put iolite's pleochroism to good use by using thin slices of the gemstone as a light polarizer. The explorers used the stones much like we use a polaroid filter to make images appear clearer by canceling out haze, mist, and clouds. By observing the sky through iolite, Viking navigators were able to locate the sun's exact position on overcast days.

The blue-violet gemstone iolite has been mined in a remote area of south central India for hundreds of years. In ancient times, farmers often plowed up the beautiful blue gemstone while tilling their fields. It takes the expertise of today's lapidaries to cut this rare beauty properly to bring out the desired rich color. Are you looking for fine jewelry a cut above the rest? Mother Charged With First-Degree Murder; Incident Still Under Investigation

Police: 8-Year-old Boy Died In Murder-Suicide Plot

By JOE REARDON

The sun-splashed sky Monday afternoon was in direct contrast to the solemn, makeshift shrine on the steps of 19 Yardarm Lane in Germantown.

The shrine, made up of candles and cards, was the lone reminder of the tragedy last Thursday (Jan. 13), that claimed the life of 8-year-old Brandon Yang, a third grader at the Snug Harbor Community School.

Neighbors in the isolated neighborhood didn't want to talk about Yang's mother, 39-year-old Li Rong Zhang, when asked to comment on Monday.

Zhang pled not guilty when she was arraigned on first-degree murder charges at her bedside at the Massachusetts General Hospital. She is being represented by attorney James Doyle and is in custody of the Norfolk County's Sheriff's Department. She is currently being held at MCI Framingham.

While Zhang was being arraigned last Friday, a press conference was being held at Quincy Police Headquarters by Norfolk County D.A. Mike Morrissey, explaining the circumstances that led to Zhang's arrest.

Morrissey said a search warrant had been obtained Thursday night and it was determined the hibachi was only burning charcoal at the time of the firefighters' response.

"My heart goes out for anybody with young kids," said Morrissey, "It's one of those difficult tragedies."

Both mother and son were unresponsive when firefighters found them in a smoke-filled back bedroom of apartment No. 2. A wok-type hibachi was burning charcoal that released deadly carbon monoxide fumes.

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan said that the same type of hibachi's are commonly used for suicide attempts in China.

Jay MacRitchie, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority declined to comment on Tuesday whether a phone call was received from a neighbor who reportedly heard an alarm going off. MacRitchie said the authority is working with the district attorney's office and making phone records available.

"They're asking for materials and we're complying with them," MacRitchie said.

Firefighters responded in 2-1/2 minutes to the home, but their rescue attempt was hindered by a large bureau from the floor to ceiling that was blocking the door and preventing them from entering the second-floor bedroom. The firefighters used a Halligan tool to break into the room where they found Zhang on the floor and her son on the bed in what police are calling a murder/suicide attempt.

Zhang's 16-year-old son, Deming Yang, called police when he came home from school at 3:40 p.m., and saw smoke billowing out a window. Smoke and carbon monoxide detectors located in the outside room did not go off.

Zhang was unconscious, but was revived by CPR. Yang was transported to the Quincy Medical Center where he was pronounced dead. The autopsy on Yang has been completed but a cause of death has yet to be determined pending toxicology results.

An investigation determined there were no problems with the heating in the apartment and there was no indication the hibachi grill was being used for heat. Keenan said that it didn't appear that anything was being cooked on the grill.

Zhang is due in Quincy District Court Jan. 28 for a pretrial conference.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the entire incident is a tragedy. "First and foremost, our deepest sympathies go out to Brandon's family," said Koch. "It's tragedies like these that pull our community together, and our thoughts and prayers remain with them. We know the District Attorney is conducting a full investigation of this incident, and we expect that the Housing Authority is doing likewise."

Police were at the address once before when they responded to a domestic call in 2005. Upon arrival, police found Zhang arguing with her now estranged husband. No charges were filed.

Remembering JFK's Inauguration 50 Years Ago Today

It was 50 years ago today that President John F. Kennedy was inaugurated as the 35th President of the United States.

Those of us who have not hit the half-century mark in age have no recollection of that historic event capped off by one of the most inspiring and oft-quoted inaugural addresses in U.S. history.

But if you're old enough to remember Jan. 20, 1961, then you can probably recall where you were when you first heard JFK say: "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

GILLIS

For John Gillis, the retired longtime Quincy city clerk and a current Norfolk County commissioner, the Kennedy inauguration was the experience of a lifetime.

A half century later, Gillis fondly remembers the historic – and some hilarious – events from that Presidential weekend with a twinkle in his eye and nostalgia in his heart.

Gillis, his wife Violet along with his boyhood friend Henry Bosworth and his wife Dorothy traveled from Massachusetts to Washington, D.C. for the inauguration. They rode together in one car – John and Henry sharing the driving duties on what turned out to be a 12-hour ride because of a snowstorm that blanketed the Northeast corridor.

At the time, Gillis was the city clerk in Quincy. Bosworth had covered the 1960 election of President Kennedy as a reporter for the old Boston Traveler.

The inauguration was historic indeed. Kennedy – the former Massachusetts Congressman and Senator – was the youngest man elected President at age 43. He would also be the first and only Roman Catholic elected president and the first Irish American to be commander-in-chief.

But Mother Nature spoke first.

The day before the inaugural – Jan. 19 – a nor'easter dropped some eight inches of snow from the Mid-Atlantic region to New England. Motor vehicle traffic in and around Washington, D.C. was paralyzed. Press coverage from that time reported hundreds of cars marooned and thousands more abandoned.

QUINCY SUN Founder Henry Bosworth, then a reporter with the Boston Traveler - speaks with President-Elect John F. Kennedy after Kennedy's election win over Richard Nixon on Nov. 8, 1960. Bosworth would also attend JFK's inauguration with his wife Dorothy and good friends John and Violet Gillis.

JOHN F. KENNEDY delivered his inspiring Inaugural Address Jan. 20, 1961 - 50 years ago today.

The Weather Bureau had predicted some snow that morning and a change to rain in the afternoon then back to snow. As it turned out, it was all snow – and a lot of it – in a very short period of time.

One of the reasons the streets were clogged with motorists: Federal workers were released from work early in an attempt to get home. But those workers along with the throng of inaugural visitors ground traffic to a halt on many major routes.

The Gillis-Bosworth car was in the thick of it.

"We got lost driving to D.C. in the snowstorm," Gillis recalls. "We were in Pennsylvania and we didn't know how to get to D.C. At one point we were 35 miles west of Philadelphia and it took us three hours just to get to Philadelphia." (Gillis also remembers filling up at a gas station - four gallons for a buck.)

They eventually made it to a hotel in Virginia near D.C. "We had a great hotel room. The governor of North Carolina had the room next to us," Gillis says.

The snow forced President-elect Kennedy to cancel dinner plans the night before his inauguration. Former President Herbert Hoover was unable to fly into Washington National Airport due to the weather and missed the swearing-in ceremony on the East Front of the Capitol Building.

And it derailed the group's plans to attend one of the Inaugural Balls.

"We got on the road to go to the Ball and it snowed and snowed and snowed. We were in traffic for about an hour and it wasn't moving at all. There was a gully across the way with nobody on that road and Henry said 'Do you think you can get across the gully?'

"And I said 'I don't know.' . . . "We went down the gully and we got stuck. Henry and the two girls got out in the snow and tried to push the car but we couldn't make it. We had to turn around. We went back to the hotel room and had a helluva party of our own."

But the weather cooperated for Inauguration Day – although it was cold with a bitter wind. It was about 22 degrees but with a strong northwest wind (about 19 mph) it felt more like only 7 degrees.

They settled in their seats at the Inauguration. At 12:51 p.m., after being sworn-in by Chief Justice Earl Warren, Kennedy delivered his 1,364-word Inaugural Address at 12:51 p.m. It was over in 13 minutes and 59 seconds.

Kennedy's speech ranks the fourth shortest among inaugural addresses. But it is considered among the best ever.

Gillis had more than a glimpse at history – the seats were 10 rows from the President.

"On the day of the inaugural, we got up there early. We didn't know where our seats were. We had a number. They brought us down and down and down. We were about 10 chairs away from the President. Right in the middle of the platform."

Then some funny moments unfolded.

"This little blonde woman was sitting beside me. And this little guy . . . he was about five feet six inches tall (was next to her) and I didn't know who he was. He said he was from California. I told him I was from Massachusetts. It was extremely cold and his wife had open-toed shoes on.

"He says to me, 'Hey bud, can you do me a favor? I want to have my wife take her shoe off and you're gonna rub her foot with me.

"I said, 'sure.'

"So while Kennedy's giving this great speech, I'm rubbing her feet. I'll never forget it."

He'll also never forget the scar on the guy's left cheek.

The mystery man?

It was Hollywood legend Gene Kelly. The scar – the result of a tricycle accident when Kelly was six – was usually concealed for films but seldom covered up in public.

"(Kelly) gave me his card and said 'any time you two fellas and your wives come up, it's on me. I promise you a good time."

"We never went out but I still have his card."

Gillis said he'll always remember Kennedy's delivery of his famous speech.

"He was so understandable. Everybody could hear every word he said. The way he pronounced every word he didn't have a New England accent. It was a great, great accent that he had. Every word was great. The big clap was for when he said "ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country.'

"Everybody went nuts. They were cheering. He couldn't continue his speech while that was going on."

Gillis also remembers poet Robert Frost who brought a handwritten poem entitled "Dedication" which he had intended for the President. Frost had planned to read a typed copy of the poem at the ceremonies. But the sun's glare reflecting off the heavy snow that fell the night before proved difficult to read. Gillis also recalls the wind gusting one of the pages from the poet's hands.

"Everybody was laughing but we shouldn't have. The poor guy was doing the best he could," Gillis said. "Henry said, 'He must be a newspaperman.' I'll never forget it.

"We had a great time."

Frost was quick on his feet. He regained his composure and recited "The Gift Outright" by memory. He handed the original version of the Dedication to Kennedy and First Lady Jacqueline.

Like the weather of the day, other anecdotes remain frozen in Gillis's memory.

"The amazing thing that I remember is all the Catholic priests who were there. It was unbelievable. Cardinal Cushing praised Kennedy, praised the family and praised the old man - Joseph, Sr. who was the general manager of the Quincy shipyard during World War I."

The Gillis-Bosworth foursome made it to the White House the day after the inaugural before heading back to the Bay State. They didn't see any of the Kennedys but ran into Cong. Tip O'Neill, the longtime Massachusetts representative who years later became Speaker of the House.

Many who voted for Kennedy in 1960 and certainly those who ventured to the Capitol for the Inauguration believed there would be a second JFK inaugural in 1965. But his assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963 – his 1,036 day in office – ended his presidency and left a nation in mourning.

In Quincy, Kennedy's popularity dates back to the 1960 election as well as his impact on voter registration.

Before Kennedy ran for president, Quincy was very much a Republican stronghold. Gillis and longtime assistant City Clerk and fellow Democrat Tommy Burke used to say there were so few Democrats around in those days, the party could hold a convention in a phone booth.

But JFK changed all that.

"When Jack Kennedy ran (for president), everyone enrolled as a Democrat. The whole city changed into a Democratic stronghold," Gillis says.

In the 1960 election, the Kennedy/Lyndon Johnson Democratic ticket defeated Republicans Richard Nixon and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. handily in Quincy. The Democrats collected 26,990 votes to the Republicans 18,163. Turnout here was the highest ever with 92 percent – 45,565 cast ballots out of 49,447 registered.

Today, there are marginally more unenrolled voters than Democrats in Quincy. Republicans are a distant third. But many of those unenrolled are former Democrats.

Gillis has attended one other Presidential inaugural: the first for President Clinton back in 1993.

But it pales to 1961.

"Clinton's was nothing like Kennedy's," he says, shaking his head. "Our seats weren't good. We were way back.

"The Kennedy inaugural was the greatest time I've ever had in my life."

Scenes From Yesterday

HOTEL PANDORA, ISLAND AND COTTAGES, HOUGHS NECK, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920's postcard showing the property of what was then the Pandora Hotel that was on Fensmere Avenue at the end of Houghs Neck. The hotel built in 1900 was originally known as the Fensmere and changed names over the years until it was demolished in the 1930's. The pond or lake was originally a natural inlet from Quincy Bay until the Metropolitan Sewer Commission built the sewer pipe known as the "Dike" out to Nut Island and closed it off. A tidal gate under the Dike allowed this lake to fill with salt water. Hotel guests used the lake for canoeing. After the hotel was gone the lake was filled. Later the City took the property and built the Great Hill School here. Today, the school is gone and this is the city-owned Brill Field Park with a softball field, in-line skating park and a tot-lot playground. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Mayor Will Reintroduce West Of The Tracks Plan

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The new 1960-1961 City Council found itself facing one of the most important municipal issues in years at its first meeting when Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa re-introduced the necessary taking orders for the West-of-the-Tracks proposal.

This Week 1960 51 Years Ago

Councillor William C. Ellis, the new council president, has indicated a desire to set up a second public hearing on the question so that the council can take definite action without further delay.

A second hearing was necessitated by opposition registered at the initial hearing near the end of the year.

JOB ELIMINATED;
$346,000 TRIMMED OFF CITY BUDGET

Mayor Della Chiesa eliminated one full time job and cut $346,000 off the requested Appropriations of department heads as he began shaping up his annual budget. The job eliminated was that of the full-time registrar of voters, which paid a salary of $3,640 a year. The mayor said he was replacing it with a part-time job at $500 a year.

The mayor raised the salary of the planning director from $7,750 to $9,000 in his budget. The mayor also said that he would not fill vacated positions but would hire seasonal help during the year.

STUDY ASKED ON USE OF LAND FILL AS A DUMP

The use of sanitary landfill methods as a means of abating nuisances reported at the city dump in Hitchcock Quarry was advocated by Councillor George B. McDonald.

Councillor McDonald introduced a resolve requesting the mayor to submit to the council at the next regular meeting the necessary orders to provide a landfill operation to cover the existing dump at the quarry now used by Marinucci Brothers, the rubbish contractor.

Cost estimates prepared by the engineering department indicated the cost to cover the dump with one-foot of fill would be around $4,500.

Quincy And MLK's Dream

As a police officer since 1985, I usually end up working on MLK Day which is probably the way it should be since the work of building a better society never takes a day off. This year's breakfast honoring Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was held at the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

For the past 14 years my friend Ann Yeomans and the Quincy Human Rights Commission has hosted the annual breakfast honoring Dr. King, both the man and his work. This year, the breakfast was in jeopardy due to a lack of funds but then Kathy Quigley, the Center's director, said the breakfast was too important not to hold. "We can't have something like this not happen," she said.

The 15th annual breakfast happened because Quigley's determination made it happen. She is an example of what it was Dr. King lived, worked and died for.

Dr. King believed that a nation "that will keep people in slavery for 244 years will 'thingify' them and make them things. His Dream was for America to be born again.

How far have we come from actualizing King's dream?

How close are we today than we were in 1968?

I was only 19 years old when Dr. King was gunned down. My birthday that May was also but a month prior to the assassination of Bobby Kennedy.

That year was a real awakening for me and many Americans.

I have held on to a photo taken by Bill Hudson for AP taken on May 3, 1963 showing the police in Birmingham, Alabama, using German police dogs to attack civil rights protestors.

On May 4, the following day (my birthday), President Kennedy held a White House meeting discussing this very photo which had appeared that day in The New York Times.

I can truly say during the years I called Quincy my home (1984-2007), I saw Quincy grow in many ways to being a better city. The city is far more diverse today. There has been very little cultural clash as new immigrants move to its neighborhoods.

Things are not perfect.

We're not out there holding hands and singing Kumbiya but the city has become more accepting of newcomers among it.

Dr. King probably never heard of Quincy, Massachusetts, but he must be proud of it today looking down on all that has happened since 1968 when the Dream refused to die.

It remains alive because of folks like Ann Yeomans and Kathy Quigley.

The Marine Corps League Also Seeks New Members

Caddy Detachment Serves Veterans And The Community

By JOE REARDON

The William R. Caddy Detachment #124 Marine Corps League continues to tirelessly work in helping veterans of all branches of the military, all the while seeking out new members.

The namesake of the league attended North Quincy High before joining the Marines as a 19 year old. Caddy was killed during the seizure of Iwo Jima against the Japanese on March 3, 1945 serving as a rifleman with Company I, Third Battalion.

Caddy was presented the Medal of Honor posthumously by President Harry S. Truman. In his description of Caddy, he called the young Marine "Stouthearted and indomitable...."

Caddy's act in saving members of his platoon was nothing short of total selflessness and heroism.

"Private First Class Caddy boldly defied shattering Japanese machine-gun and small-arms fire to move forward with his platoon leader and another Marine during a determined advance of his company through an isolated sector and, gaining the comparative safety of a shell hole, took temporary cover with his comrades," wrote Truman.

"Immediately pinned down by deadly sniper fire from a well-concealed position, he made several unsuccessful attempts to again move forward and then, joined by his platoon leader, engaged the enemy in a fierce exchange of hand grenades until a Japanese grenade fell in the shell hole.

Fearlessly disregarding all personal danger, Private First Class Caddy instantly threw himself upon the deadly missile, absorbing the exploding charge in his body and protecting the others from serious injury."

Founded in 1946, the league currently has 250 members, 180 of which are Marine veterans. The league is open to all branches of the military, as well as non-military individuals.

The organization became a reality in 1946 when Marines from Quincy and some members from the old South Shore Detachment in Hingham joined forces and came up with the idea of starting a new Marine Corps League Detachment in Quincy.

The decision to name the club after Caddy was an easy one.

The detachment received its charter in October of 1946 and the meetings were ultimately held at Walter Scott Hall on Franklin Street. George Lander was the first commandant of the club, which had 100 members, including 12 women. When the Korean War broke out, the Caddy lost a third of its members who were called back into service.

Detachment member James R. McIntyre, a state representative at the time, was the driving force behind getting legislation passed to rename Treasure Island Park on Quincy Shore Drive, in honor of PFC Caddy. The parade held in conjunction with the dedication was one of the largest ever held in Quincy.

Donations from local businesses enabled club members in 2001 to renovate the building at 111 Newbury Ave., to be used as the current quarters. The building was previously used by the D.A.V., and both the police and fire departments.

Sergeant-At-Arms Bob Godfrey is looking to increase the number of members in the club in 2011. "I'm really going to take that on this year," said Godfrey.

The Brockton VA Hospital has been a beneficiary of the club since its inception in 1946. Members have collected books for the hospital's patients, done various volunteer work and run Bingo nights at the prestigious hospital. The club also makes up care packages to ship to troops overseas. In total, more than $10,000 has been donated to the Care Packs organization by the Caddy group.

"From a group our size, that's pretty good," said Commandant Donald W. Sharp.

Helping the veterans at the hospital is one of the club's favorite duties. "After going to the VA hospital there is a lot of satisfaction among everyone," Sharp said.

The club is also involved in Toys For Tots and works with the Fore River Young Marines, a color guard unit that attends military ceremonies on holidays.

"Not all the kids who go in there go into the Marine Corps," Sharp said.

Club meetings are held on the first Wednesday of every month. "It's a well-run business meeting," said Godfrey. "There's a misconception about these places that guys just come down and drink."

For more information on the detachment and how to become a member, call Godfrey at (617) 750-5900.

Social

To Benefit Interfaith Social Services

John Hancock Plunge At Wollaston Beach Saturday

The John Hancock "Plunge" will take place Saturday, Jan. 22 at Wollaston Beach.

Registration will begin at 11:30 a.m. on Wollaston Beach across from the bath house, Quincy Shore Drive.

Prizes will be awarded to the oldest and youngest participant, the person or group bringing in the largest amount of donations, and for the best costume.

This is the 5th annual plunge that the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, with the assistance of The Friends of Wollaston Beach and the Department of Conservation and Recreation, are holding for the benefit of Interfaith Social Services programs that help neighbors in need.

Last year's event raised approximately $8,500. Organizers have a set a goal of $10,000 this year.

Those unable to "take the plunge" may support the event by cheering on those who will take a dip in Quincy Bay. There will also be a pail for cash or check donations as well as containers for nonperishable food items that will be donated to The Pantry Shelf food bank.

For more information, call 617-479-2142.

The plunge is coordinated by Chickie Abdallah, member and treasurer of the Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission.

Classical Music Seminar At Crane Library Jan. 24

A free classical music seminar will be held Monday, Jan. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The seminar is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The Jan. 24 seminar will explore Modern Music from Debussy to Case. It will focus on the stylistic trends and developments in classical music since the beginning of the 20th century, concluding with an introduction to the music of Quincy's own contemporary composer Delvyn Case.

Case is a composer and conductor who teaches music at Wheaton College. He is also the music director of the Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union, Quincy Summer Singers, the Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra and the Great Woods Chamber Orchestra.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

'No Impact Man' Film Screening Tonight

The 2008 documentary film "No Impact Man" will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

After the film, representatives from the City of Quincy and Energy Smart will discuss Quincy's trash and recycling efforts. Free waste-saving products will be available for attendees.

New York City writer Colin Beavan has big plans for his new book, "No Impact Man." He decides on a grand experiment to live one year with as little impact on the environment as possible.

He turns off the electricity, stops making garbage, and gives up TV and take-out, but he can't do it alone. His young daughter and caffeine-loving, retail-obsessed, TV-addicted wife must join him.

Can less really be more?

The 93-minute film is not rated.

The screening is sponsored by the library and Energy Smart Quincy.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Quincy Medical Center Appoints New Board Members

The Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Board of Trustees announces the appointment of two new Board members: John W. Dalton, MD, and Phyllis Papani Godwin, both of Quincy.

"We are very pleased to add the wealth of knowledge and experience of these two individuals to the QMC Board of Trustees," said Grace Murphy-McAuliffe, QMC Board Chairwoman. "This is a very important time for Quincy Medical Center, and as we continue to work toward financial stability and chart the course for the hospitals' future, the leadership and insight that John and Phyllis have to offer is invaluable, and their willingness to give their time to such a task is much appreciated."

PHYLLIS GODWIN

JOHN W. DALTON, MD

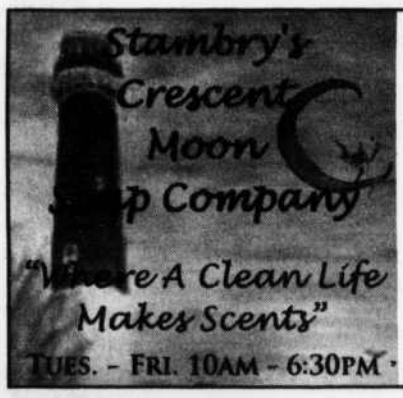
Dr. Dalton is a long-time member of the QMC medical staff and specializes in gastroenterology and internal medicine. He is a clinical instructor at Tufts University School of Medicine.

Phyllis Godwin is owner & CEO of Granite City Electric Supply Company, Inc. in Quincy. In addition to her business, she serves on the boards of many professional and community organizations, including the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, South Shore YMCA, Electric Institute of New England and the Quincy 2000 Corporation.

She has also served on the QMC President's Advisory Board.

Girl Scout Cookies On Sale

Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts have kicked off their cookie sale drive.



The drive culminates March 15.

The sale of cookies has helped Girl Scouts set goals, develop people skills and learn business ethics such as money management and decision-making. Support of the Girl Scout Cookie Sale allows girls and troops to fund their activities and helps the Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts provide high-quality opportunities throughout the year.

Proceeds from the cookie sales also assist with recruiting and training volunteer adults to work with girls, improving and maintaining camps, as well as keeping events, programs and camp fees for all members affordable.

There are two new cookies this year. The Shout Out with zero trans-fat and no artificial colors or preservatives; and Thanks-A-Lots which are packaged in an eco-friendly box.

Cookies are available for a limited time only.

Easy Recipes With Favorite Ingredients

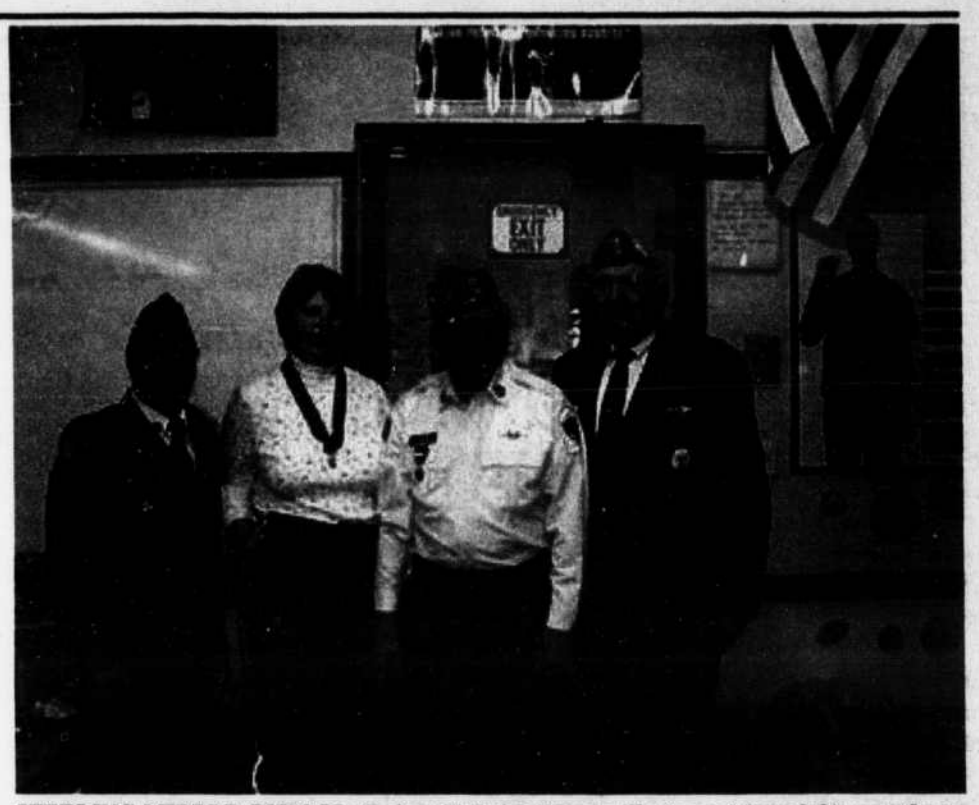
During the holiday season, I found two easy but different recipes to do, both containing ingredients that I enjoy. One is a great easy way to make sautéed cabbage (favorite), and the other recipe includes blue cheese (favorite of many).

Usually when I cook cabbage, I just cut it up in pieces. But today's recipe calls for shredded cabbage, as you would do if you were making coleslaw.

SAUTÉED CABBAGE – The Easy Way
1 head of cabbage
2 fresh tomatoes (diced)
1 small onion (chopped)
Enough olive oil for sautéing. (A mixture of butter and oil can be used.)
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut the cabbage head in half, and then shred it. It makes a huge pile but as we know, if shrinks quite a bit when cooked.

In hot oil, sauté the onions for couple of minutes. Add the cabbage and the diced tomatoes and cook until the cabbage is tender. It looks so colorful with the addition of the tomatoes.



BLUE CHEESE WALNUT BITES
1-½ cups flour
2 to 3 tablespoons coarse black pepper
8 ounces blue cheese (or Gorgonzola)
¼ cup butter (softened)
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 egg yolks slightly beaten

Combine the flour and pepper. Cut in the cheese and butter until mixture resembles coarse breadcrumbs.

Add the walnuts and the egg yolks and stir until well blended. Form the mixture into a ball, and knead until well combined. Divide the dough in half. Shape each half into a log about 9 inches long. Wrap in plastic and chill for about two hours.

When ready to cook, preheat oven to 425 degrees. Cut each log into ¼ inch thick slice. Place slices about an inch apart on an ungreased baking sheet. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes or until bottoms and edges are golden brown. Transfer to a wire rack and serve warm.

If any are leftover, they can be quickly heated in the microwave.

Sterling Teacher Christine Prendeville Receives Americanism Medal

At a recent ceremony at the Sterling Middle School in Quincy, teacher Christine Prendeville was awarded the American Legion's "Americanism Medal."

A citation, recognizing Prendeville's "outstanding efforts in motivating and organizing the faculty, staff and students at the Sterling Middle School . . . to stage a salute to America's veterans at their annual Veterans Day Assembly," accompanied the medal. The citation was signed by the American Legion's Commander of the Department of Massachusetts, Frank McDonald, as well as George Bouchard, Commander of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post, who made the presentation.

The ceremony was held in Prendeville's classroom before her very excited students and was attended by Principal Christine Barrett and several staffers and other teachers.

Also attending was Quincy Sun photographer Robert Noble, who took a photo of the event and also added his own thanks for the assembly, which is staged every year the day before Veterans Day.

Noble presented Prendeville with a disc of photos he took at this year's assembly and also informed the students that he is a Past State Commander of the American Ex-Prisoners of War and that the day marked the 66th anniversary of his first day as a POW in World War II in 1944 – the day before his 19th birthday.

Bouchard concluded the event with a very personal thank you to Prendeville, the faculty and staff, and especially the students for their yearly efforts.

Photography Exhibit At Crane Public Library

An exhibit of photography by Quincy photographer Michael Mulkern is on display through Jan. 31 in the Coletti Reading Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The exhibit features photographs of beautiful places, from Boston to the South Shore to more remote locations around the world.

As a merchant marine deck officer, Mulkern has had the opportunity to take photographs all over the world on his professional travels.

One of his photographs was chosen for National Geographics "Daily Dozen" in December, 2007. Others have been shown on the television program "Chronicle."

Coughlin, Gutro Seek Update On Neponset River Access Plans

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Great river views are part of the allure of the 12-story apartment complex at the foot of the Neponset River Bridge.

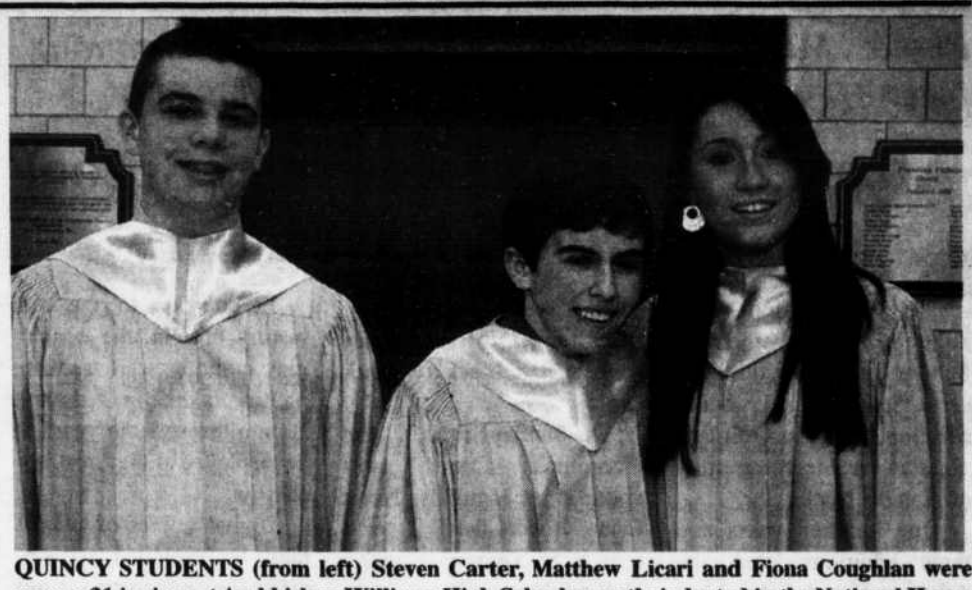
Tenants not only get a great view, a concierge, Berber carpeting and tile floors, a fitness center, and the Internet, but all the other amenities of luxury living and a convenient commute to Boston from Quincy.

Now City Council President Kevin Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro are asking what Quincy got from the deal that allowed the 280 luxury apartments to be built on the banks of the Neponset River at 2 Hancock St., Quincy.

Coughlin said Monday that the original developer agreed to construct a walkway that would allow the public access to the riverfront. That walkway would allow public access to the riverfront from the Adams Inn and conclude at Squantum Point Park.

To date, the walkway has not been constructed nor have other benefits materialized, according to Coughlin who said the developers pledged not only public access to the river, but salt marsh restoration, benches, lighting and parking.

Both Coughlin and Gutro want an update on the progress and the plans for the building and property which was sold to Northwestern Mutual Life in 2007.



Gutro said that he and Coughlin planned to ask City Council to schedule a hearing with all parties on the issues. The council discussion was set for Tuesday after The Quincy Sun deadline.

One specific issue involves the owners' recent payment of $100,000 to the Neponset River Watershed Association in lieu of completing the required agreements.

"What's going to be done with that money?" asked Coughlin.

Gutro said he is also concerned that any buyout funds "be set aside for coastal improvements to Quincy" and "public access to the Neponset River."

The Assessors' report lists the address of the building at 2 Quincy Shore Dr. However, the property is listed in real estate ads as 2 Hancock St. The most recent record sets the valuation at $60 million and records the last sale of the property at $75.5 million to Northwestern Mutual.

Three Quincy Students Inducted Into National Honor Society At AWHS

Three students from Quincy were among the 31 new members of National Honor Society recently inducted at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

They are:

Steven Carter, Fiona Coughlan and Matthew Licari.

The National Honor Society recognizes students from demonstrating high standards of scholarship, service, leadership and character.

"Their commitment came at a cost, and that commitment has painted a picture of excellence that will live forever in our school and will live forever in their name," said Dr. Carmen Mariano, president at Archbishop Williams High School of the inductees.

"You are more than students, you are scholars."

Photos, Memories Sought For Centennial Celebration; Open House At St. Thomas Aquinas Hall Jan. 30

Atherton Hough Elementary School To Mark 100th Anniversary

In 1911, the four-room Atherton Hough Elementary School opened its doors to serve the growing number of children living in Quincy's popular seaside community of Houghs Neck.

One hundred years and three additions later, the Atherton Hough School has become an integral part of the tight-knit Houghs Neck community, and plans are underway to mark the centennial of the school that has educated generations of neighborhood children.

"So many generations of Hough's Neck families have attended Atherton Hough that the school is really a common bond that unites local residents," said Principal Dorothy Greene, who noted that Atherton Hough is the oldest elementary school building still operating today. "We wanted to celebrate the school's history and the role it has played in the community."

To that end, the school is inviting Atherton Hough alumni to be part of an oral history project being conducted in collaboration with QATV and the Hough's Neck Community Council, which is concurrently planning a series of events to mark the 375th anniversary of Hough's Neck's founding.

On Sunday, Jan. 30, the Community Council will sponsor a Hough's Neck Open House from 2 to 4 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow St.

At the open house, Atherton Hough students and alumni will have an opportunity to be videotaped sharing their memories of attending the school and of growing up in Houghs Neck.

The videotaped interviews will then be edited by QATV for presentation at the school's Centennial Celebration, to be held in April.

"This is a great opportunity for Atherton Hough students and alumni to help preserve the school's history by sharing their memories, both of the school and of Houghs Neck," said Greene, who this year proudly celebrates her 21st year as Atherton Hough's principal.

"We hope everyone will come out on Jan. 30, share their memories and then join us at the Centennial Celebration in April."

In addition to the oral history project, the centennial committee is seeking photos taken at Atherton Hough through the years to be displayed at the April celebration.

Digital copies of photos may be e-mailed to jennifer.logue@comcast.net or posted on the Atherton Hough Alumni Facebook page; printed photos may be mailed to the Atherton Hough School, c/o Centennial Celebration, 1084 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169. Photos should include contact information so that they may be returned.

The Atherton Hough PTO is also currently selling commemorative centennial bricks that will be used to create a new walkway at the Manet Ave. main entrance to the school.

Bricks are $50 each and may be engraved with three lines of text to honor an Atherton Hough graduate, loved one or community group.

For more information on ordering a brick or the Atherton Hough Centennial Celebration, contact the school at (617) 984-8797.

Storm Costs Up To $750,000; More Snow Expected Friday

ZOE GROSSFELD, 4, bundles up to help shovel the finishing touches of her walkway on Knollwood Rd., Squantum, after nearly a foot of snow fell on Quincy Jan. 12.

Public Works crews continued their assault on City roads this week as more winter weather moved in just a week after the second major storm of the young winter dumped nearly a foot of snow on Quincy.

Another three inches of snow Tuesday followed by ice and rain shifted the operation to salt and sand trucks from the largely plow-driven operation of last week's storm, which officials estimate cost about $350,000 to handle. That's on top of the estimated $400,000 spent on the blizzard the day after Christmas, according to City officials.

"We are having quite an early winter, and we will continue to remain focused throughout the season on ensuring our City is open for business regardless of what Mother Nature throws at us," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "Our emergency teams are prepared, we are meeting regularly and adjusting the game plan when appropriate, and our crews will be out for as long as necessary."

On Tuesday, the DPW was preparing for potential flooding issues with the snow and ice followed by as much as an inch of rain. Crews spent the day clearing storm drains and catch basins, and preparing dozens of pumps to be dispatched to flooded areas of the City.

"There is no place for the water to go with all the snow, so an inch of rain can be more problematic than it would be otherwise, but we will be staying on top of it," said Department of Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville.

The City used its new anti-winter weapon prior to the latest lash of weather, dropping a brine solution to pre-treat road that prevented main roads form icing over early on Tuesday. Quincy is one of only a few cities in Massachusetts to use the solution.

Crews were expected to be out later in the night on Tuesday and Wednesday, dropping salt and sand on icy trouble-spots around the City.

And more snow is expected on Friday, officials said.

For last week's storm, the City dispatched more a total of more than 120 plows and other equipment and dropped more than 1,000 tons of salt and sand on roads for a storm that dropped an official 11.7 inches of snow.

Prendeville said the DPW's snow operation team made several adjustments to ensure that problem areas cited in the Dec. 26th storm showed substantial improvement. He said for the most part, the adjustments worked, particularly on the main streets such as Quincy Avenue, Billings Road and Washington Street.

"When we identify problems, we don't just do the same thing over again. We make the right adjustments, and that happened in this latest storm," Prendeville said.

Downtown Legislation Heads To Beacon Hill

be built to "green" LEED standards, will create several new civic spaces within Quincy Center, includes 500 mature street trees, and will see Town Brook Culvert restored to a new location where it can be exposed to daylight and enjoyed as a public space.

The primary plan calls for $277 million in public infrastructure improvements as part of the project, including new underground utilities and public parking facilities with 3,500 spaces. The City and Street-Works are working to secure $50 million in state and federal grant funds for a portion of the improvements, with the remainder to be financed by new taxes and parking revenue from the downtown project.

Under the agreement presented to the Council, called a Land Disposition Agreement, Street-Works will pay the City $30 million to cover downtown-related debt already incurred through construction of the Quincy Center Conourse and other related redevelopment costs. In return, the agreement allows for the primary project to be expanded by up to 750,000 square feet of development and an additional $11.5 million in public improvements.

Under the plan, the City will use state urban redevelopment law known as Chapter 121A as the property tax structure for the development. After development, the City expects to receive $10.1 million in property tax revenue. Of that, 6.8 million will go toward paying for the public improvements, and $3.6 million will come straight the City's general fund.

Other new revenues such as new meals taxes, hotel room taxes and property taxes outside the immediate project area is expected to generate at least total of $7.1 million in new revenue beyond what will be used to pay for the public improvements. In the end, the agreement will mean a 4 to 1 ratio of private spending to public investment, and a figure substantially higher than most traditional urban redevelopment projects, Koch said.

At no time will the City's general fund be responsible for paying for any of the public improvements, according to the agreement, officials said.

450-Foot Turbine At Center Of Court Complaint

Quarry Hills Charges Milton Reneged On 50-Year Lease

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Town of Milton is cutting new deals and reneging on a legal 50-year lease, according to Attorney Jeffrey Tocchio who represents Quarry Hills Associates, Inc., (QHA) and filed a 27-page complaint against Milton in Norfolk Superior Court, Dedham in November.

Tocchio said Monday that QHA's lawsuit against Milton will likely be heard in the next eight to ten weeks, possibly in March.

Before that occurs, Milton's Conservation Commission must review the proposal. The Commission will discuss several environmental issues at this week's meeting scheduled after The Quincy Sun deadline.

The QHA lawsuit seeks an injunction aimed at preventing Milton from proceeding with its plans to erect a 450-foot wind turbine atop its former landfill site near the border of the Quarry Hills Golf Course.

"It's literally a few hundred feet away from three holes," said Tocchio, adding later, "Quarry Hills is going to suffer."

"The immediate issue is that Milton and their contractors are continuing to enter on the leasehold," Tocchio said, adding that Milton is re-writing its 50-year lease with QHA.

Tocchio charged Milton first claimed a right to use the road on the leased property, and then took the issue to their Town Meeting to reaffirm that belief and retake the access.

"Milton is looking to recut the deal unilaterally and arbitrarily," Tocchio said, "Milton made one deal. Now it's looking to say we can make more."

Golfers are not the only ones who will be negatively impacted, according to Tocchio who said that trails for hikers and horseback riders are carved out just below the proposed wind turbine site.

In addition, Tocchio said there are major conservation issues involving a vernal pond onsite and the proximity of a wetlands buffer zone.

The proposed wind turbine would be a massive structure, according to Tocchio who predicted a turbine span of 90 meters which exceeds the span of a 747 airplane from wingtip to wingtip.

Tocchio suggested that the turbine would be similar to having Air Force One spinning around above golfers, hikers and horseback riders.

"Horseback riders and hikers will pass beneath the blades," said Tocchio who said trails carved to the Blue Hills Reservation lie directly below the proposed turbine.

Milton's Town Administrator Kevin Mearn said Tuesday he was disappointed that QHA had filed the lawsuit.

"It's very unfortunate that Quarry Hills have moved forward," said Mearn. "We've kept Quarry Hills in the loop since the beginning."

In addition, Mearn said the turbine would not be on land leased to Quarry Hills.

As for the conservation issues, Mearn said that those issues will be addressed when the Conservation Commission issues an Order of Conditions.

shifting the site southward will also add about 20,000 square feet to the total parcel to be used for the new school, officials said.

The project's design team is beginning its work, and the City Council will also be asked at a later date to approve the full financing plan for school, which will be at least several million less than expected if the City takes part in the state's Model School Program, officials said.

In collaboration with the Massachusetts School Building Authority, the Model School Program encourages cost-effective design and construction for school buildings in return for a higher state reimbursement on the cost of school projects.

Central could become the first model middle school in the state, and that could mean the state would end up paying for nearly 75 percent of the new school.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Jan. 12, 2011, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Officers Daniel Church and William Lanergan were dispatched to Holmes Street to check on the well being of a female resident.

LT. DAN MINTON

Communications said that a caller, identified as the father of the female resident, spoke with his daughter on the phone and she informed him that she was having a fight with her boyfriend. The phone then went "dead." He said that he tried several times to call her back but was unsuccessful.

Upon arrival, the Officers were met by a male who was clearly intoxicated. His eyes were glassy, he was unsteady on his feet, his speech was severely slurred and there was a strong odor of alcoholic beverage. When asked if anyone else was in the apartment, the male suspect said he was alone and was sleeping when the Officers knocked on the door. The Officers were allowed in the apartment and then asked where his girlfriend was.

The suspect said that she left two hours earlier and that he was worried about her because she was extremely intoxicated and driving her car. This was inconsistent with the information that the telephone call was disconnected only 30 minutes earlier. Officer Lanergan found a broken Blackberry cell phone sitting on the window seal.

When asked, the suspect said that he and his girlfriend were having an argument and she snapped her phone in half, and then left. He told us that he didn't know where she was, but repeatedly assured the Officers that no physical confrontation had taken place. When asked, the male identified himself as Bobby Kildman, providing a date of birth and social security number. The suspect provided his girlfriend's name, adding that they had been together for six years, that she was his future wife, however, he did not know what type of car she drove. After several unsuccessful attempts to determine the victim's destination, the Officers asked the suspect to call the Police when she returns.

As the Officers began to leave, the suspect asked the Officers for their names. Officer Church gave his name and responded to the suspect's hand out to shake. The suspect said, "Officer Church, I'm Mr. (name withheld) " Officer Church then asked him why he gave the name of Kildman when asked to identify himself. He said that he is "scared of the police."

The suspect provided his DOB and SSN, adding that he never had a driver's license. Communications stated that the suspect has a suspended license. Officer Lanergan used his cruiser's MDT to view a picture of the suspect to confirm his identity. Officer Church asked the suspect why he wasn't being honest and he said that he didn't want to get his girlfriend in trouble because she was drinking and driving.

When asked for the birth date of his girlfriend, the suspect said he did not know, even though they had dated for six years and she was going to be his wife. Officer Lambert, the Police Dispatcher, notified the Officers that the victim informed her family that she just checked into the Adam's Inn. Officer Dan Francis went to the hotel to interview the victim, who stated that her boyfriend/the suspect strangled her and broke her phone. Based on this information, the suspect was arrested and transported to the station by Officer Lanergan.

Officer Church met with the victim at the hotel and offered her an emergency protective order, but she did not want to pursue the option, stating that she would go to the courthouse to seek an order. The victim did not appear intoxicated but was very distraught and began crying several times as she told the Officer what had happened. She said that at approximately 5:30 p.m., the suspect demanded that she go into the bedroom with him.

When she refused, he wrapped his right arm around her neck from behind and began to "choke" her. She said that she was unable to breathe and thought that he was going to kill her. She said that she was only able get away after a struggle, adding that if he had not been so severely intoxicated, she would not have been able to break free. The suspect then punched a hole in the wall of the apartment.

At approximately 6 p.m., the suspect again demanded that the victim go into the bedroom, but again she refused and then called her father. The suspect ripped the phone away from her and broke it in half. As she pushed him away out of fear for her safety, the suspect slapped her in the face.

As the victim tried to leave the apartment, he blocked her. She was able to get around the suspect and ran down the stairs with him in pursuit. While on the stairs, he grabbed the back of her shirt and ripped it off of her. She continued to flee with no shirt to her car and left the area.

The victim said that they have only known each other for approximately six months and have lived together for approximately two months. She stated that he strangled her several times in the past and once, approximately two weeks ago, held a knife to her throat. She said that she threatened to call the police on several occasions but he told her that if she did, he would "kill whoever shows up." She said that she didn't want officers to get hurt, so she didn't call.

The victim then refused to provide further information about previous incidents, saying that she did not want to ruin his life because of a few bad decisions.

The suspect, a 31 year old Quincy resident, was charged with: Attempted Murder by way of Strangulation, Assault and Battery (Domestic), Defacing Property, Defacing Property (Wall) and Obstruction of Justice by way of Misleading Police Officers with intent to Impede a Criminal Investigation.

COLD-WEATHER Car Care

AAA: Gas Prices Up Another Penny

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are up for the seventh consecutive week, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's Jan. 17 survey of prices in Massachusetts found self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $3.09⁹ per gallon, one cent more than last week. The current price is even with the national average for self serve unleaded of $3.09. A year ago at this time the Massachusetts average price was $2.72.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 21 cents, from a low of $2.98 to a high of $3.19. AAA advises motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area, and to make sure they and their passengers buckle up — every time.

AAA Fuel Saving Tip

Drive the speed limit. The U.S. Department of Energy reports that each 5 mph driven over 60 mph is like paying an additional 24 cents per gallon for gas.

Strong Battery Boosts Winter Car Starts

One of the best ways to protect against winter car trouble is to be certain your battery is fully charged and in proper working condition, according to AAA Southern New England.

"When the temperature drops to near zero, the number of calls AAA receives from stranded motorists soars," said AAA Director of Automotive Services Field Operations David Dampf. "The most common cause of these cold-weather breakdowns is a weak or dead battery."

AAA recommends motorists have batteries tested to closely monitor its condition, especially batteries more than two years old. "Although batteries can carry warranties of four years or more, a warranty is no guarantee an older battery will continue to work in severe weather," Mr. Dampf said.

The most common sign of a weak battery is an unusual sound coming from the starter motor when the ignition key is turned, indicating difficulty in starting the engine.

If the vehicle is difficult to start, check that the battery connections are tight and no corrosion is present on the battery terminal. To remove corrosion, use an old toothbrush to clean the cable connectors and terminals with a solution of baking soda and water. Next, inspect the tension of all drive belts. As a general rule they should flex no more than one-half inch. If the battery's fluid level can be checked, make certain the fluid covers the battery plates. If no problems are found and the vehicle is still difficult to start, drive to a service station or auto parts store to have the battery and charging system tested and, if necessary, replaced.

In addition to weak or dead batteries, starting problems can be caused by malfunctioning alternators or starter motors. A qualified repair facility can make an accurate diagnosis and repair.

If the vehicle will not start, use caution and follow instructions in the owner's manual when attempting a jump start. If unsure about the proper procedure, call AAA or another qualified professional for assistance.

To help avoid winter breakdowns, AAA recommends motorists have their cars and trucks thoroughly inspected before cold weather arrives. In addition to the battery, fluids, belts, hoses, filters and tires should all be checked.

Because of the difficult driving conditions often encountered in the winter, motorists should also be sure their lighting systems, brakes and windshield wipers are functioning properly.

Different Vehicles Require Different Winter Driving Habits

Motorists should be aware that different types of vehicles have particular operating characteristics that change the way they handle on icy or snow-covered roads, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Knowing the different winter-weather capabilities of a vehicle can mean the difference between a safe trip and serious trouble," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Motorists should carefully read their owner's manual for information on their vehicle's equipment and handling characteristics."

Front-wheel-drive vehicles generally handle better than rear-wheel-drive vehicles on slippery roads because the weight of the engine is on the drive wheels, which improves traction. The back end of rear-wheel-drive cars tends to slide from side-to-side during turns on icy roads.

While many motorists are now driving sport-utility vehicles and light trucks that can be excellent for driving in difficult conditions, AAA warns drivers not to become over-confident.

"All-wheel and four-wheel-drive vehicles make it easier to get moving on snow-covered roads, but they don't stop any quicker than other vehicles," Mr. Paul said. "Drivers still need to slow down and keep a safe distance behind the vehicle in front of them."

Drivers of pickup trucks with rear-wheel-drive need to be especially cautious on slick roads because these vehicles have very little weight over the wheels that are propelling the vehicle and are prone to rear-wheel skids on slippery roads.

A vehicle's braking system also determines how motorists should operate in winter weather. Anti-lock brake systems (ABS) can provide a significant stopping advantage on slick roads, but are only effective if properly used. When stopping a vehicle with anti-lock brakes in slippery conditions, motorists should apply steady pressure to the brake pedal. The ABS will automatically pump the brakes to keep the wheels from locking and the vehicle from skidding.

Drivers of cars without ABS should apply firm, steady pressure on the brake pedal to the "threshold" of locking the brakes, to avoid wheel lock-up in slippery conditions.

Additionally, many new cars feature traction control, which prevents wheel spin during acceleration. This is very helpful when initially trying to get moving on slippery roads. Many cars are equipped with stability control, which helps prevent skidding. Traction control, ABS systems and stability control all make winter driving easier, but remember that none of these can overcome the basic laws of physics.

John Gillis To Receive Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Citizen Award

tion.

"John Gillis is the epitome of what a good citizen is and has provided outstanding community service in a myriad of capacities for more than a half century," said Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth. "The Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Citizenship Award acknowleges the good deeds John has done for countless people – many unknown to the public – while also serving with distinction for more than 30 years as Quincy city clerk and another 18 years as a Norfolk County commissioner.

"John is very well respected and most deserving of this honor."

Bosworth also congratulated the other nominees for the award. "Being nominated for this award is indeed an honor in itself. The Sun also recognizes our readers who took the time to submit nominations. This award would not be possible without them."

Those serving on the judging panel this year were Maralin Manning, director of Business Development for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce; Bette Campbell, executive director of Quincy Access TV; City Clerk Joseph Shea and Robert Bosworth, representing his father who received The Sun award posthumously last year.

Gillis was nominated for the award by Jane Stevens of Whaler Lane in Quincy.

"John Gillis is a man for others," Stevens said. " As a public servant for over 50 years, he always cares about the down and out. John feels everybody deserves someone to care about them."

Gillis says the job of city clerk – which he served from 1959 to 1992 – is the best in city government because "you can do favors for people. You're always helping someone out.

JUDGES WHO SELECTED John M. Gillis as the rccipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award (from left): City Clerk Joseph Shea, Quincy Access TV Executive Director Bette Campbell, Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth representing his father, Henry, who received the award posthumously last year; and Maralin Manning, director of Business Development, Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

"You can help the little guy."

His longtime friend –the late Henry Bosworth – once wrote about Gillis: "As city clerk, he bent over backwards to accommodate the public. And wearing his other hat as chairman of the City License Board, he was a champion of the little guy – especially one who needed a license to start a small business."

During his tenure as clerk, it was Gillis who advocated for punch-card ballots to replace the old paper ballots. The city finally switched to punch-cards during the administration of former Mayor Francis McCauley who along with Gillis agreed retiring paper ballots would save the city money and pay for themselves – which it did.

The city has since moved on to the opt-scan voting method.

Gillis, who is 85, was born in Quincy and raised in Quincy Point. He attended the Adams Elementary School and Quincy Point Junior High School before graduating from Quincy High School in 1943. He then enlisted in the Marines and saw action in the Battle of Saipan, a battle in the Pacific campaign of World War II.

After the war in 1947, Gillis became a Quincy firefighter and was stationed at Central Headquarters. But six months later, Gillis opted to go to college. He graduated in 1953 from Northeastern University with a degree in accounting.

Gillis worked as a state auditor from 1952 to 1956 before becoming assistant city clerk in 1957. Two years later, Gillis was unanimously elected city clerk by the City Council succeeding the late Allen Cole. It was an historic occasion: Gillis became the first Democrat to serve as city clerk in Quincy history. At age 34, he was also one of the youngest.

During his 33-year tenure as city clerk – the longest ever in Quincy – Gillis served during the administrations of seven mayors: Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Frank McCauley and James Sheets.

In 1992, Gillis stepped down as city clerk but he did not retire from public service. Instead, he started a new chapter in his public service career winning a four-year term as a Norfolk County commissioner that fall. He has been re-elected four times (1996, 2000, 2004 and 2008) and when he wraps up this current term he will have served 20 years as a commissioner. He is undecided whether he will seek a sixth term next year.

As a Norfolk County commissioner, Gillis has advocated for $30 million in state funding to expand the Norfolk County Agricultural High School. Gillis says enlarging the building would expand enrollment and allow more students to attend the school. He also favors expanding the function facility at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

Gillis has been long-active in many community and veterans organizations.

He is a member of the Quincy Democratic City Committee, a former commander of the Quincy Veterans Council and a former grand knight of the Knights of Columbus.

He also is a member of the Quincy Lodge of Elks, the George F. Bryan VFW Post, Caddy Detachment Marine Corps League and the Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame.

He and his wife, Violet (Johnson) are the parents of two children – Mark Gillis and Pamela DeGennaro – and three grandchildren: Mark Gillis, Jr., and Derek and Lauren DeGennaro.

John and Violet will celebrate their 59th wedding anniversary July 8.

Gillis is proud of his Quincy Point roots. One of his first jobs was selling newspapers outside the main gate at the Quincy shipyard. He often treated his friends by buying tickets to the movies at the Lincoln Theater.

"The Point was a great place to be brought up," Gills fondly recalls. " We had every ethnic group, religion and nationality. You were either a good guy or a bad guy. Those other things didn't matter."

John M. Gillis: a good guy - indeed.

21 Other Nominees For Henry Bosworth Citizen Award

There were 21 other nominees for the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award.

The nominees, and those who submitted their name in nomination, are (in alphabetical order):

Mark Bertman: longtime Quincy businessman, active in the community (Quincy Rotary Club, Quincy Partnership, former Quincy College governor), and a generous donor to a myriad of charitable events. Nominated by Bob and Barbara Clarke, Island Avenue, Quincy.

Mark and Isobel Bertman: they have been community activists for many years, raising money year-round for the Salvation Army. They have been active volunteers in the Quincy Partnership, Quincy College, and numerous other non-profits. Nominated by Don Uvanitte, Pelican Road, Quincy.

Betty DeCristofaro: a tireless volunteer who works at 1000 Southern Artery, Interfaith Food and Clothing facility for the poor, city functions, parades, etc. An unsung hero who finds something to do for somebody else every day of her life. Nominated by George McCafferty, Southern Artery, Quincy.

Marie J. D'Olimpio: Marie has worked for many years as a newspaper reporter in the City of Quincy. She raised a family of six children and balanced her professional achievements in a time that was different than now. Marie is an outstanding citizen of our great city. Nominated by Stacey Farrell, Theresa Road.

The late Nancy DiPaolo: Nancy devoted every minute of every day to the senior citizens of Quincy. Her beautiful smile, her gentleness, her caring demeanor, and her kindness to all has created a gap which will never be filled. Even during his lung illness, Nancy would come to the Council on Aging and perform work which only she and Tom Clasby were capable of. Nominated by: Staff members at the Quincy Council on Aging, East Squantum Street, Quincy.

Arthur Ducharme: director of the Historical Interpretive Program at the United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents." Arthur's ability as a wonderful, captivating, and inspiring teacher of history is only overshadowed by his goodness as a man. His devotion to preserving the history and legacy of our nation's second and sixth Presidents (John Adams and John Quincy Adams respectively) is unparalleled. Nominated by Kathleen Sullivan-Moran, Quincy Shore Drive.

The late Elmer (Mike) Fagerlund: he was truly dedicated to the city. His 30-plus years service as assessor as well as his passion for the rightful return of the Granite Ball to City Hall make him deserving of this award. North Quincy's Erica Brady Is Running To The Finish Line

ERICA BRADY is looking to improve her times in both the mile and 2 mile this winter. Brady qualified for the Div. 1 state cross country championships three of four years as North Quincy's top harrier.

By JOE REARDON

Erica Brady knows the miles she logged last summer, running the city streets and along Wollaston Beach put her on course to dramatically improve her personal bests of 11:52 in the 2 mile and 5:31 in the mile.

One strong indication of her fitness level this winter came in a mile race against Milton where a track officials' blunder resulted in Brady running an extra lap. The bright spot was that she was well under 6 minutes at the finish and most probably would have had a personal best if she ran 10 laps instead of 11.

Brady began running cross country as an eighth grader at the Atlantic Middle School and took an immediate liking to competing over hills and rough surfaces in all kinds of weather. Her breakthrough race as a youngster came in the Quincy Middle School Cross Country Championships where she sprinted across the finish line to take second place.

Brady proved her silver medal was no fluke during her freshman season when she burst onto the high school scene with a stellar cross country season, culminating with a trip to the Div. 1 state championships. Running on the Gardner Golf Course 2.9-mile layout, Brady finished 57th overall, sixth among freshmen. She was 43rd in a ridiculously deep field as a sophomore and took 67th on the Northfield Mountain layout in Western Massachusetts her junior year.

Her impressive streak ended in November with a 32nd-place finish in the Div. 1 EMass Championships. Brady knew early on that she wasn't going to have a stellar day on the 3.1-mile Franklin Park layout.

"I went out too fast and it was a mess," said Brady with a shrug. "I was disappointed because it's my senior year and I wanted to make it to the state meet all four years."

A season, however, can't be judged on just one race and the 2010 campaign was a strong one for Brady overall. She battled her Whitman-Hanson nemeses Rachael and Abby Baker over the 3.1-mile Silver Lake course in the Patriot League Championships and finished a strong fifth against a deep, talented field of female harriers. And in the Bay State Invitational Div. 1 race at Wrentham, Brady placed 24th in a swift 20:13 over the rolling, spongy grass course.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL distance runner Erica Brady is also an accomplished Irish Step Dancer. The 17-year-old Brady finished eighth in the world championships in Belfast, Ireland as a seventh-grader.

On closer look, even her 32nd-place finish in EMass was far from a disaster. Her time of 21:03 would have placed her in the top 25 of every one of the five other races on the day and would have been good enough to earn a trip to the state meet in the Div. 6 race.

"We looked at some of the other divisions and she would have done very well," said head coach Geoff Hennessy.

Brady is looking forward to having a big winter with an emphasis on the championship races in late February. She's still packing in 40 miles a week, with a long run anywhere from 9-10 miles. One of the Patriot League's best female talents, Brady finds herself alone at the front in many of her races, concentrating more on the win than time. The fast times, she believes, will come against stronger fields.

"I have people to run with in my league but there are some meets when I'm alone," said Brady.

Brady's best 2 mile time came last winter on the speedy Reggie Lewis Center track where she dueled Whitman-Hanson's Emily Regan over 16 laps. In that showdown, Brady bided her time, running on Regan's shoulder and reacted immediately when Regan threw in surges in an attempt to distance herself from the NQ ace.

Tired, but still running strong, Brady made her decisive move with three laps remaining to put Regan away for good. Brady pushed hard down the final straightaway for a new personal best of 11:52.

She credited Regan for running a strong race and forcing the pace. "I had her to run with and we helped each other through the whole thing," said Brady. "I was really tired when I took the lead. She was in front of me and I decided to go for it."

Brady's strength in cross country and track has always been her ability to go to the front and run the kick out of her competition with an early, hard pace. On the Franklin Park Course, it was the descent from notorious Bear Cage Hill where Brady would switch gears to put distance between herself and anyone close. The final mile was, more often than not, Brady's strongest.

"I like the downhill on Bear Cage because I can let myself go," said Brady. "It's a good downhill."

While Brady is a household name in high school cross country circles, it's Irish Step Dancing where she has made her true mark. The New England champion as a seventh grader, Brady went on to take second in the nationals before traveling to Belfast, Ireland and taking home the eighth-place medal in the world championships in the country where the dance began.

Brady always found Irish Step competition far more nerve-racking than any race she's ever run. "The first round is definitely the hardest, nerves-wise," she said. "When I went to the worlds I just wanted to place. You get out there and tell yourself you have to give it everything. I felt more pressure dancing than I do running."

A competitor since the age of 5, Brady competes sparingly now at 17, preferring instead to coach the youngsters new to the ancient art. Hennessy said she has a true gift when it comes to working with the young dancers and the youngsters on the Quincy Track Club, where she also coaches.

"She's great with kids," said Hennessy. "Erica does a great job and does it extensively with the Irish Step girls."

The rigorous training required to become a world class Irish Step dancer also helped Brady's running. Both skills have endurance as a common denominator. "A lot of people don't know it, but it's very tiring," she said. "Between running and dancing I got into great shape."

Ultimately, Hennessy believes Brady's best events will be the long distances on the track. She has a fluid running form that is very efficient and more suited for distance than raw speed. Brady can handle a large workload because of her strong lower-body and she has flawless symmetry, all of which are conducive to running long distances. And most importantly, she never gets injured.

"She doesn't have gear-shifting speed for the mile," Hennessy said. "The 2 mile emphasizes more on endurance and less on raw speed. They (college) may take a kid like Erica and move her up to the 5 or 10(K). Erica can definitely run a 10K on the track."

Brady can see herself competing in the 5 and 10K in college, and she would some day like to give the Boston Marathon a shot. For now, she'll continue focusing on her workouts designed by Hennessy to improve her times.

"I just want to beat 11:52 and keep improving," Brady said.

Raiders Eye Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

At the season's halfway mark, ten games in, North Quincy is sitting at 5-5 overall and shooting up the Patriot League standings with a bullet.

The young Red Raiders played with the resolve of a veteran-laden team last Friday night against host Hanover High School. Lock down defense and timely offense resulted in a confidence-building 57-47 win over the Indians, setting up North Quincy with an opportunity to make a legit run at the state tournament over their final ten games.

"This team is real confident," said NQHS head coach Kevin Barrett. "They are a better team now than they were three weeks ago and they will be a better team tomorrow than they are today. These guys have been tremendous. They work to get better at every practice and I feel like we can play and compete with anybody."

"For a young team, this group may be the most intelligent basketball-wise that I have had since I have been coaching here," Barrett continued. "We have been able open up the playbook and add some wrinkles on both offense and defense. Our execution isn't perfect but we are only getting better."

What the Red Raiders lack in height and size, is more than made up for an effort and execution. Case in point was the play of junior Paul "Tubby" Cunniff against Hanover. The 5'11" forward pulled in 12 rebounds, more importantly; he collected nine of those boards on the defensive glass.

"We received contributions from everyone that stepped on the floor," stated Barrett whose team improved to 2-3 in the league with the win. "Paul just played a great game. He isn't the biggest player on the court and the Hanover player he was guarding had three inches and 25 pounds on him, but he was a force rebounding the ball especially on defense which limited them to one shot and done."

Junior forward Tim Liuzzo led the Red Raiders with 17 points and sophomore sixth-man Marquis McClendon chipped in with 11; senior guard Pat Gould and junior guard Matt Costa stood out defensively. All-and-all, according to Barrett, it was a quality win against a strong league opponent.

"Huge league win," he said. "It brings us to 2-3 in the Patriot League and we now have a great chance to move up the standings."

Earlier this month on Jan. 4, the Red Raiders hosted Silver Lake Regional, winning, convincingly, 69-52. Sophomore Dan Gould dropped 20 points on the Lakers while Liuzzo (12) and McClendon (11) chipped in with double-figure scoring.

"It was the best 32 minutes of basketball we have played, from beginning to end, this season," Barrett said. "The execution in our defensive sets was great. For a young team, we really came out and played a strong game."

North Quincy hit a roadblock on Jan. 7 against Duxbury, losing 60-48; however, the Raiders did hold the Green Dragons to only 19 first-half points. The game got out of hand in the third quarter, but Barrett, wasn't overly disappointed with his team's effort.

"Defensively, our goal, every game, is to hold teams to around 50 points," he said. "We did a nice job on them in the first-half. In the third quarter we had a stretch where we didn't play that well. That is something we still need to work on."

Liuzzo was the top-scorer for North Quincy with 12 points.

The final ten-games of the 2011 season will make or break North's season. It began on Tuesday with a home game against league opponent Middleboro and continues on Friday with a home tilt versus Quincy (7 p.m.). League games against Pembroke, Scituate, Hingham, Whitman-Hanson, Silver Lake and Duxbury are scattered around non-league games with Our Lady of Fatima (R.I.) and Dennis-Yarmouth.

"We are heading in the right direction," stated Barrett. "The team is confident and I feel like we are capable of beating anybody. I like our chances and our position in the league right now."

Basketball Notes

The Quincy boys and Quincy and North Quincy girls made it a four-game sweep for the City of Presidents on Friday, Jan. 14.

The Presidents went to 6-4 overall and 5-1 in the Patriot League following their 75-60 victory over Silver Lake. Senior Oliver O'Sullivan scored 23 points and dished out six assists and Lukas McDonough (16 points, 15 rebounds), Zerick Fadairo (11, 9) and Mario Cace (11, 8) also contributed to the huge league win.

The Lady Presidents improved to 8-2 overall with a momentum-building 48-44 victory over Silver Lake as junior Nicole Lamie buried four free throws in the final minute. Junior Kylie McDonald (11, 13) played well for Quincy.

North Quincy (1-8, 1-4) earned its first win of the season with a 53-44 victory over Hanover. Team captains Montana McBirney (18 points, 11 rebounds) and Emily Gray (nine points) carried the Red Raiders past the Indians.

The Quincy/North Quincy girls will tip-off at 5 p.m. on Friday at NQHS.

Quincy Youth Hockey Results

The following are game results from Quincy Youth Hockey's games held the weekend of Jan. 7-9. The Quincy Sun will publish, when space allows, any youth results that come into the office via fax (617-472-3963) or email quincysunnews@verizon.net.

These results of Mite, Squirt and Pee Wee games, are based off of game sheets provided to our office by Quincy Youth Hockey.

Bruce Ayers Club vs. Doran Horrigan (Mite)

The BAC closed out the visiting Doran Horrigan team by a score of 5-1 in a game played at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Scoring for BAC was Michael Collins (first period), Charlie Maher (second), and Jake DeFranco, Zachary Holmes and Nathan Holmes, all in the third period.

Duane Holmes (head coach), Ralph Richardson (assistant) and Randy Salmanowich (assistant) lead BAC behind the bench.

Keohane's vs. Wood Commercial (Squirt)

A three-goal first period lifted Keohane's over Wood Commercial, 7-1, in QYH Squirt play. Matt O'Brien, Matt Keohane and Thomas Richardson all scored in the opening period. Assists went to Keohane, Jason Whalen and Leila Hovey.

Richardson and Whalen (two goals) made it 6-0 after two periods; Keohane picked up two assists in the period, and Whalen finished the scoring for Keohane's with a third period tally for the hat trick.

Michael Lindsay scored Wood Commercial's lone goal in the third period on an assist from Aidan Murphy.

Quincy Sun vs. Burgin Planter (Squirt)

These two teams played to an 8-8 tie.

Among the goal scorers for the Quincy Sun were Rohnan O'Farell (three goals), Jack O'Brien, Tom MacPherson, Will Scola, Bobby Dunn and John Kamb. Thomas Sullivan and Doug Concannon scored for Burgin; the other names were not legible on the game sheet.

Mike Morrissey Club vs. Macidoian (Pee Wee)

The Mike Morrissey team hung on to defeat Macidoian Club, 5-4, on Jan. 7.

Pat Quirk and Tom Pugsley plotted first period goals on assists from Pat Sullivan and Quirk for Team Morrissey.

Mike O'Brien (assist to Dan Colarusso) and Quirk scored second period goals and Dean Colarusso scored an unassisted goal for Team Morrissey in the final period.

Ryan Cox (assist to Joseph McArdle) scored a second period goal for Macidoian Club and McArdle (assist to Cox) scored two third period goals, as did Michael Tervakoski off an assist from McArdle.

Colonial Federal vs. Bernie's General Store (Pee Wee)

Colonial Federal won a high-scoring game against Bernie's General Store, 12-10, on Jan. 7.

Goal scores for Colonial included Cullen Walsh (four goals), Paul Blake, Jonathan Sheehan and Corey Hernandez; there were two other players (#5 and #11) whose names were not provided on the game sheet.

Scoring for Bernie's were Scott Parrish, Conor Donaghey, Kevin Finn, Matt Garland (three goals), Eric Barber and Colin Logan.

QYA To Unveil Scoreboards

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy/North Quincy rivalry will provide the backdrop when two new scoreboards are dedicated at the Quincy Youth Arena on Jan. 26.

A crowd of 600-800 is expected for what should be a highly physical and emotional contest between the city's two schoolboy teams.

The wireless, state-of-the-art scoreboards were put up two weeks ago and the ceremony will be held before the start of the game. Donated by the Jamie Cochrane and William F. Deegan Foundations, the scoreboards will replace the 25-year-old scoreboards that had become outdated.

"It's very exciting," said Quincy Youth Arena Manager Michelle Stenberg. "We had an old bulb scoreboard. They don't make the bulbs for them anymore. We are so appreciative of the generosity of these foundations."

The legendary Rene Rancourt, who has been singing the United States and Canadian National Anthems at Boston Bruins games for more than 30 years, will be on hand to belt out the anthem and give his trademark first pump at the conclusion.

Rancourt, who resided in Houghs Neck before moving to Natick, was invited to sing by Quincy High coach Tim Lewis. "I told him it was our version of Bruins against Montreal and he loved it," said Lewis with a laugh. "I think it should be a fun night."

The Jamie Cochrane Foundation was founded in honor of the popular and dedicated Quincy Police officer who was killed on September 10, 2006 while riding his motorcycle. William F. Deegan was a U.S. Marshal who died during an exchange of gunfire during the Ruby Ridge standoff on Aug. 21, 1992. Families of both law enforcement officers will be on hand for the dedication, as well as Mayor Thomas Koch.

Stenberg said that one of the scoreboards was placed above the spot where Deegan used to stand to watch his sons, Billy and Brian, play hockey for Quincy North and in the youth league.

"It's so great how this community comes together," said Stenberg. "It'll be a great event. It's the perfect night for it. It's the game of the year."

Winter Weather Tips from the American Heart Association

Colder Temperatures, Physical Exertion Increase The Workload On The Heart

The American Heart Association says that for most people, shoveling snow may not lead to any health problems.

However, the association warns that the risk of a heart attack during snow shoveling may increase for some, stating that the combination of colder temperatures and physical exertion increases the workload on the heart.

People who are outdoors in cold weather should avoid sudden exertion, like lifting a heavy shovel full of snow. Even walking through heavy, wet snow or snow drifts can strain a person's heart.

To help make snow removal safer, the American Heart Association has compiled a list of practical tips.

• Give yourself a break. Take frequent rest breaks during shoveling so you don't overstress your heart. Pay attention to how your body feels during those breaks.

• Don't eat a heavy meal prior or soon after shoveling. Eating a large meal can put an extra load on your heart.

• Use a small shovel or consider a snow thrower. The act of lifting heavy snow can raise blood pressure acutely during the lift. It is safer to lift smaller amounts more times, than to lug a few huge shovelfuls of snow. When possible, simply push the snow.

• Learn the heart attack warning signs and listen to your body, but remember this: Even if you're not sure it's a heart attack, have it checked out (tell a doctor about your symptoms). Minutes matter! Fast action can save lives — maybe your own. Don't wait more than five minutes to call 9-1-1

• Don't drink alcoholic beverages before or immediately after shoveling. Alcohol may increase a person's sensation of warmth and may cause them to underestimate the extra strain their body is under in the cold.

• Consult a doctor. If you have a medical condition, don't exercise on a regular basis or are middle aged or older, meet with your doctor prior to the first anticipated snowfall.

• Be aware of the dangers of hypothermia. Heart failure causes most deaths in hypothermia. To prevent hypothermia, dress in layers of warm clothing, which traps air between layers forming a protective insulation. Wear a hat because much of your body's heat can be lost through your head.

Heart Attack Warning Signs

Some heart attacks are sudden and intense — the "movie heart attack," where no one doubts what's happening. But most heart attacks start slowly, with mild pain or discomfort. Often people affected aren't sure what's wrong and wait too long before getting help. Here are signs that can mean a heart attack is happening:

• Chest discomfort. Most heart attacks involve discomfort in the center of the chest that lasts more than a few minutes, or that goes away and comes back. It can feel like uncomfortable pressure, squeezing, fullness or pain.

• Discomfort in other areas of the upper body. Symptoms can include pain or discomfort in one or both arms, the back, neck, jaw or stomach.

• Shortness of breath with or without chest discomfort.

• Other signs may include breaking out in a cold sweat, nausea or lightheadedness

As with men, women's most common heart attack symptom is chest pain or discomfort. But women are somewhat more likely than men to experience some of the other common symptoms, particularly shortness of breath, nausea/vomiting, and back or jaw pain.

Calling 9-1-1 is almost always the fastest way to get lifesaving treatment. Emergency medical services (EMS) staff can begin treatment when they arrive — up to an hour sooner than if someone gets to the hospital by car. EMS staff is also trained to revive someone whose heart has stopped. Patients with chest pain who arrive by ambulance usually receive faster treatment at the hospital, too.

It is best to call EMS for rapid transport to the emergency room. If you can't access EMS, have someone drive you to the hospital right away. If you're the one having symptoms, don't drive yourself, unless you have absolutely no other option.

Stroke, Osteoporis Screenings At River Bay Club Feb. 15

Life Line Screening will offer a stroke and osteoporosis screening Tuesday, Feb. 15 at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy.

Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

Screenings identify potential cardiovascular conditions such as blocked arteries and irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which is a strong predictor of heart disease.

A bone density screening to assess osteoporosis risk is also offered and is appropriate for both men and women.

Packages start at $139. All five screenings take 60 to 90 minutes to complete.

Screenings are fast, non-invasive, painless, affordable and convenient.

Stroke is the third leading cause of death and a leading cause of permanent disability. Some 80 percent of stroke victims had no apparent warning signs prior to their stroke.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-877-237-1287.

Pre-registration is required.

Healthy Eating Topic Today

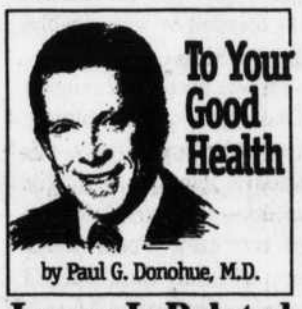
The public is invited to a seminar on nutrition and brain health scheduled today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. at 2003 Falls Blvd., Quincy.

The topic is "Food for Thought: Healthy Eating for a Healthy Brain."

Dr. Nancy B. Emerson Lombardo, Ph.D., president of HealthCare Insights, LLC will present the seminar. She is a founder of the national Alzheimer's Association and has developed the Memory Preservation Nutrition Program, designed to help improve brain and body health.

Attendees will learn more about research-based ideas on how brain-healthy nutrition, especially when combined with other healthy lifestyles, helps reduce risk and may delay progression of Alzheimer's disease and other dementias

Breakfast will start at 9 a.m with the presentation to follow at 9:30 a.m. The program is free and open to the public.



Seating is limited. To RSVP, call The Atrium at Faxon Woods at 617-471-5595.

Manet Receives $25,000 Grant

Manet Community Health Center has been awarded a $25,000 grant from the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts Foundation.

The grant will be used to continue Manet's Community Outreach and Enrollment Team, which engages, educates, enrols and advocates for individuals and families without health care coverage. It will also continue to target its services to the uninsured, underinsured, newly insured, and recently unemployed, with special attention to Aliens with Special Status.

In all, the foundation awarded $295,000 in grants to nine community organizations in Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod and the Islands.

Lupus Is Related to Rheumatoid Arthritis

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My 28-year-old daughter, who has been healthy all her life, was recently diagnosed with lupus. Will she be able to live a full life, including having children. Is there a cure? How about exercise and diet? – R.K.

ANSWER: In the 1950s, a diagnosis of lupus carried only a 50 percent chance of living for five more years. Sixty years later, the chance of living for at least 20 more years is 90 percent, and the majority of lupus patients have a normal life span.

Pregnancy is definitely possible. Doctors tell their lupus patients to delay pregnancy until the illness has been inactive for six months. That kind of delay in disease activity occurs in almost all lupus patients.

Lupus is in the same class of illness as rheumatoid arthritis. It's an autoimmune disease, one brought on by the immune system attacking many body organs and tissues. Joints and muscles are targets. The wrists, hands, elbows, knees and ankles are the joints most often involved. Skin rashes are common. One rash is often mentioned. It's a redness on both cheeks connected by a red bar over the bridge of the nose. This is the "butterfly" rash of lupus, seen less often than it is talked about. The kidneys, heart and nervous system can be affected.

The outlook for an individual lupus patient depends on how many organs are involved and how well the patient responds to treatment. There isn't a cure. There are many control medicines. Lupus typically has periods of worsening and periods when the illness goes into remission. Medicines make remissions longer and longer.

Lupus has no special diet. Exercise is encouraged when the illness is in remission. You or your daughter can contact the Lupus Foundation of America for more information and for becoming acquainted with other patients in your town. The website is www.lupus.org, and the phone number is 202-349-1155.

Readers interested in learning more about lupus can order the booklet on it and rheumatoid arthritis by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 301W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 66. I had been a heavy smoker, and I had a brother who died of an abdominal aneurysm. My doctor insisted I have an ultrasound of my abdomen to find out if I had one. (He thought he felt one.) It turns out I don't have an aneurysm, but I do have a porcelain gallbladder. The doctor wants me to have surgery right away. I have no pain. I feel good. He says it's a cancer threat. Is this so? – M.Z.

ANSWER: It is so. A porcelain gallbladder must be removed because of the high risk of cancer.

This kind of gallbladder got its name because calcium infiltrates its wall. The wall is inflamed, and gallstones are often the cause of the inflammation. Even though you might have no gallstones and even though you have no pain, you need to have the gallbladder taken out, so great is the threat of cancer developing.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

ARE YOU SITTING DOWN?

A new study reveals that sitting in a chair can actually increase a person's risk of dying. While previous studies have linked sedentary behavior with chronic diseases such as heart disease, breast and colon cancers, diabetes, osteoporosis, and anxiety/depression, researchers from the American Cancer Society recently focused on the activity of sitting. They found that, over a 14-year period, women who sat six (or more) hours per day had a 37% increased risk of dying compared with women who sat three hours or less. One explanation is that prolonged sitting relaxes the largest muscles, and muscle contraction is needed to increase glucose uptake and stimulate the release of an enzyme (lipoprotein lipase) that metabolizes triglycerides and manufactures HDL ("good" cholesterol).

How much time to you spend sitting? At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our concern is the total health of our patients. A continuing schedule of regular chiropractic check-ups can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Through the use of conservative, non-surgical, drug-free care, we provide treatment from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. Please call 617.472.4220 and let us help you gain relief from any discomforts you may be experiencing. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The adverse effects associated with prolonged sitting even apply to "active couch potato" types, those who exercise regularly but still sit for hours at a time.

Home Decor Trends For 2011

(ARA) - Something old, something new. Something borrowed, something blue. While typically the refrain for most brides, this adage holds equally true for the top home decorating trends for the coming year.

What's old is new again

Whether they're genuine period pieces being repurposed or home furnishings reproduced from popular items from the '50s, '60s or '70s, vintage will be hot next year, according to Kenneth Ludwig of Kenneth Ludwig Home Furnishings, Ltd. Examples include chair frames redone in new upholstery, traditional lighting fixtures in newer brass or pewter finishes, or products imported from Russia, Poland and the Czech Republic such as chairs done in old grain sacks, or old carts from factories used for end tables or coffee tables.

A spectrum of colors

Color trends will carry over from 2010 to 2011 with the soothing aqua and green hues that draw their inspiration from the verdigris deposits found on weathered copper statues, predicts design expert, TV host/spokesperson and best-selling author Kathy Peterson. For outdoor furniture and accessories, she sees sassy colors like lime green, bold orange and Caribbean blue, along with more subdued hues such as sage green, barn red and mocha brown.

The mad, mad world of furniture

Taking a nod from the award-winning AMC series "Mad Men," Linda Fougerousse of Interior Transformation, Inc. also sees furniture styles returning to the '50s and '60s with round tapered legs on angles, geometric accents and seating with curved backs. Jase Frederick of Jase Frederick Sustainable Interiors adds that classic wood pieces made from sentimental stock like fallen trees or scrap wood from ancestral or historic structures will become heirlooms to pass from one generation to the next.

A trend that will stick around

A small change in a room can make a huge difference - and wall coverings make a dramatic, yet cost-effective statement. With their innovative new SmartStick repositionable wall murals, Murals Your Way has made it easy for homeowners, renters and even college students to add a fresh new look to indoor and outdoor walls, floors, doors and windows. "Easily replied and removed, SmartStick murals boast a high quality, lightly textured finish and can be reused and reinstalled hundreds of times," says Todd Imholte, president of Murals Your Way. "It's a perfect temporary - or long-term - decorating solution for consumers."

Illuminating insights

As living green becomes more ingrained in our lives, LED lighting will continue to light the way, according to Jeff Dross, senior product manager of Kichler Lighting, who will introduce several new under-cabinet systems and landscape products with an ultra-efficient technology next year. For a casual, contemporary twist, Dross also suggests hanging chandeliers in new areas such as bathrooms, bedrooms and closets, and embracing today's art glass applications, which are much more chic and casual than the Tiffany lamps of the past.

There's nothing bland about neutrals

In a recent video posted on her website, Michelle Lamb - co-founder and chairman of Minneapolis-based Marketing Directions, Inc. and editorial director of The Trend Curve - spoke about a resurgence in neutrals in 2011. These more complex "chameleon" neutrals will have more color, and will shift and change based on the light and whatever's around them. Lamb claims that these neutrals will be "the likes of which we haven't seen in 20 years or more."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

As we go through life all of us at one time or another face many crisis. When these crisis occur confusion sometimes occurs. To face a crisis requires courage – and courage is a personal matter. Courage cannot be leased, borrowed or bought. It be drawn from one's self for one's self. And when courage is shown, it often draws out the courage in others. When courage is shown, it often draws out the courage in others. When courage is shown, confusion can and often does disappear.

Ever since time began, the greatest source for courage has been traced to a foundation on a faith. Faith creates hope. Without faith and hope, courage is difficult to come by. In spite to dark clouds, faith, hope and courage will always be the means to let us see the rays of sunshine again.

RELIGION

Temple Beth El

Rabbi Navah Levine will lead a series of events at Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., Quincy beginning Sunday, Jan. 23 with a Tu B'Shevat seder to celebrate the New Year of the Trees.

On Feb. 6, Rabbi Levine will conduct a discussion on the Talmud and Bernie Madoff.

There will be a Purim celebration March 20.

Each event starts at 10 a.m., following the morning prayer service at 9 a.m.

All are welcome and there is no charge.

Reservations are appreciated.

Contact the Temle at 617-479-4309 for more information.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will hold its regular weekly worship service Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

All are welcome to attend.

Pastor John Castricum will preach the sermon "United in Our Calling."

Paula Younie and Waymon Giggey will serve the Diaconate.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

First Church Of Squantum

First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Squantum, offers a Sunday school program for all children between the ages of 3-13.

All classes are taught Christ centered. Since all children learn in different ways, the younger group learns each of their lessons through crafts, bible stories, music, crafts and activities, while the older group learns through scripture, activities, field trips and open discussions.

Worship service and Sunday school are held Sunday mornings at 10 a.m. The public is welcome.

The church also holds Fiber Arts at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesdays and a Men's Breakfast Saturdays at 8 a.m.

For more information, call the church at 617-328-6649.

Quincy Point Congregational

"Celebrating the Church" will be the theme at this Sunday's 10 a.m. worship service at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Rev. Ann G. Suzedell will preach a sermon entitled, "It Sounds like Church."

The congregation will host guests from the Pilgrim Association of the United Church of Christ for a covenanting ceremony officially inducting QPCC to the association.

The deacon of the day will be Sheena Delmonte.

Coffee and light refreshments will follow the service in the Social Hall.

Film Series Concludes Saturday At Temple Shalom

Temple Shalom of Milton will conclude its Winter Movie Series on "Jewish Culture Around the World" on Saturday, Jan. 22 at 7 p.m., with the documentary "Minyan in Kaifeng," narrated by Leonard Nimoy.

The public is invited to attend.

The last rabbi of Kaifeng, China, died well over a century ago, and today's descendants of the ancient Jewish community there have never celebrated Shabbat. Now two curious Chinese Jewish families have invited a modern group of Jewish travelers into their homes, leading to a reunion one thousand years in the making.

"Minyan in Kaifeng" shows the unexpected meeting of cultures through the eyes of modern travelers from Australia, China, Israel, and the United States. It is a story of ancient Diaspora, of old dangers and newfound wisdom. Informative and entertaining, this film is an excellent opportunity to experience a little-known area of Jewish culture and history.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call 617-698-3394.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its own version of the cooking competition TV show "Iron Chef" on Saturday, Jan. 29.

The church program, entitled "Tin Chef," will feature chefs of all ages competing in two categories: chili and chowder. All entries will be anonymous.

Those in attendance will taste each chili and chowder, then vote for their favorites in each category.

The winner will be crowned "Tin Chef."

The competition is open to everyone.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

The church is handicapped accessible by the front door closest to the flag pole.

Eastern Nazarene College Commencement Jan. 30

Eastern Nazarene College will hold its winter commencement exercises Sunday, Jan. 30 at 2 p.m. at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, located at 37 East Elm Ave., adjacent to the college campus in Wollaston.

ENC President Corliss McGee will lead the commencement exercises. Approximately 90 students will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees from the Christian liberal arts college.

The program will also feature a commencement address by Paul Gorman, president and CEO of the South Shore YMCA.

In the event of inclement weather, commencement exercises will be held Sunday, Feb. 6.

With approximately 1,100 students distributed across its traditional residential undergraduate, adult studies, and graduate programs, ENC offers academic programs that prepare students to lead and serve in a diverse world by integrating the "best in education and the best in Christian faith."

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Single Lambs looking for romance could find Cupid especially accommodating this week. Paired partners also find their relationships benefiting from the chubby cherub's attention.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep your keen Bull's eye focused on your target, and shake off any attempt to turn your attention elsewhere. You should get some news later in the week that might answer some questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your early enthusiasm for a project might have been somewhat premature. Although you feel positive about it, you might need more information in order to make an informed decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking on a new responsibility might seem like the politically correct thing to do. But even with the promise of support, was it the wisest? Consider reassessing your upcoming decision.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Apply yourself to completing your task despite all the distractions that might be interfering with your work. Then reward yourself with a weekend of fun shared with people who are close to you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A business agreement from the past might need to be looked at again. Use this unexpected development to check out other matters related to it. A weekend venture proves to be rewarding.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't ignore that uneasy feeling about making a commitment. It could be a case of understandably cold feet, or a warning that something isn't as right as it should be.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A colleague could be more supporting of one of your efforts. But it's up to you to make the case for it, and that could mean opening up a secret or two, which might be a problem for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Expect some good news about a relative you've been worried about. But don't expect the full story to be told – at least not yet. A workplace matter might face shifting priorities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Despite some anxious moments, you could have good reason to be pleased with how things are turning out. An end-of-the-week call might hold some interesting information.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A long-overdue expression of appreciation could be offered soon. But admit it: You never really expected it would happen, right? Meanwhile, keep your weekend options open.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to dive right into a new challenge, whether it's learning a computer program or how to drive a stick shift, or making a new friend. Whatever it is, good luck.

BORN THIS WEEK: You see the wisdom in honesty, and you help others appreciate your vision.

Gutro: Private Investors Interested In Restoring Wollaston Theater

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said Tuesday that private investors are eyeing the Wollaston Theater as a possible restoration project and he is optimistic the project will materialize.

"There is a legitimate and intriguing proposal in the works by private investors to refurbish the Wollaston Theater," Gutro said.

WOLLASTON THEATER, a landmark on Beale Street in Wollaston Center, may be purchased by private investors who are interested in restoring the 85-year-old structure affectionately known as "The Wolly." Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

Gutro said he believes the Wollaston Theater could become the focal point of the revitalization of Wollaston Center. Those hopes and those of city planners were dashed in November when Street-Works officials dropped their interest in overhauling the structure.

Now there is interest from other private investors, according to Gutro who pledged a full public examination of any plans.

"If and when this comes to fruition, there will be a full public vetting of the proposal and I will have it," said Gutro.

Gutro acknowledged time is running out for the 85-year-old theater which was closed in the early 2000's by the late owner Arthur Chandler.

Since the theater closed and Mr. Chandler died, there have been successive efforts to revive the theater.

Street-Works interest in the theater raised considerable optimism.

Now Gutro believes a serious proposal is in the works and last chances for the property are running out.

"I think it's clear to many of us that the clock is ticking on the Wollaston Theater," said Gutro who described numerous proposals to raze the old theater and build condominiums or restaurants.

"As a ward councillor, I've had developers approach me asking to knock down the theater to put in a fast food venue or condominium, neither of which are in my vision for Wollaston Center," Gutro said.

Mayor, Street-Works Sign Landmark Deal For Center Renewal

Mayor Thomas Koch and Street-Works Development, LLC signed a landmark $1.2 billion Quincy Center redevelopment agreement Tuesday that is expected to create nearly 10,000 jobs and dramatically reshape how urban renewal projects are executed in Massachusetts.

The agreement signed by Koch and Street-Works founding partner Kenneth Narva formalizes a first-of-its-kind partnership between a municipality and private developer in Massachusetts and sets in motion the largest private investment in Quincy's history.

Bond To Purchase Land For New Middle School

Raymondi Seeks Long-Term Plans Before Voting On $9M Bond Authorization

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The council's Finance and Education Committees plan a joint meeting Monday, Feb. 7 at 6:30 p.m. to review Mayor Thomas Koch's request for authorization of a $9 million bond to purchase and prepare the proposed site of a new Central Middle School.

Koch and the School Committee have approved siting a new middle school at the former St. Ann's School building. The bond will cover the purchase and razing of the former parochial school. Koch, also, plans the subsequent sale of the current Central Middle School building and land on Hancock Street.

However, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi believes councillors need more information before they consider the $9 million bond.

In addition, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he'd like to have a timetable on plans for disposal of the Central School building and property as residents in his ward will be directly affected.

Gutro plans to schedule community meetings on the issue.

At the same Jan. 18 meeting, Raymondi asked that school officials and members of the School Committee map out their long-term plans for the entire school system and its structure before councillors approve bond.

QHS Pipes Will Be Checked For Leaks

During February School Vacation Week

By JOE REARDON

Tests on the new Quincy High School's pipes will be done during February vacation after nine leaks were discovered over the past two weeks in various parts of the building.

Project manager Jim Driscoll of Gilbraine Construction Company, which did the bulk of the work on the new $126 million Quincy High School, said small leaks of a glycerin/glycol liquid from the heating system are not uncommon with a project the size of the high school. There is nearly a mile of pipe running through the high school according to Driscoll.

The leaks will be fixed by the contractor who installed them at no cost to the city.

Gutro To Hold Ward 5 Community Meeting Feb. 3

Despite Some Progress, Blight Issues Dog Neighborhoods

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City officials can cite major success in tackling blight problems, but blight is still rampant as one case is solved and another one pops up, according to Building Inspector Jay Duca who spoke at Monday's Ordinance Committee meeting.

Such progress is a beginning, but it's not enough, according to city councillors who want tougher and more effective enforcement and tools even if that means having the city claim blighted properties through real estate tax liens.

At Monday's meeting, every ward councillor described ongoing blight issues in his or her district that not only damage the area's reputation and impact property values, but sometimes create health hazards.

At the same meeting, Fire Chief Joseph Barron described properties reported to his department.

Barron told councillors that problems have been resolved at many hazardous or abandoned buildings but, "We're still at 29 (offending buildings)."

Like Duca, Barron said one property is fixed but another one takes its place.

"It becomes a cat-and-mouse game sometimes," Duca said of attempts to track down the owners of blighted properties and demand action.

To date, the city has been notified 250 foreclosed properties – 159 in this year alone, according to Duca.

"It's a dynamic problem; some get off the (blight) list and new ones go on," said Duca who discussed the 40 addresses on the city's 'Blight List.'

Duca said 15 are being worked on, 13 have either been torn down or have new owners and the city has court cases pending for seven of the properties.

In addition, Duca said Code Enforcement Officer Ken Burke handles 1,100 complaints in a year, 30 a week and his department has collected $60,000 in fines this year. However, those totals encompass all building code fines, including trash fines.

The data on blight issues are not isolated nor does the Building Department know whether real estate taxes have been paid on offending properties.

Each ward councillor described continuing offending properties in his or her ward and then sought more effective tools to solve such issues.

"Can't we just fine, fine, fine?" asked Committee Chairman and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, referring to the city's blight ordinance which allows $200 a day fines for offending properties.

"I'm frustrated," said Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who described eight constant problems in her area, including one waterfront property that is a neighborhood eyesore.

Gutro, Laforest, and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, City Council president, all supported efforts for continuing daily tickets on properties and asked Assistant City Solicitor Janet Petkun to research more effective strategies. The daily fine is $200.

"I can't stress enough how aggressive the city should be," said Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci who wants the fines imposed and liens filed against the property.

Palmucci noted that the city is now able to place liens on property for police details. He believes real estate tax liens appear to be more effective than court cases.

In fact, Assistant City Solicitor Janet Petkun described a case in which the judge refused to level a fine, suggesting the funds could be used for improving a property.

Another case had a happier ending, according to Gutro who said the judge failed to act, but the owner's fellow veterans came to his rescue.

Gutro commended Veterans Agent Tom Stansbury and the Quincy Veterans Council who aided a veteran whose property was "chronically blighted" and hired an unemployed veteran to help.

"They helped a fellow veteran,' said Gutro, adding he hopes the property owner will continue to maintain the property.

Gutro also focused on four properties on The Strand in his ward, noting that he plans a community meeting Thursday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School on Fenno Street to discuss several abandoned properties on The Strand. The properties could have redevelopment potential.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee described one empty home in his ward as becoming a wildlife habitat, endangering local residents and household pets while Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi wanted information on a Norfolk Street problem.

After Duca said problems regarding ownership issues often impede his department's efforts to solve a problem, Gutro questioned whether the Registry of Deeds notifies the city of change of title.

Duca said the banks have all been asked to notify the city regarding foreclosures and most banks are complying.

Gutro then asked Senator and Councillor John Keenan to explore the possibility of legislation requiring registries to notify municipalities of a change of ownership.

During the meeting, councillors repeatedly acknowledged the progress that Duca, Burke and his department have made on the issue.

"I can see a lot of progress in the last four months," said Councillor Michael McFarland.

21 Units In Dunns Hill Road, Filbert Street Area

Community Meeting Feb. 10 On Proposed West Quincy Residential Project

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting to discuss a developer's proposal to build 21 residential units in the Dunns Hill Road/Filbert Street area, behind the Elks Lodge.

The proponents of the project are seeking neighborhood input into the project before finalizing their plans for the site. The developer will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

Palmucci has scheduled a neighborhood meeting regarding this proposal Thursday, Feb. 10 at 6:30 p.m. in the former members lounge, downstairs at the Quincy Elks Lodge at 254 Quarry St.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

Residents with questions about this or any other matter can contact Palmucci on his cell phone, (617) 834-3945 or by email at bpalmucci@quincyma.gov.

Helpful Homework Hints For Parents Feb. 1

The Quincy Parent Advisory Council to Special Education (QPAC) will offer a program entitled "Helpful Homework Hints" Tuesday, Feb. 1 at 6:30 p.m. at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St.

The program will be presented by Eric Clark, founder and director of Quincy Tutoring.

Parents will learn practical ideas and strategies to help with homework, encourage effective organization and study skills, and support their child's academic success.

Point Webster School Students Return To Classes After Monday's Evacuation

Point Webster Middle School students were back in class Tuesday, the day after a glycol leak from the heating system spilled out into the cafeteria, leaving a strong odor.

Glycol is a liquid commonly used in antifreeze in heating systems of large business and commercial buildings. It has a slight odor and is mixed with water in the heating systems.

"It's in the water as a small percentage," said Quincy Fire Department Captain Richard Bryan.

The building was ventilated overnight and the odor was gone when checked on Tuesday morning.

Bryan said a leak of that nature wasn't an uncommon occurrence. "It's not an uncommon event in a heating system," Bryan said. "They wear down, break down and leak."

Students were bused from the school to Quincy High at around 12:30 p.m., on Monday afternoon. Those who hadn't had lunch yet were fed and all the students were gathered in the auditorium where they watched a Harry Potter movie until the end of the school day.

The children were picked up by their parents after school.

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

A LAYERED APPROACH

If there is a general jewelry trend that applies to a variety of pieces and shows no signs of abating, it is layering. This style is as much in vogue on fashion runways as it is on Main Street. Perhaps the most visible manifestation of the layering technique involves wearing several link necklaces of different lengths and colors to create an overall effect that is both cohesive and eye-catching. The most interesting looks are created by layering chains of different precious metals and wholly different styles. The same sort of layering approach applies to bracelets as well. By outfitting one wrist with three, four, or more bangles of varying textures and materials, women can achieve a most artful effect.

You'll find we are specialists in the fine art of fine jewelry no matter how you wear it. We're proud of our staff and their eagerness to please our customers. Officials Say Rating Will Save Several Million Dollars In QHS Bond Interest Costs

City Maintains Strong Bond Rating

Mayor Thomas Koch announced today that the City recently entered the bond market for payments on the new Quincy High School at a favorable interest rate after Wall Street upheld the City's high-quality bond rating.

Last week, the City went to the market with a $16 million, 28-year bond to finance a portion of the City's obligations on the new Quincy High, marking the first time the City has borrowed with a rating of Aa3 as set by Moody's Investors Services. The rating was originally issued last year, and was reaffirmed when the City issued the high school bonds last week.

The rating will save taxpayers several million dollars in interest costs over the life of the bond, officials said.

Moody's defines the Aa3 rating in its "high-quality" category. The City had been borrowing at a rating no higher than "Upper Medium Grade" since at least 1987, according to Department of Revenue records. In its rating, Moody's cited the City's large tax base, potential for growth and growing stability within government finances over the last two years.

"In these extraordinarily challenging times, it is no small task for any City to protect its credit rating, and we are encouraged that Wall Street sees our community as stable and poised for future growth," said Koch. "We clearly still face considerable challenges going forward, but we are committed to doing what it takes to secure the City's long-term fiscal future."

In its ratings report, Moody's also cited Quincy's stable employer base, above-average incomes, and strong regional institutions.

"The City's financial position appears to be stabilizing as the City has taken measures to restore structural balance and control expenditure growth," Moody's wrote in its report.

The report did not gloss over the challenges faced by the City, saying its financial position will continued to be stressed by continued reductions in state aid, limited revenue growth, and the difficulty in replenishing the City's reserve fund amid a down economy.

"Despite recent actions to restore positive operations and improve the city's efficiency, the City remains reliant on state aid near-term operations are likely to remain seriously strained," the report states.

Still, the ratings report included a "stable outlook," rather than an ominous "negative outlook" that is typically used as a warning for a potential downgrade in credit ratings.

"We are substantial progress toward all the goals highlighted in the Moody's report – and by our own independent auditors – regarding long-term planning and replenishing our reserves," said Municipal Finance Director Nicholas Puleo. "The Mayor has made it clear that we must find that balance between difficult spending choices, the City's long-term health, and protecting the core services like public safety and education."

As part of an industry-wide recalibration of bond rates that affected many cities and towns, Quincy's rating was briefly bumped a notch higher than its current rating, to Aa2. The City never borrowed at that rate, and a resulting adjustment put the City at the Aa3 rating, which is a better borrowing rate than at any time since at least 1987, according to the Department of Revenue.

is going to look like in five, ten years down the line?" is essential before any vote on the bond, according to Raymondi who outlined his questions regarding the Sterling Middle School.

"I continue to be concerned that Sterling is not renovated," said Raymondi, adding that councillors should know how many schools are in the system's long-range plans and whether the current grade system of elementary, middle and high school, will be changed.

"Where is Sterling in the mix?" Raymondi asked, adding, "Are we going to close Sterling? I'd like to know that before I consider a vote...."

Raymondi described previous failed plans which included not only the construction or reconstruction of a new Central Middle School and Quincy High School, but also Sterling Middle School and a major reimbursement by the state.

Raymondi also asked whether the School Committee plans to keep the current configuration of Grades 1-5; Grades 6-8; and Grades 9-12 or will there be changes.

After the meeting, Koch's spokesman Chris Walker said the mayor hopes to present the city's plan to the State Building Authority in March, along with approval of the purchase bond.

The city's total school enrollment last year was nearly 9,000 students in 18 schools as follows: two high schools, five middle schools and 11 elementary schools. Approximately 600 students are enrolled in the century-old Central Middle School.

Do-Gooders Take A Frosty Plunge

The sun was out.

That's the extent of last Saturday being a "beach day."

But it didn't matter to the 50 brave souls who took part in the 5th annual John Hancock Plunge at Wollaston Beach to benefit Interfaith Social Services.

Those who took the plunge in frigid Quincy Bay successfully blocked out the wintry elements of the day.

So what if the air temperature was in the low 20's with a breeze that picked up right about "plunge" time. Or the water was about 40 degrees some 20 feet off-shore but more like 20-something closer to the shoreline. Ice and salt-water slush lapped at the sand line.

Even getting to the water was unenviable.

A wide swath of snow was plowed from the seawall steps to the shore. But the path was mostly snow and only sand near the water. Some plungers wore shoes or even slippers but a few went barefoot for the full effect of a cold winter's dip on a day more suitable for snow-tubing than swimming.

What provokes (some might say possesses) people to hit the surf in the dead of winter?

"Their hearts are bigger than they are and they know this event is for such a great cause," Event Organizer Chickie Abdallah said while registering participants. "We have so many different categories (of participation)."

There's Full Plunger, Waist Wader, Knee Higher, Dunking Toe-Nut and Geez – I Would If I Could. (How about "Can I take a rain check and do it in August?")

All "plungers" gather pledges from their friends and family to support Interfaith Social Services. ISS offers food, clothing, counseling and assistance to South Shore residents in need. During its first four years, the event has raised some $24,000. Organizers hoped another $7,000 would be collected this year.

"Anybody can be down here, get money to help us out, to feed those who are hungry, to clothe those who need it, put heat in their house, keep them from becoming homeless," Abdallah adds. "The outpouring is just awesome."

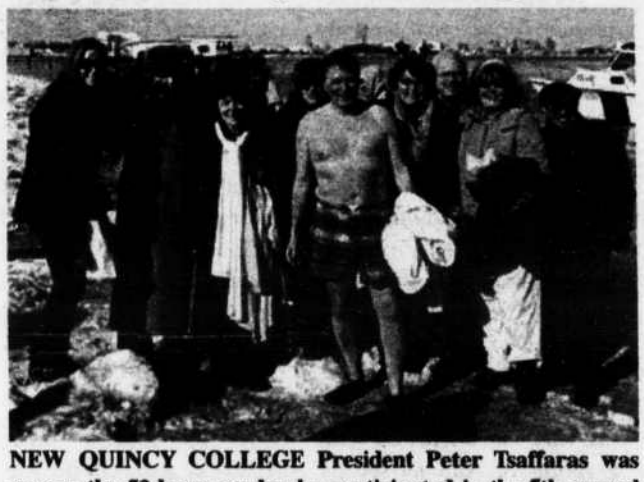
Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services, said the participation shows how dedicated local residents are to good causes. "It's amazing that these people are all out here and it doesn't matter that it's cold and it snowed seven inches (last Friday).

"It's really incredible to see this group gathering to take a dip in Wollaston Beach."

The plungers were men, women and even a few youngsters.

One local supporter was Neil McCole, president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach who wore a Friends T-shirt and blue swim trunks. "It's mind over matter," he said moments before taking the plunge. "It's for a great cause and it's a lot of excitement. This is an example of utilizing Wollaston Beach year-round."

Another plunger, Quincy native Mary Jo Kahler, said she takes the plunge because "Social Services is a very good charity and I feel that being from such a historical place that it's nice to give back a little bit and raise some money for their food pantry and their Bureau Drawer which helps people get back into the workforce.



"It's a little on the cold side today," Kahler said a few minutes before the big event, "and I'm looking at all that ice but it doesn't inhibit me from doing this. I've done this the last three years. Those other times I was all in but this year the ice is being a little bit of a deterrent."

How does she psych herself up?

"There's really no good way. It's just go in, get it done and get out," she laughs grinning widely.

Minutes before the plunge, spectators lined the seawall. All were bundled up in winter clothing: heavy coats, hats, gloves. Some sipped hot beverages courtesy of Coffee Break Café.

Activity picked up closer to plunge time. Members of the Quincy Police Marine Unit and divers were positioned just off shore. Other paramedics and support from Fallon Ambulance were ready for any medical emergency.

NEW QUINCY COLLEGE President Peter Tsaffaras was among the 50 brave souls who participated in the 5th annual John Hancock Plunge to benefit Interfaith Social Services. He's joined by faculty and staff on Wollaston Beach after last Saturday's event. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

On the beach lay a sled with a full complement of advanced life support equipment including cardiac monitors and airway and I.V. equipment.

"We have paramedics designated for the (Police) divers and also for the people going in the water," said Chris DiBona, deputy superintendent of Field Operations for Fallon Ambulance.

Hypothermia – in icy water – could occur in just a few minutes.

"What normally happens . . . even if you're a good swimmer – the warm blood goes away from your extremities and you can't function so that's what usually happens with the folks who get into trouble," DiBona explains while wearing a full body thermal suit beneath dark-colored work gear. "They can't manipulate their extremities.

"We have plenty of people around in case anyone needs help getting out and we'll be able to assist them. Looking at this water," he assesses, "it could be a matter of seconds or minutes."

Fortunately, the plunge once again went off without a medical hitch.

After a brief countdown by bullhorn, the plungers hit the water. Some waded in briskly, others took full strides before diving head first into the frigid water. Some reacted to the water with screams and all were met with cheers and applause from the spectators on the beach.

Less than a minute later, the dippers retreat to dry land again. There are more smiles than shivers.

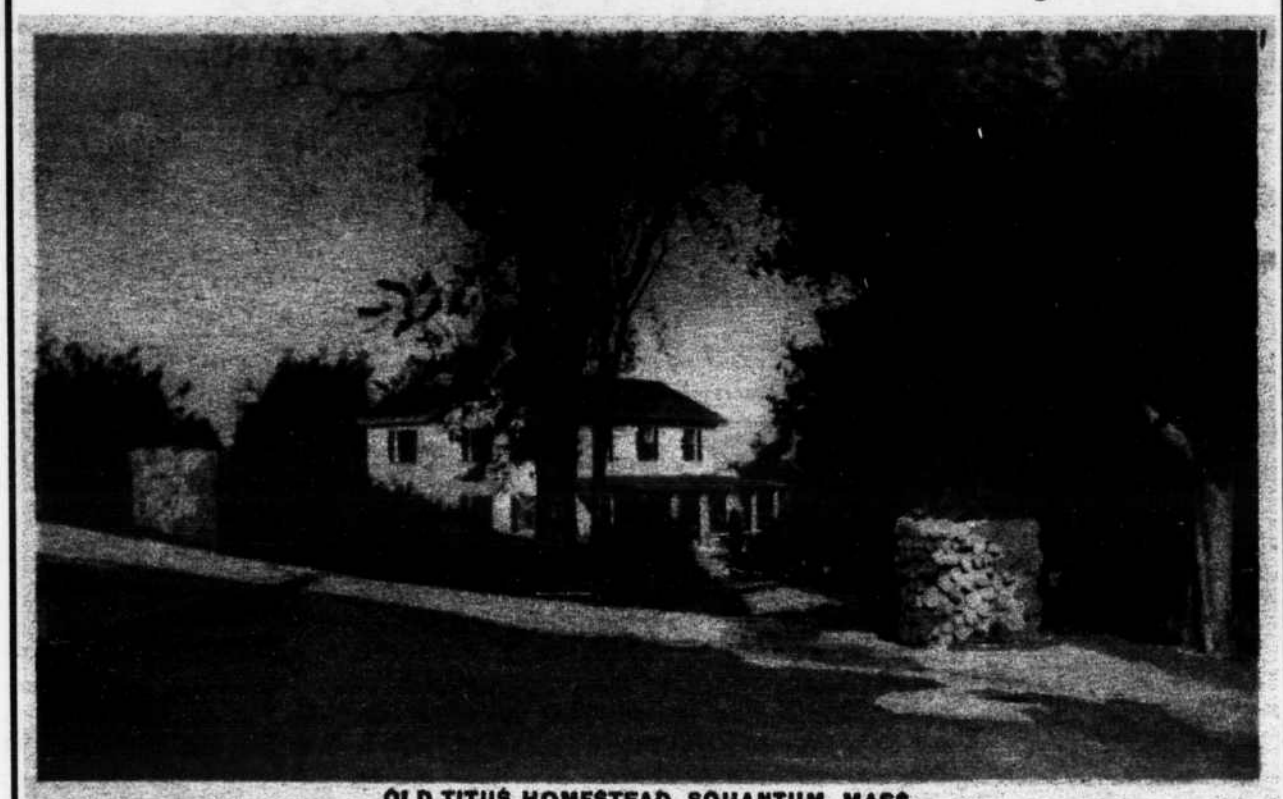
"I feel good," McCole says. "It was very refreshing. I'm ready to go in again. It was a great day and a great turnout."

Kahler admits she's feeling colder after the dip "but I'm good. The circulation is coming back to my feet and my legs. I hope to do it again next year."

Among the other frosty plungers: councillor John Keenan and new Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras.

"It's always good to take a dip in Quincy Bay," said Keenan. "It's my second year doing this. It's not as bad as you think. It's for a very good cause. I'm happy to do it," smiled the city's new state senator.

Tsaffaras's reasons for taking the plunge were twofold.



"When I met with the faculty and staff I said we need to increase our profile (in the community) and I'm willing to do something that's a little crazy. We're going to make it an annual fundraiser. We raised a couple of hundred dollars this week and next year we'll increase it."

The new president also brought along his own cheering section. About 20 other college staff, including some who traveled from Bourne, surrounded Tsaffaras after fulfilling his plunge promise and paused for photos.

Like John Hancock's bold signature on the Declaration of Independence, Saturday's plunge also made an emphatic statement.

Quincy's full of do-gooders who will step up – even IN cold Quincy Bay – for a worthy cause.

OLD TITUS HOMESTEAD, SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920's postcard showing the old Titus homestead on the corner of Bellevue Road and Huckins Avenue in Squantum. In the 1860's, Captain James Huckins, a retired English sea merchant, had purchased over 80 acres of land on the northern side of Squantum. Lillie Titus, his granddaughter who had married Nelson Titus and lived in her father's house shown here, later inherited this land that had been used as a farm. Lillie Titus was widely known as the Grand Lady of Squantum because of her involvement in many civic-minded, historical and patriotic projects. Among her many achievements she is credited with bringing the USS Constitution back to Boston where it was built, to be berthed for public viewing. After her husband died in 1899, Lilly Titus sold all her property to developers for a subdivision of almost 1,000 house lots. She kept about 15 acres that included her home shown here. After she died that parcel was sold and subdivided and this house was demolished many years ago. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

$13.61 Tax Hike Seen

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy residents can expect a 1972 tax rate in the vicinity of $156.11 according to recommendations of the Capitol Improvements Outlay Committee.

This would be a hike of $13.61 over the 1971 tax rate of $142.50.

This Week
1972
39 Years Ago

Overall recommendations include: operating expenses of $57.1 million including salaries of city employees and equipment; bond payments of $3,220,000 and new spending of $789,000, which includes almost half for police and fire equipment.

The largest new item is the appropriation for a Fire Department ladder truck to replace the 1952 model at Wollaston Fire Station.

SMYTH OPPOSES PROPOSED 10-CENT PARKING METER RATE

Ward Six Councillor J. Vincent Smyth has called the proposal to raise parking meter fees "a serious deterrent" to the economic growth of Quincy' shopping district.

In a letter to Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Smyth urged that the increases in meter fees "be set aside at this time, in the interest of both shoppers and merchants."

"In recent weeks," Smyth wrote, "I have personally conducted a survey among the Quincy Square, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs merchants relative to the proposed increase from five cents to ten cents an hour."

"It is the unanimous consensus that the present five cent fee be retained for the time being." Smyth also interviewed shoppers in the three districts who also felt the five-cent fee be retained.

RICHARD NEWCOMB PURCHASING AGENT

Wollaston businessman Richard K. Newcomb has been named city-purchasing agent effective Feb. 7.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon appointed Newcomb to succeed George Riley who was retiring after serving as purchasing agent during the McIntyre Administration.

The position pays $11,826 annually.

Newcomb was born in Quincy, was a graduate of Milton High School and attended Boston College. He was a Navy veteran of the Korean War.

Hopes Tragedy Was An Accident, Not Atrocity

Congratulations to Mr. Mike Morrissey on his transition from advocating our interests in the General Court to District Attorney.

After almost two decades as a petitioner of drafting our state laws, and consulting our interests and claims, he is now an enforcer. A spirit of inter-dependant compromising has yielded to a position of uncompromising and independent formidable influence. With that power comes the possibility (and probability) of destroying or tainting a person's reputation- not excluding his own.

I like Mike, but I think his office jumped to the wrong conclusions on deducing a murder/suicide attempt with the Asian woman in Germantown accused of murder. He should have, at a minimum, asked the woman what happened before asserting an accusation of homicide. As much as we demand answers, we still demand a spirit of fairness.

Morrissey should demonstrate moral and judicious prudence before accusing someone of such an atrocity. It will reflect and foster respect for his position as DA. With all respect to Mike, I hope his accusation is subsequently proven wrong and we will recognize a very unfortunate accident happened and not premeditated murder.

In the absence of more persuasive evidence at this time, I don't see any relevancy justifying a murder, or, a suicide motive. I can recognize a possibility, but not the probability.

I don't believe the woman is guilty of infantcide. I would like to believe it was an unfortunate accident. One (my) theory: Single mother living in a public housing project (implying meager funds with no disposable income to afford a babysitter) and her young child home from school, possibly ill. She's tired and wants to take a nap. She positions (DA and Quincy Police prefer "barricaded"- there's a fine line here) a bureau to keep her child from wandering in the event child wakes up before her. I can't explain the Hibachi or Wok (two different accounts), and will not speculate. Let's hear the mother's perspective before we jump to the wrong conclusion.

I have no relations, direct or indirect to the unfortunate family in Germantown. We are all neighbors living and thriving in a good city. I hope it was an accident. I grieve for the family, friends, and neighbors of the young boy.

City Hall's 'Sucker Punch'

Well once again we the people of Quincy were hit with another sucker punch by City Hall.

After the mayor told us there would be no tax increase this year on our real estate taxes, they increase our home value, what in return raises our taxes.

Do they think the people of Quincy are really that stupid that they don't know what is going on? This a good example of what is gong to happen from this day forward. The city is spending money they don't have.

The are banking of getting money from the fees and the state, so called free money is drying up.

We wasted millions on a dream that may never happen. This is what happens when you have dreamers running a city.

Let's get our act together and start fixing the old Quincy and put the new Central school in the old but beautiful Quincy High and stop taking tax paying property off the books.

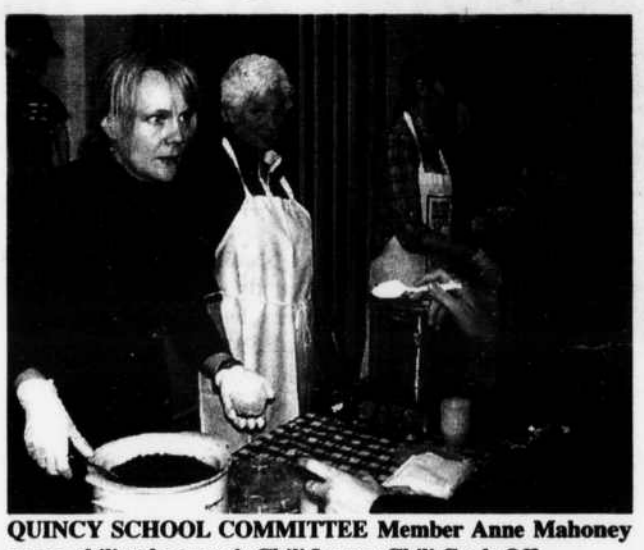
'Chili Lovers Chili Cook-Off' Saturday At Houghs Neck Congregational Church

Who will win the title of "Quincy's Champion Chili?"

The 2nd Annual Chili Lovers Chili Cook-Off will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 29 at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy.



With categories for both home-made and restaurant chilis, the cook-off will offer attendees the chance to sample and savor more than a dozen different chili recipes, with prizes awarded to the champion chili winners as voted on by attendees. Restaurants and caterers participating in this year's cook-off include The Common Market Restaurant, Braminy Kyte Catering and last year's chili champion, the Stadium Sports Bar & Grill, back to defend its title.

Amateur chef entries include a wide variety of both traditional meat and vegetarian chilis, including a vintage battlefield chili recipe created by an American GI during World War II.

"You would think that a chili dish made in a war zone wouldn't be that great, but this is really incredible," said Bill Dahlgren of Quincy, who plans to make "Slim's Chili" in the cook-off. "Everyone who's tried it says it's among the best they've ever had."

In addition to chili, the event will feature hot dogs, snacks, soda, baked goods and a cash bar serving beer.

Admission to the Chili Cook-Off is $5. For directions or more information, call 617-429-3080 or e-mail hncc@comcast.net.

South Shore School Of Theatre Vacation Program At ENC

The South Shore School of Theatre is offering a February School Vacation Program at Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy.

The program will allow children an opportunity to explore their stage skills through the beloved story of Charlotte's Web.

Students meet daily 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. during February vacation, Feb. 21-25, on the campus of ENC to produce the place. All students will receive roles after a quick and fun audition experience the first day.

SSST welcomes kids of all experience levels to join the program. A final performance will take place at the end of the week for family and friends.

Tuition for the program is $200 and internships are provided for teens who wish to pay off part of their summer program tuition.

Space is limited, and children are given space on a first come, first served basis.

Registration forms are due Feb. 16. Sibling discounts of $50 are available.

No scholarships for this program are available, but payment plans may be set up if neened.

South Shore School of Theatre was founded in Quincy last summer by ENC alumn and Boston theatre professional Tara Brooke Watkins. Watkins has teamed up with Boston children's theatre director Debra Mein to create programs for kids of all ages and talent levels.

Last summer, 40 children gathered daily to work on productions of Grease and Sweeney Todd as well as various theatre classes from scriptwriting to theatre makeup to set construction.

The production of Charlotte's Web that SSST will work on this winter is a straight play production of the famous story by E.B. White.

"It's important for students to learn basic acting skills in addition to musical theatre which we offer in the summer," said instructor Debra Mein. "So many times kids who really want to study acting when they get older have only had musical theatre training, so we want to make sure that we stand behind that we believe in by providing straight acting plays.

Students will learn how to audition for plays, work on stage presence and various acting techniques as well as learn how to make props and scenery for the production.

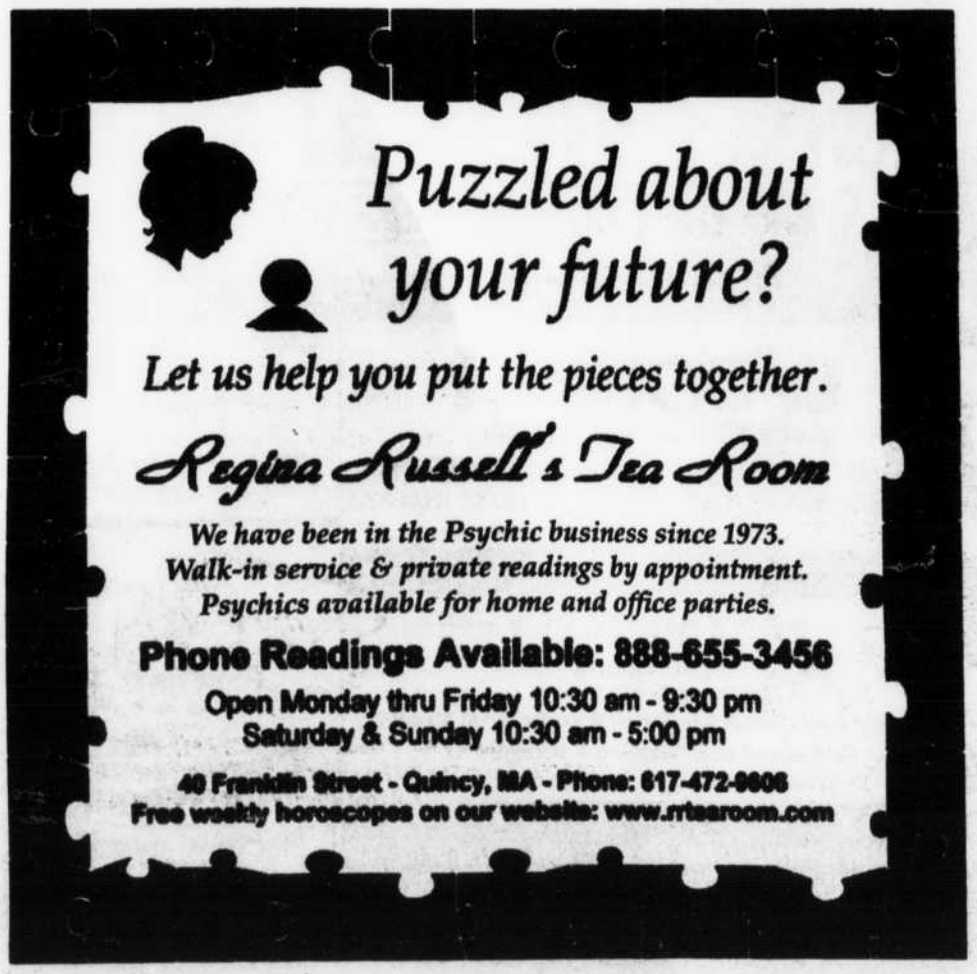
A Message And Update From The Neponset River Watershed Association



I read with interest Laura Griffin's article in yesterday's paper entitled, "Coughlin, Gutro Seek Update On Neponset River Access Plans." Ms. Griffin noted that our organization recently received a payment from the developer of Neponset Landing (2 Hancock Street) in Quincy, in lieu of constructing a canoe and kayak launch there.

Last spring, the Association, exercised a provision of the settlement agreement that allowed us to choose a payment from the developer, instead of having him build a canoe launch on his site. This provision was included in the original agreement because we knew from the start that the developer's site is surrounded by mudflats and that we would need to find funding from a public agency to undertake the expensive dredging needed to make the planned canoe launch workable. After more than five years, no public agency has come forward to pay for the river dredging, and we see no indication that such funding will be available in the future.

When the Association received the payment earlier this year, our Board of Directors set it aside for improvements to the Neponset River waterfront in Quincy. We are currently looking for an alternative canoe launch site in Quincy where dredging will not be needed. Even if such a site cannot be secured, we will spend the money on other aspects of the planned Quincy RiverWalk, which we hope will ultimately run from Squantum Point Park, across the Neponset Landing site and all the way to the Quincy/Milton boundary.

In the meantime, the Watershed Association is continuing to actively press the developer to build the pathways and other amenities that were promised on the Neponset Landing site. We look forward to meeting face to face with the Quincy City Council at their earliest convenience, to discuss these issues in detail.

Veggies Appetizers For Super Bowl

I was looking over some of my recipes for an appetizer to make during the super bowl football games. And with so many gravitating to veggies, these are a couple worth trying.

They can all be made ahead of time, so all you have to do is heat them in a warming oven and be able to enjoy the game with everyone else.

CAULIFLOWER FRITTERS

1 package of frozen cauliflower (or fresh equivalent)
1 egg
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
½ cup of water to blend
3 or 4 tablespoons oil (I use olive and vegetable oil combined)

Cook the cauliflower as directed. Cut in small pieces and place in bowl with all of the ingredients except for the oil. Stir the mixture until it resembles the consistency of pancake mix.

In a skillet, heat the oil and then drop the mixture by tablespoons, turning until golden brown on both sides. Drain on paper towel or rack and place in warming oven until guests arrive. If you are not serving them right away, refrigerate until ready.

STRING BEAN FRITTERS

1 frozen package of string beans or 1 large can
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup grated cheese (a favorite)
½ cup of water to blend
3 or 4 tablespoons oil (either vegetable or olive oil or both)

If you use the frozen beans, cook according to directions. Cut the beans in small pieces. If using the canned beans, cut them also.

Mix all the other ingredients except the oil until the mixture resembles the pancake mix.

In a skillet, heat the oil and drop by tablespoons turning until golden brown on each side. Place in a warming oven until ready to serve.

The other recipe is for corn fritters, which are made the same way. You can either use a package of frozen corn or a can they too are a treat.

With all of these recipes, if the mixture looks too dry, add a little more of the flour. I served them in a three-sectioned platter and they went like "hot cakes".

Other vegetables that can be made this way include zucchini, which have to be shredded and asparagus also cut in small pieces.

Fontbonne Academy Events

Fontbonne Academy will celebrate Catholic Schools Week with a series of events from Sunday, Jan. 30 through Saturday, Feb. 5.

This year's theme is "Catholic Schools: A+ for America."

Fontbonne's activities will begin a day earlier – Saturday, Jan. 29 – with a trip to Northeastern University. Students will spend the day with Northeastern's Engineers Without Borders student chapter.

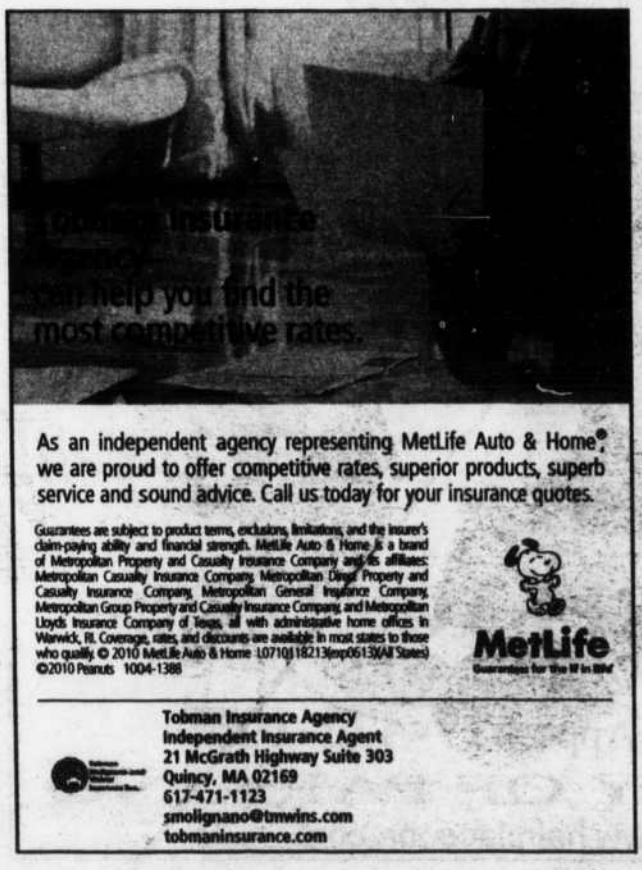
Organized by a recent Fontbonne alumna who is now at Northeastern, the chapter was the recipient of Fontbonne's 2010 Lenten Giving Program. The donation went to the purchase of water pumps; key components for the two wells built in a small Ugandan town. While at Northeastern, the Fontbonne students will focus on water. They will perform a water test on a sample and learn how to interpret it.

Other events planned:

• Sunday, Jan. 30 - International Festival at Fontbonne Academy. At 4 p.m. in the Auditorium there will be song, dance and costume representing cultures from around the globe, followed by an international buffet in the cafeteria. Suggested donation is $5. Open to the public.

• Monday, Jan. 31 - the Fontbonne Academy Service Club will conclude their week-long clothing drive to benefit Kids Clothes Closet in Braintree. They will collect gently used clothing for children and teens all week and spend Monday preparing to deliver the items. Any appropriate items can be dropped off at Fontbonne's Main Office.

Additionally, on Monday Fontbonne students will be partaking in an anti-bullying initiative called "Mix It Up at Lunch Day," which is run by the Senior Peer Ministers. "Mix It Up at Lunch Day" was created in an effort to develop inclusive school communities by encouraging students to get to know other students.



Students will be assigned to lunch tables to stretch them out of their comfort zone, getting to know peers with whom they might not otherwise socialize. There will be ice breakers and conversation themes.

Fontbonne will host its annual Catholic Schools Week Liturgy on Friday, Feb. 4.

St. Michael's College Liturgical Choir will provide the music during the service. St. Michael's chaplain, Father Brian Cummings, SSE, will celebrate the 1 p.m. Mass which is open to the public.

The Fontbonne Academy junior class will be active participants in the service as February is also "Celebrate the Juniors" month at Fontbonne.

For more information about Catholic School Week events, call 617-615-3041.

18 Employees With Combined 445 Years Of Service

Bus Drivers, Transportation Staff Honored By School Board

Bus drivers and other members of the transportation staff in Quincy tend to stay on the job for quite a while.

At last Wednesday night's school committee meeting, 18 transportation staff, with a combined 445 years of experience, were honored with certificates for their years of service.

"One of the things that jumps out at me is the years of service," said school committee member David McCarthy. "I think we have the best bus drivers on the South Shore."

Michael Draicchio, the city's director of safety, security and transportation presented the certificates to employees with 20 years of service. "We have an extraordinary staff," Draicchio told school committee in council chambers.

Mary Ellen Steen and Lillian O'Conell were at the top of the list with 35 years of driving Quincy's students to school. Linda Jablonski and Susan Columbus each had more than 30 years on the job as well with 33 and 31 respectively.

Bus drivers with over 20 years on the job included Karen McDonald (26), Geraldine Simon (26), Susanne Webber (26), Margaret McHugh (25), Carol Evans (24), Sheryl Linskey (24), Barbara Crawford (22), Charlene Feeley (22) and Ann McGue (21).

Employees with combined years as bus drivers and monitors included Lori Cook (23), Nancy Milone (22) and Diane Jurewich (20). Barbara Bertrand has been a bus monitor for 23 years.

"There have been trying times," said school committee member Elaine Dwyer. "I'm actually surprised how long you've all been with us."

A certificate was also presented to mechanic Daniel Gaudiano, who has been working on the buses for seven years. Dwyer referred to Gaudiano as the "magician mechanic" for his exemplary work in making sure the buses stay in service and on the road.

"It's the dedication that gets our kids to school," said School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney.

QHS Pipes Will Be Checked For Leaks

the smaller court. No other school activities were interfered with because of the leaks.

"Every time we have a leak we hope it's the last one," said Driscoll.

A glycol leak from the heating system at the Point Webster School caused the building to be evacuated on Monday. The leak produced a strong odor in the school cafeteria, forcing officials to ventilate the building overnight.

The pipes will be run through several cycles during the winter break to isolate exactly where the leaks are. The cycles are of varied temperatures and cause the pipes to expand and contract. Leaks, Driscoll said, are common in the cold weather when the heating system is on and liquid becomes warm. The leaks, he said, were not isolated in a certain area, but rather are in different sections of the building.

"They're not located in one spot," he said. "We're focusing on the problem areas and building as a whole."

The pipes are part of the heating system and not much water comes out during the leaking. Driscoll said the liquid is neither hot nor toxic and would not cause injury.

"This is a very good heating system," said Driscoll.

Leaking was reported in a third-floor classroom and the glycerin/glycol liquid then seeped through into a second-floor classroom.

School committee member David McCarthy said he was pleased to see there was a "plan of action" set up and wanted to know if the piping was defective or if the leaks were caused by shoddy workmanship. Driscoll said there are between 45,000-50,000 fixtures in the high school pipes and it doesn't appear to be a problem with the material used. All the piping was pressure checked when it was put in and above-ceiling inspections were also done.

"I don't think this building has fittings that are going to start to fall apart," Driscoll said. "There are a lot of eyes watching this place."

School committee member Jo-Ann Bragg voiced her concern for staff and students possibly slipping on the wet areas of the floor. "When you build a building over $100 million, you don't expect anything to go wrong," she said.

Driscoll said there is no threat of mold to any areas because everything is wiped down. A carpet that had damage to it was shampooed but ultimately replaced with a new rug.

Violin Recital At Crane Library Saturday

New York-born musician Akiko Kobayashi will perform a solo violin recital featuring the works of Francesco Geminiani, J.S. Bach, Eugene Ysaye and Fritz Kreisler Saturday, Jan. 29 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

This is the first concert in the annual Concerts at the Crane performance series.

Kobayashi has appeared as a soloist with a variety of orchestras and has won several awards in music competitions. She received a Distinguished Musician Diploma from the IBLA Grand Prize Competition where the jury remarked on her "remarkably precise and honest playing, with no artificial effects."

She graduated with a double degree in biology and music from Yale University and a Master of Music in classical violin from the Manhattan School of Music.

Ward 6 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 12

Registered Democrats will hold a Ward 6 Democratic Caucus Saturday, Feb. 12 at 10 a.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

Delegates and alternates will be elected to attend the Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

This year's Action Agenda Convention will be held Saturday, June 4 at the Tsongas Arena in Lowell. All Massachusetts Democrats chosen at their caucus will gather to adopt a new Action Agenda outlining grassroots and party building initiatives in preparation of the 2012 elections.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Quincy. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as delegate and/or alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority, and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, disability, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129, no later than 10 days after the caucus daate.

For more information, contact Chairman Paul K. Kennedy, Sr. at 617-328-1059.

Curves In Quincy To Host Open House

Curves in Quincy, 550 Adams St., will hold an open House Saturday, Jan. 29 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Monday, Jan. 31 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"This is a chance for someone to come in and see the equipment we have, and leaern more about our program," said owner Cheryl Bocash.

The open house will feature prize drawings and healthy snacks. Curves will also present Curves ciruit with Zuma, CurvesSmart™, free yoga and a new weight management program all included in a membership.

Curves provides an exercise and weight control program designed specifically for women. Bocash said Curves can help women establish a regimen to get more exercise for health and general condition, lose weight or tone muscles.

Curves' exercise program consists of 30 minutes of exercise three times a week. Participants work all major muscle groups and receive a cardio workout. It includes all five components of a complete exercise program: warm-up, strength-training, cardio, cool down, and stretching.

For more information, contact Cheryl Bocash at 617-774-1919.

He is the son of Diane F. Maguire of Norton Road, Quincy.

High Marks For Quincy's Special Education Programs

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy School System has developed several programs giving all its children with special and unique needs free public education in the "least restrictive environment."

Director of Special Education, Judith Todd, laid out the various programs to the school committee in last Wednesday night's meeting.

"We create programs based on the students' needs," said Todd. "I think our program's excellent."

Now, in her fourth year putting the improvements on the Special Education Programs together, Todd is confident the program is among the best in the state. It received high grades three years ago when evaluated by the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Among the programs offered are:

• Language development for language impaired students in grades K-12. The kindergarten class is referred to the primary transition class and the high school level is currently the extended vocational alternative program.

• STARS (Students Together Achieve Real Success). This program is geared towards students in K-7 with emotional disorders. Students in grades 8-12 attend the GOALS program.

• Special Needs Learning Center is a grade 1-12+ program. Students typically remain until the age of 22. For the past three years, Quincy Schools have partnered in a grant program with UMass-Boston. Students go on to attend Bunker Hill Community College for exploratory opportunities. The high school learning center continues to evolve, incorporating many community based vocational experiences.

• C.A.R.E.S. (Children Achieve Real Educational Success) is a PK-12 program for students who fall within the autism spectrum. Students may need ABA programs or be higher functioning and need assistance traveling from class to class, organizational help and/or a need for a home base to destress.

• Multi-disabled programs are located at Marshall for students in grades 1-4 wit multiple disabilities. Many of the students are non-verbal and require specially designed instruction. A developmental disability program previously at the CDC has relocated to the ECC.

• The P.A.S.S. program was implemented last year at North Quincy High. The target population is for students who demonstrate high levels of anxiety and depression, students previously outplaced. Last year, the program was very low in numbers. This year opened at almost full capacity, however, some areas of need were identified in areas of curriculum. The schools are investing in an on-line curriculum program, PLATO, to supplement the many courses needed with only two teachers..

"Certainly there's no more challenging program than special needs in the Quincy School," said Superintendent of Schools Richard DeCristofaro.

The MCAS scores reflect a differential of 25 points between the aggregate composite score and the special education subgroup composite. With the exception of Central, Atlantic, Beechwood, Merrymount and Wollaston (all in the area of math), the schools that show the greatest differential between the aggregate are schools with house our substantially separate programs: Parker, Marshall, Snug Harbor and Point Webster neighborhood resource room. Parker and Snug Harbor have an equal number of neighborhood students with IEPs and students in a system-wide substantially separate program.

Anti-Bullying Information Night For Parents March 1

Quincy Public Schools, as with districts across the state, is charged with implementing the mandates of a new anti-bullying law signed by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The new law provides students with an age appropriate anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Rotary Club has helped with funding for several school initiatives in the past. The Club has offered to provide funding to assist in the purchasing of a high school anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Public Schools will offer a parent information March 1 at Quincy High School with Dr. Elizabeth Englander from the Massachusetts Aggression Reduction Center (MARC) of Bridgewater State University at 7 p.m.

She is considered an outstanding presenter on the issue of bullying.

'Garden Inspirations' Topic Feb. 2

Ginny Ballou of Hingham will speak about artistic and practical sides of perennial garden design at the Houghs Neck Garden Club meeting Wednesday, Feb. 2 at 7 p.m. in the community room at Nut Island.

AEROBICS ALERT

Jumping, leaping, and quick lateral movements are all part of step aerobic exercises. To help ensure an injury-free experience, it is critical to select the proper shoes. The shoes must offer appropriate cushioning and shock absorption to compensate for the pressure on the foot. Each of the 26 bones of the foot experiences impact up to six times of force of gravity when performing aerobic exercises. Shoes for this activity should have an arch that compensates for the side-to-side motions and a substantial upper or strap that offers stability to the forefoot. If you have reservations about participating in aerobic activities due to ankle or foot issues, consult with you podiatrist.

Of considerable significance in caring for our feet is choosing the right shoes. Because of all our feet do for us, the least we can do is provide them with a comfortable environment, preventive care before problems occur, and professional care when they do. If pronation interferes with your activities, you might be interested to know that I am one of only two podiatrists in this state who has completed the advanced training necessary to offer patients relief from pronation through the use of the HyProCure™ procedure, a titanium implant that prevents the abnormal motion of the ankle caused by this condition. For an appointment at MILTON MEDICAL BUILDING, SUITE 221, please call 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building and Quincy Medical Center.

HINT: Running shoes lack the necessary lateral stability and lift the heel too high to be considered proper for aerobics.

A Reminder Of Winter Parking Rules

Snow Emergencies Pile Up For Local Residents

This snow season has been very busy for the city of Quincy.

With an average yearly snow fall of 60.7 inches, the city has already experienced over 50 inches of snow this season and has declared a Snow Emergency three times.

With more than half way to go through the rest of the snow season the City of Quincy Department of Public Works wants residents to know that there are a number of ways to find out when a Snow Emergency has been declared.

• Call 617-770-7669 for a recorded message.

• Those with cable TV can tune to channel 8 or 10.

• Using a computer, visit the City's web page at www.quincyma.gov.

Residents can also receive ALERTS directly to personal e-mail or cell phone by signing up at http://www.quincyma.gov/CityLink/.

If an Emergency has been declared, further information is available by calling the Snow Hotline at 617-376-1927.

The following winter parking rules apply during every Snow Emergency.

• No parking allowed on either side of Emergency Arteries during a Snow Emergency. A list of those streets appears with this story.

• Residents on side streets (not Emergency Arteries) are allowed to park on the EVEN side of the street this snow season. This is determined by which year the snow season begins. During even year snow seasons (2010), parking is permitted on the even side of the street.

• Overnight parking on the street is prohibited all year without a resident parking permit. Permits are available at the Quincy Police Department, One Sea Street.

• Vehicles in violation of winter parking rules will be towed at owner's expense. Also, if your vehicle is hampering snow removal operations (i.e. parked too close to an intersection, etc.) it will be towed. The average tow fee is $125, plus cost of storage. No exceptions can be made for short term (10-15) parking.

Leaders Raise Concerns Over Aesthetics Of New FR Bridge

By JOE REARDON

The Fore River Bridge that will connect Quincy to Weymouth will be in service for upwards of a century. And Quincy officials are adamant that the most aesthetically pleasing bridge possible will be the one constructed moving forward as the "Gateway to the South Shore."

"This is going to be here 100 years and it's going to define the area," said Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi.

Representatives from the city and Quincy Chamber, recently met to discuss what type of structure would be the best in the Fore River area.

The replacement of the bridge by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation (DOT) is one of the largest projects ever to be done under the Commonwealth's Accelerate Bridge Program (ABP). The bridge will replace the temporary bridge between Quincy and Weymouth on Route 3A.

State Representative Ron Mariano wants a "viable alternative" to the current bridge and a structure that will provide the best flow of traffic between Quincy and Weymouth. Aesthetics, too, are important he said.

"We have to keep talking about alternatives," Mariano said. "We want to showcase something we can be proud of. Obviously, we can't live with the one that's there."

Senator and city councillor John Keenan was confident there would be cooperation among the South Shore legislators. "We'll be reaching out to legislators as far as Cohasset," he said. "Braintree is also a relatively large stakeholder."

A vertical lift bridge with a 250-foot horizontal channel clearance and a vertical clearance of 58.5 feet above the high water mark has been recognized by the Environmental Assessment as the lone alternative that meets the project's needs. The proposed bridge structure will have two travel lanes, a bicycle accommodating shoulder, and a sidewalk in each direction.

Currently, the temporary bridge is located along a detour alignment approximately 150 feet upriver from the 1936 bridge alignment. The movable bridge span of the temporary structure consists of twin vertical lift spans with a vertical clearance of 55 feet in the closed position and a horizontal channel width of 175 feet.

The 25 percent design-build procurement package is scheduled to be completed this year. Construction will begin thereafter and is anticipated to be completed in 2015. The project contractor will be required to maintain both vehicular and pedestrian traffic over the bridge during construction.

Concerns of the bridge project were aired at a recent public meeting at The Fore River Club House with both Quincy and Weymouth residents in attendance. Comments on the Environmental Assessments and public comment are due by January 26 and should be sent to Richard Marquis at the Federal Highway Administration and Frank A. Tramontozzi of the MassDOT Highway Division.

Dean Rizzo, the Co-Director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce said the public meetings are crucial in the bridge building process. "It's an opportunity for both residents and businesses to weigh in on their thoughts on the process," said Rizzo.

Rizzo went on to say Weymouth and Quincy are looking to get the most aesthetically pleasing vertical lift structure possible. The vertical lift provides a larger entryway for ships into the Fore River Basin. "It makes sense to have the widest span possible," said Rizzo.

Alan Perrault, the Vice-President of Jay Cashman Inc., said Quincy should be sure that infrastructure work around the project should be sought out from the DOT. Perrault likened the tactic to the battle towns had when the Greenbush Line was being constructed.

"Hingham pushed a lot more than Cohasset did and got more than they thought being a squeaky wheel," said Perrault.

Raymondi spoke of the importance of stable traffic flow in the Quincy Point area while construction of the bridge is underway. He voiced concerns with the ability of fire department vehicles being able to maneuver in the area.

"If it's during rush hour traffic it's hard to get out and hard to get in," said Raymondi.

At the Jan. 18 city council meeting, Raymondi said

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 17, at approximately 7:20 a.m., Communications broadcast a B.O.L.O. (Be On The Lookout) for a white van that was just reported stolen from Lancaster Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

The victim stated that he had just turned the van on and parked it across the street in order for it to warm up. Seconds later, he noticed the vehicle driving towards him with an unknown male behind the steering wheel. Dispatcher/Officer Thomas Gaeta Jr. began maneuvering the homeland security video surveillance screens located in the communications room and found a white van traveling northwest on Southern Artery towards Hancock Street.

Officer Gaeta informed responding units that the suspect van was on Hancock Street in the area of Fenno Street. Officer A.J. Carthas monitored the traffic and spotted two white vans, but neither plate matched the suspect van. A few seconds later another van approached Officer Carthas and this was the stolen van. The driver's side door also matched the name of the company owned van.

The Officer immediately activated his blue lights and then made a u-turn, traveling north on Hancock Street directly behind the stolen van. The van slowed as if it was going to pull over by Merrymount Park, then made an abrupt left turn on Clay Street, pulling to the side of the road near Keohane's Funeral Home. As the van was just about to stop, the driver's door opened and the operator bailed out, sprinting down Clay Street. The van continued rolling and struck a curb.

Officer Carthas exited his cruiser and gave chase as he updated dispatch on his location as well as the description of the suspect. The suspect, who had a lead of 30 to 40 yards, ran into the yard of 139/141 Clay Street. At this time, Officers Flaherty, Glennon, Hockney and Kelly began to set up a perimeter in the area.

K-9/Officer Dave Cooper and his partner Deco arrived on scene and were directed to where the suspect was last seen. As the tracking began, Officer Matt Hockney radioed that he had witnessed the suspect in or around the backyard of 123 Clay Street. Hearing this, Officers on the perimeter were able to close the gap and narrow it down to the area of 48 Standish Avenue. and 123 Clay Street.

While moving through the yard at 48 Standish Avenue, Officer Sean Glennon noticed a red "doo-rag" and broken pickets on the fence. Upon further observation, Officer Glennon also located a handgun in the snow at the base of the fence. B.C.I. was notified of the gun and Detective Dave Pacino secured the weapon. Officer Cooper and Deco tracked the suspect to a garage and saw him hiding under a car in an open door garage. Officer Cooper yelled, "Show me your hands." Officers close by came to Officer Cooper's assistance.

The suspect was ordered numerous times to show his hands and come out from underneath the vehicle, but did not respond. With the suspect not adhering to commands and due to the fact a gun was found in the next yard, Officer Cooper gave his K-9, Deco a command to apprehend the suspect, so the dog went under the car and dragged the suspect out. The suspect was placed in handcuffs and Officer Carthas confirmed that the suspect was the same person that fled the van.

As the Officers began to clear the area and the suspect was transported to the station, a resident of Standish Avenue reported that the suspect had tried entering his residence as the Officers searched for him.

The resident pointed to a red coat that the suspect left in the driveway. He said that he heard the commotion outside and as he neared his rear door, he saw the suspect with the storm door open, trying to gain access through the locked rear door. The gun turned out to be a pellet gun.

During the booking process, a criminal record check showed that the suspect had 3 outstanding warrants and was also a Fugitive from Justice out of Rhode Island. The warrants were for "Assault in a dwelling (Armed), Assault w/ Dangerous Weapon, Larceny over $250 and two charges of Assault and Battery.

The suspect, a 24 year-old Brockton resident, was charged with "Larceny of a Motor Vehicle, Failure to Stop for Police, Attempt to Commit a Crime (Unarmed Burglary), Knowingly Resisting Arrest, Fugitive from Justice and 3 Default Warrants."

Nice work!

Reading Program Seeks Volunteers

The Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program is seeking volunteers to assist in elementary school literacy programs in the South Shore area of Norfolk County, including Quincy.

"Reading is central to every subject an elementary school child is trying to learn," said Jeannie McLeish, Norfolk County RSVP director. "That is why Reading Tutors are critically important for children who need a little more help with reading than their classmates do."

The program is sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners.

To become an RSVP volunteer or for more information, call 781-329-5728.

COLD-WEATHER Car Care

AAA Recommends Driving Tips For Winter Weather

Winter is here and the cold, snowy weather warrants special driving tips.

AAA recommends the following:

• Avoid driving while you're fatigued. Getting the proper amount of rest before taking on winter weather tasks reduces driving risks.

• Never warm up a vehicle in an enclosed area, such as a garage.

• Make certain your tires are properly inflated. Never mix radial tires with other tire types.

• Keep your gas tank at least half full to avoid gas line free-up.

• If possible, avoid using your parking brake in cold, rainy and snowy weather.

• Do not use cruise control when driving on any slippery surface (wet, ice, sand).

• Always look and steer where you want to go.

• Use your seat belt every time you get into your vehicle.

Tips for long-distance winter trips:

• Watch weather reports prior to a long-distance drive or before driving in isolated areas. Delay trips when especially bad weather is expected. If you must leave, let others know your route, destination and estimated time of arrival.

• Keep at least half a tank of gasoline in your vehicle at all times.

• Pack a cellular telephone with your local AAA's telephone number, plus blankets, gloves, hats, food, water and any needed medication in your vehicle. If you become snow-bound, stay with your vehicle. It provides temporary shelter and makes it easier for rescuers to locate you. Don't try to walk in a severe storm. It's easy to lose sight of your vehicle in blowing snow and become lost. Don't over exert yourself if you try to push or dig your vehicle out of the snow. Tie a brightly colored cloth to the antenna or place a cloth at the top of a rolled up window to signal distress. At night, keep the dome light on if possible. It only uses a small amount of electricity and will make it easier for rescuers to find you.

• Make sure the exhaust pipe isn't clogged with snow, ice or mud. A blocked exhaust could cause deadly carbon monoxide gas to leak into the passenger compartment with the engine running.

Tips for driving in the snow:

• Accelerate and decelerate slowly. Appling the gas slowly to accelerate is the best method for retraining (regaining traction) traction and avoiding skids. Don't try to get moving in a hurry. And take time to slow down for a stoplight. Remember: It takes longer to slow down on icy roads.

• Drive slowly. Everything takes longer on snow-covered roads. Accelerating, stopping, turning - nothing happens as quickly as on dry pavement. Give yourself time to maneuver by driving slowly. The normal dry pavement following distance of two to three seconds should be increased to eight to ten seconds. This increased margin of safety in front will provide the longer distance needed if you have to stop.

• Know your brakes. Whether you have antilock brakes or not, the best way to stop is threshold breaking. Keep the heel of your foot on the floor and use the ball of your foot to apply firm, steady pressure on the brake pedal.

• Don't stop if you can avoid it. There's a big difference in the amount of inertia it takes to start moving from a full stop versus how much it takes to get moving while still rolling. If you can slow down enough to keep rolling until the light changes, do it.

• Don't power up hills. Applying extra gas on snow-covered roads just starts your wheels spinning. Try to get a little inertia going before you reach the hill and let that inertia carry you to the top. As you reach the crest of the hill, reduce your speed and proceed down hill as slowly as possible. Don't stop going up a hill. There's nothing worse than trying to get moving up a hill on an icy road. Get some inertia going on a flat roadway before you take on the hill.

• Stay home. If you really don't have to go out, don't. Even if you can drive well in the snow, not everyone else can. Don't tempt fate: If you don't have somewhere you have to be, watch the snow from indoors.

• If you drive a four-wheel or all-wheel-drive vehicle don't become over confident of its and your driving ability in poor weather conditions. Although all-wheel drive vehicles will get you moving quicker in snowy conditions when it comes time to stop all-wheel and four-wheel-drive vehicle offer no improved stopping benefit.

Slick Facts About Oil

It's time to change the oil on your trusty car and you decide to do it yourself. You find yourself at the auto parts store staring at the assortment of oil on the shelves, trying to decide which one to buy and trying to decipher all the numbers and letters on the containers.

Cracking the oil code requires some basic understanding of what your vehicle requires. In every owner's manual there is a chart with a recommendation of oil type for that car.

The right engine oil is important to cold weather starts, says AAA. Oil can become thick and gluey when cold and can make it difficult for engine parts to move. Some oil grades are thinner than others, and thinner is better for winter weather.

The Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) rates oil for its viscosity in both cold and hot conditions. The first number, usually a 5W or 10W, is an indication of how thin the oil stays when cold.

The second number is an indication of how thick it stays when hot and usually ranges from 30 to 40. This means that 5W-30 oil is thinner than 10W-30 when cold.

AAA advises motorists to refer to the SAE oil rating to decide which oil grade is best, and to look in the owner's manual for the viscosity recommended for the vehicle.

Gas Prices Continue To Climb

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are up by a penny, marking the eighth consecutive week of price increases at the pump, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's Jan. 24 survey of prices in Massachusetts found self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $3.10⁹ per gallon, up one cent from last week.

The current price is one cent below the national average for self serve unleaded of $3.11. A year ago at this time the Massachusetts average price was $2.70, forty cents lower than today's average.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 25 cents, from a low of $2.99⁹ to a high of $3.24⁹. AAA advises motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area, and to make sure they and their passengers buckle up — every time.

AAA Fuel Saving Tip Of The Week

Your best defense against today's frigid temperatures: make sure your battery is fully charged. If your battery is in marginal condition, icy temps could drain its remaining power. Pack jumper cables in your emergency kit just in case.

AAA Southern New England is a not-for-profit auto club with 42 offices in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut, providing more than 2.8 million local AAA members with travel, insurance, finance, and auto-related services.

Koch, Street-Works Sign Landmark Deal

4,100 construction jobs and 5,700 permanent jobs as part of a new mixed-use downtown that includes more than 1 million square feet of new office space, more than 700 housing units, two hotels, a cinema and entertainment complex, and 575,000 square feet of new retail and restaurant space in Quincy Center.

At the heart of the master agreement is a financing mechanism that will require revenue from the new private development to pay for $227 million in public infrastructure costs, a wholesale reversal of traditional urban redevelopment by requiring the private investment to come first.

The mechanism, called the "purchase model," largely eliminates the public risk often associated with redevelopment projects: The City will purchase the public infrastructure – including parking garages -- from Street-Works only when new buildings are occupied and producing enough revenue to cover the City's debt costs.

The Koch administration and Street-Works spent nearly three years negotiating the terms of the agreement with legal and financial teams that included a number of the most experienced land-use lawyers in Massachusetts. The Quincy City Council voted to authorize Mayor Koch to sign the agreement and the related financial package in late December.

It will be the first large-scale development project in Massachusetts to use the framework, officials said.

"The partnership formalized today sets the stage for unprecedented levels of private investment and job creation, guarantees the long-term vitality our downtown, and will solidify our great City's position as an economic leader in the Commonwealth," said Mayor Koch. "Most importantly, our taxpayers are protected by the unique structure of the agreement. The financing is entirely project-based, and we do not borrow a dime to pay for infrastructure improvements until the private development is built and generating revenue."

Today's signing triggers the next phase of the project, which will focus largely on local, state permitting, formal designs, and private leasing of prospective new buildings. The partnership believes the first new private development could begin in 2013.

"We are very proud of what this day represents in this process," said Ken Narva, Co-Founder and Managing Partner of Street-Works, "This is a major milestone in bringing the new Quincy Center to reality. We are focused on working with the City, the community and addressing the tasks ahead."

In addition to the $227 million in public infrastructure improvements paid for first by Street-Works and later financed by the City through new taxes and parking and revenue, the City and Street-Works are working together to secure an additional $50 million in state and federal grant funds for a portion of the improvements.

Under the agreement signed today, called a Land Disposition Agreement, Street-Works will pay the City $30 million to cover downtown-related debt already incurred through construction of the Quincy Center Concourse and other related redevelopment costs.

The agreement includes firm benchmarks in which Street-Works must show that buildings are leased and occupied and adequate revenue is flowing, before the City is obligated to pay for the public improvements.

Under the plan, the City will use a state urban redevelopment law known as Chapter 121A as the property tax structure for the development. After development, the City expects to receive $10.1 million in property tax revenue. Of that, 6.8 million will go toward paying for the public improvements, and $3.6 million will come straight to the City's general fund.

Other new revenues such as new meals taxes, hotel room taxes and property taxes outside the immediate project area are expected to generate at least a total of $7.1 million in new revenue beyond what will be used to pay for the public improvements. In the end, the agreement will mean a 4 to 1 ratio of private spending to public investment, a figure substantially higher than most traditional urban redevelopment projects, Koch said.

Other project highlights include:

- A $10 million payment to the City from Street-Works to fund public improvements outside of Quincy Center.
- 50-cent per square foot maintenance fund paid for by Street-Works to fund improvements within the development district.
- $10,000 contribution to the City's Affordable Housing Trust Fund for every housing unit developed.

Some 75 persons applauded Tuesday after Koch and Narva signed official documents kicking off a new future for Quincy through a $1.2 billion revitalization project.

"This is an historic day. Let's get to work," Koch said during the brief ceremony in City Council Chamber.

In the future, Quincy residents will celebrate this signing, according to Koch who said, "They won't remember the names, but they'll remember the city made the right decision at the right time."

Narva said he would "let my pen do the talking" and presented a $350,000 check that "symbolizes the trigger for the LDA and the first benchmark being met."

The LDA or Land Disposition Agreement specifies the duties and obligations of the city and the developer, Street-Works, in the project.

"This is without question the most exciting project we've done," Narva said. "Quincy today and Quincy in the future will be a place in history. It's the first of its kind in Massachusetts."

To commemorate the occasion, Koch named dozens of persons responsible for getting the project off the ground,

Koch presented engraved pens in wooden cases with the names of each person involved engraved on the pen case as well as "Historic Quincy Center Agreement, January 25, 2011."

The pens, he said, symbolize "shooting the gun off for the race. The work truly has begun."

After naming Street-Works officials, Koch thanked his staff including Jim Fatseas, Helen Murphy and Chris Walker.

Koch commended Planning Director Dennis Harrington, calling his work "invaluable", then asked former Mayor Walter Hannon to step to the center where he cited Hannon's accomplishments for the city as a state representative, councillor and mayor.

In addition, Koch remembered the late Mayor James McIntyre.

Among those attending the ceremony were City Council President Kevin Coughlin, councillors Michael McFarland, Doug Gutro, Ward 5; Brian Palmucci, Ward 4, and Margaret Laforest, Ward 1.

ORGANIZERS OF THE fifth annual John Hancock Plunge for Interfaith Social Services hold "plungers" that were given to the winners in various categories at Saturday's plunge held at Wollaston Beach. From left: Leo Kelly, director of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission; Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services; event organizer Chickie Abdallah and volunteer Philomena Lewis volunteer. Waving in the background is Dick Herbert, president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach.

SEVEN GIRL SCOUTS from Troop #74143 which meets in West Quincy at the Ward 4 Community Center are more than happy to take the plunge for the Interfaith Social Services. Those participating were Maura Mac Donald of Quincy, Angela Grasso of Quincy, Julia Nelson of Scituate, Lauren Critelli of Quincy, Ciara Viscione of Quincy, Shauna McColgan of Quincy and Colleen O'Callaghan of Quincy.

50 Brave Souls Take Quick Dip In Quincy Bay; Raise $7,000 For Interfaith Social Services

John Hancock Wollaston Beach Plunge: Frigid But Fun

By JOE REARDON

Bundled up to stay warm in the breezy, 22-degree temperatures Dick Herbert surveyed the chilly waters of Wollaston Beach from the walkway, an hour before Saturday's 5th Annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge.

Herbert's observation wasn't profound, but it was right on target. "Unfortunately, John Hancock wasn't born in July," Herbert said with a laugh.

The frigid temperature wasn't enough to deter the 50 rugged individuals who showed off their hearty, New England toughness by bounding into the unforgiving, icy water at high noon. Several of the individuals frolicked in the numbing surf before bolting out and seeking warmth.

Up on the walkway, family members and well-wishers, rooted on the plungers by blowing noisemakers.

Donations from the popular event go towards Interfaith Social Services. The non-profit organization serves needy residents of the South Shore who need family service, counseling and clothing. Canned food donations were also collected at the plunge. In 2010, Interfaith's food pantry distributed 430,000 pounds of food, predominantly to Quincy residents.

Hancock was born in the city of Quincy on Jan. 23, 1737 and was the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

"This is a great way to remember a hero who is sometimes overshadowed by the other patriots of his day," said Quincy Beach Coastal Commissioner Leo Kelly. "John Hancock was born here in Quincy; he is our hometown founding father. Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission feels that raising money for needy families here on the South Shore is a great way to honor his legacy."

This year's event was another success with $7,000 raised for Interfaith. Participation in the plunge was down from last year, but that had more to do with the chilly temperatures of the day. Last year the event was blessed with unseasonably warm temperatures of 45 degrees.

"It's not snowing and that's the thing we were worried about," said Interfaith Director Rick Doane. "The water's going to be cold no matter what. It shows how great a community Quincy is. People rally around events like this.

"The plunge is so much fun. It was incredible last year to see hundreds of people gather on a cold January morning to take an icy dip in the ocean and to support their loved ones who participated. We are so grateful for The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and everyone who does the plunge. It is only with this type of community support that ISS can continue serving the thousands of local families who turn to us for help every year."

Event organizer Chickie Abdallah said the event brings out the best in people. "You don't have to go into the water to gather pledges," she said.

Quincy Point's Nicole Ash was busy giving out T-shirts to entrants prior to the plunge. This year marked the first time Ash hasn't taken the plunge. She knew perfectly well, though, just what the participants were in for.

"It's really, really, really cold," said Ash. "I went in last year, jumped around and put on a little show. I think I was numb for two days. It's for a really good cause."

A Quincy water and rescue boat made large circles close to shore to break up the sheets of ice to ensure a smooth, albeit cold, plunge for the participants.

At the registration table, Patrick and Ken Bambrick were contemplating their plunge. For Patrick, Saturday marked the first time he was participating in the increasingly popular event.

"It's going to be fun," said 13-year-old Patrick, a student at the Broad Meadows School. "I decided to do it a couple of days ago."

Patrick's father, Ken, said the money is going towards a good cause and makes the bone-chattering plunge well worth it. "You can suffer a little bit for a good cause," Ken said. "I'll admit I'm a little nervous this year. But I'll be quick in and out."

Bambricks' post-plunge plans included plenty of hot chocolate and a steaming shower.

Quincy's Dan Sharp said the combination of the cold water and bitter air made the plunge all the more tougher. "This is the worst it (cold) has been," said Sharp. "The water is really cold so you get a double whammy."

Worried About Picking Up Cold And Flu Germs This Winter? Stop And Scrub For 20

(NAPSA)-With last year's swine flu epidemic still on the minds of Americans, many are getting flu shots and stocking up on anti-bacterial products in an attempt to ward off infection. Despite all these proactive steps, it remains to be seen if we are doing the single best thing to prevent infection and illness-proper hand washing.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), up to 80 percent of all infections, including the flu, can be spread by hand contact. In an effort to cut down on the spread of cold and flu germs, Seventh Generation, the nation's leading brand of environmentally responsible household and personal care products, and maker of a new Hand Wash featuring purely plant-derived cleansing ingredients, is encouraging Americans to learn and adopt proper hand-washing techniques all year long.

"Many people think that antibacterial soaps are the only way to prevent the spread of cold and flu. Seventh Generation's new Hand Wash, which doesn't contain triclosan, synthetic fragrances or dyes, will do the trick if hands are washed properly," said Dr. Alan Greene, practicing pediatrician and best-selling author.

Here are several precautionary steps that Dr. Greene recommends taking to prevent the spread of cold and flu germs:

Wash hands properly: Rub hands together for 15 to 20 seconds (long enough to sing "Happy Birthday" twice) to make a rich, foamy lather that covers all hand surfaces.

Know when to wash: The most important times to wash hands are after nose wiping or sneezing, after visiting the restroom, before meals and before food preparation.

Watch where you touch: Avoid touching areas of the body where germs can enter, including eyes, nose or mouth.

Go for the elbow: Refrain from coughing or sneezing into your hand. Sneeze and cough into your elbow, to prevent hands from becoming contaminated with germs.

If you can't wash, sanitize: Hand sanitizers are a convenient way to kill germs on hands when you can't get to a sink. A little dab will kill 99.99 percent of germs without any water or towels.

'Heart Smarts For Seniors' At Kennedy Center Feb. 4

Quincy Medical Center emergency room phyisician Stephen McElroy, M.D., will present "Heart Smart for Seniors" Friday, Feb. 4 at noon at the Quincy Council on Aging, the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy.

Dr. McElroy will present a free talk on Heart Smarts for Seniors. He will provide important information on the best ways to keep your heart healthy, how to spot signs of heart trouble – like heart attack and stroke – and what you should do if you or a loved one has symptoms.

A heart-healthy lunch will be served.

The program is offered as a community education service by the Center for Healthy Aging at Quincy Medical Center, in partnership with Allerton House, Atria Senior Living Group, Norwell VNA and Hospice, River Bay Club and South Shore Elder Services.

MEDICARE: General Enrollment And General Information

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Metropolitan
Public Affairs Specialist in Quincy

Need Medicare Part B? If you're eligible, now is the time to sign up. The general enrollment period for Medicare Part B runs from January 1 through March 31. Before you make a decision about general enrollment, let us fill you in on some general information.

Medicare is a medical insurance program for retired and disabled people. Some people are covered only by one type of Medicare; others opt to pay extra for more coverage. Understanding Medicare can save you money; here are the facts.

There are four parts to Medicare: Parts A, B, C and D. Part A helps pay for inpatient hospital care, skilled nursing care, hospice care, and other services. Part B helps pay for doctors' fees, outpatient hospital visits, and other medical services and supplies not covered by Part A. Part C allows you to choose to receive all of your health care services through a provider organization. These plans, known as Medicare Advantage Plans, may help lower your costs of receiving medical services, or you may get extra benefits for an additional monthly fee. You must have both Parts A and B to enroll in Part C. And Part D is the Medicare Prescription Drug Program.

Most people first become eligible for Medicare at age 65, and there is a monthly premium for Medicare Part B. In 2011, the standard premium is $115.40. Some high-income individuals pay more than the standard premium. Your Part B premium also can be higher if you do not enroll during your initial enrollment period, or when you first become eligible.

There are exceptions to this rule. For example, you can delay your Medicare Part B enrollment without having to pay higher premiums if you are covered under a group health plan based on your own current employment or the current employment of any family member. If this situation applies to you, you can sign up for Medicare Part B without paying higher premiums:

• Any month you are under a group health plan based on your own current employment or the current employment of any family member; or

• Within eight months after your employment or group health plan coverage ends, whichever comes first.

If you are disabled and working (or you have coverage from a working family member), the same rules apply.

Remember: Most people are automatically enrolled in Medicare Part B when they become eligible. If you don't enroll in Medicare Part B when you first become eligible to apply and you don't fit into one of the above categories, you'll have to wait until the general enrollment period, which is January 1 through March 31 of each year. At that time, you may have to pay a higher Medicare Part B premium.

For more information about Medicare Parts A, B, C, and D, visit the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) website at www.medicare.gov.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

HEALTHY HEART REGIMEN WITH REAL TEETH

According to various studies, estrogen helps prevent atherosclerosis and helps women stave off heart disease until they reach menopause. At that point, as estrogen production wanes, women begin to catch up with men in terms of heart disease risk. The good news is that older women who receive regular dental care have a one-third less risk of developing heart disease than women who don't pay close attention to their oral health. That is the conclusion reached by researchers who analyzed the medical records of nearly 7,000 adults aged 44 to 88. Although the study found no beneficial link between regular dental care and heart disease prevention in men, women were found to benefit by having fewer heart attacks and strokes.

Today's column reinforces the importance of good dental care. We take pride in what we do and the services we offer. We will strike to do everything we can to exceed your expectations and provide you with a positive dental experience. You can feel confident you've made the right choice for you and your family. If you know of anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. There is a growing body of evidence to show that gum disease, which is the most common chronic inflammatory condition in the world, is linked with heart disease.

PLAYING HEADS-UP BALL

As perhaps the premier American contact sport, football poses more than its share of risk of potential injury. As part of its "STOP Sports Injuries Campaign," a coalition of national healthcare organizations has made it its mission to tackle the issue of children's sports injuries. Of particular interest to health professionals are traumatic injuries to the knee and shoulder and concussion, which account for the most common football injuries among both pro athletes and young players. Overuse injuries are another common problem, especially among youngsters who push themselves too far and too fast without proper conditioning. Young players are strongly encouraged to get pre-season physicals, and once the season is underway, they should avoid tackling opponents leading with their helmets.

We recommend parent supervision on all of your children's activities. We have created an atmosphere for healing, with a professional and caring staff that puts your health first. The methods used are gentle, safe and effective for all ages. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are qualified – with specialized equipment coupled with training, education, and experience – to determine you or your children's condition, and what to do about it. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Signs of a concussion include problems with balance, vision, concentration, and communication, as well as dizziness, sleepiness, fatigue, headache, and irritability.

Register Of Deeds Releases 2010 Quincy Real Estate Activity Report

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has released a report on real estate activity in Quincy for 2010.

In all 15,459 documents were recorded at the Registry related to Quincy real estate, a 3% decrease from the number recorded in 2009.

The total volume of all real estate sales both commercial and residential dipped slightly settling at $375,337,990 for the year.

"While there were four percent fewer land transfers contributing to the total sales volume, a positive mark for 2010 was the slight rise from 2009 of approximately $1,000 in the average sale price of commercial and residential real estate in the city," O'Donnell said.

The average sale price for 2010 was $417,506. There were 3,494 new mortgages in Quincy, down 4 percent from last year. The total value of the mortgages recorded in 2010 decreased by 31 percent.

"Despite these reductions in mortgage activity, November and December saw the greatest recording activity for the city most likely influenced by historically low interest rates. Quincy residents also took advantage of Massachusetts's Homestead law with 930 Declarations recorded," O'Donnell said.

Tips to Ease Winter's Chill

Now that we're halfway through winter, how are the drafts in your house? For all the winterizing we do in the fall, it sometimes can take a good blast of frigid air to see where the leaks really are.

Use a stick of lighted incense to check for leaks around windows and doors.

Although you can't caulk outside while the temperatures are so low, windows can be caulked on the inside. Then install clear plastic insulating film. If your sill is deep enough, two layers 2 inches apart will give even better coverage against drafts.

Invest in thick thermal drapes. Open them on the sunny side of the house during the day and close them once the sun goes down. They'll help keep out heat in the summer, too.

Uncarpeted floors can be chilly, especially if you have small children who run around in bare feet or who play on the floor. If you have wood, laminate or ceramic floors, consider getting a few inexpensive 5-by-8-foot carpets from a big-box store. A dark carpet that collects heat from the sun all day will add warmth to the house and also provide insulation. They can be rolled up and put under a bed during warm weather.

If you have an attic with insulation, measure how much is there. Get a free energy audit or take a sample to the hardware store and get advice on how much of what kind to put down. (If you get the roll type, remember to ask about whether the foil side goes up or down, depending on what you already have in place.) If you need the blown-in kind of insulation, you're better off not doing it yourself. Get references from whomever you decide to hire to do the job.

Is cold air coming through your bedroom walls? It's possible, especially on the north side of your house that never gets the sun. One way to block the cold is to hang a tapestry on the wall behind the head of your bed.

Check unused electrical plugs on exterior walls: Do you feel a cold draft on windy days? Invest in those plastic plug covers.

A final note: Change your air filter, even if you did that in the fall.

Attendees will also have an opportunity to learn about Neighborhood Housing's Down Payment Assistance Grant Program, and to be prequalified by at least one lender.

Registration fee for the workshop is $20. To register or for more information, call 617-770-2227.

New Homestead Legislation

A new Homestead Law which real estate professionals say will clarify "ambiguities" in the existing Homestead Law will go into effect March 16.

The hallmark of the new law is that it affords an "automatic" homestead or protection against creditors of up to $125,000 in a homeowner's equity in their primary residence, said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

The new scope of the law extends to the proceeds from insurance as well as from the sale of a home and safeguards homeowners of two to four family and mobile homes.

O'Donnell noted the mechanism of Declaring Homestead is still available under the new law and protects a homeowner's equity up to $500,000. The Registry of Deeds' staff is available to answer questions regarding the new law and new Declaration of Homestead forums will be available in March.

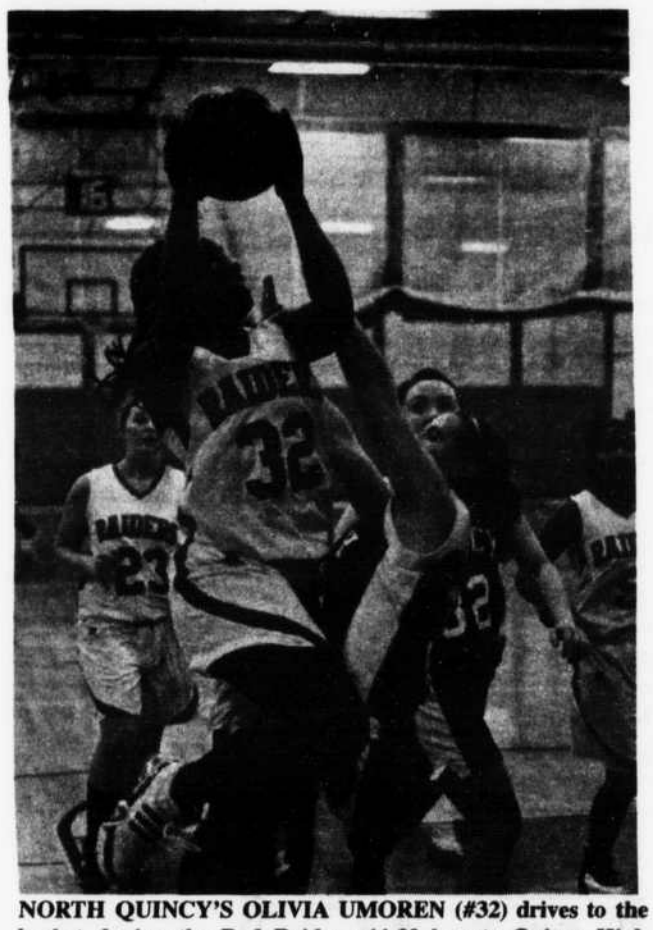
Presidents Defeated W-H Monday To Qualify For State Tourney



Quincy Tops North Quincy, 44-30

By SEAN BRENNAN

During the first half of last Friday's Quincy-North Quincy tilt, held at NQHS, the Presidents played a tale of two quarters.

Quincy (10-2 overall, 7-1 in Patriot League) started off the game by allowing North Quincy to score the first five points of the contest and, offensively from this point, it didn't get much better. At the end of one quarter, Quincy trailed the Red Raiders, 7-5.

In the second quarter the roles were reversed. The Presidents, behind three three-pointers from senior captain Kori Sorensen (team-high 13 points) and all-around fundamental team defense, shudown North Quincy, to take a 20-15 lead into halftime.

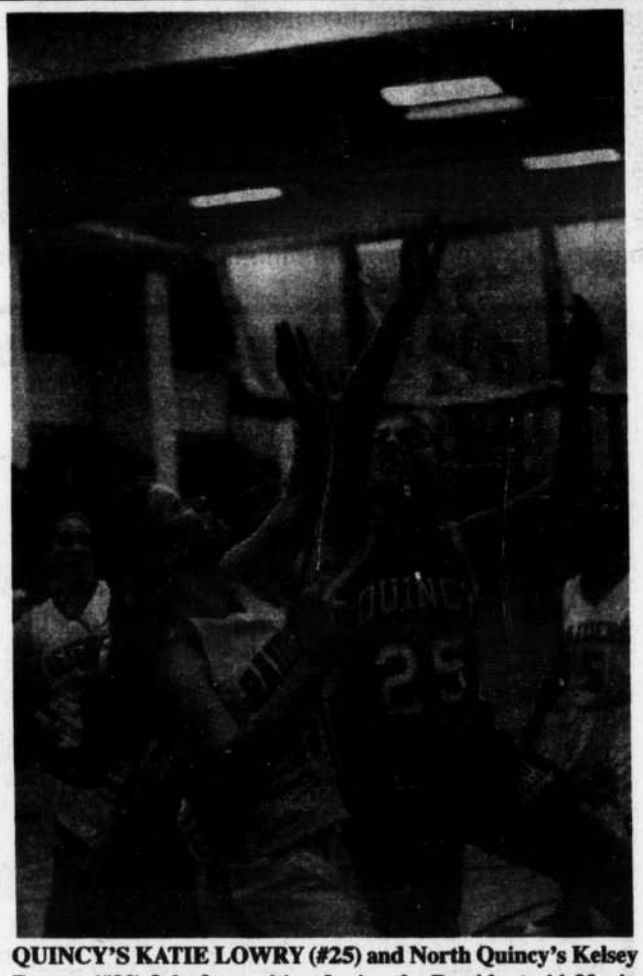
This 15-8 advantage on the scoreboard ultimately propelled QHS to a 44-30 win, cementing the Presidents' status as one of the top programs in the Fisher Division of the Patriot League.

"Give North Quincy credit, they started off the game playing great," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch. "I liked the way my team responded. We limited them to just two points the rest of the way and in the second quarter we got some things going offensively.

"Kori had been on the bench because of early foul trouble but, when she went back in, she ended up making three three-pointers in two-and-a-half minutes from different spots on the floor."

The second half began with the Presidents locking down on the defensive end. In the third quarter, North Quincy could manage only six points while Quincy continued to expand its advantage behind the shooting of juniors Nicole Lamie and Juli Tomer.



Lamie finished with 11 points and Tomer, after a slow start, got hot in the fourth quarter. Tomer scored all nine of her points after halftime, including seven in the final quarter. At one point in the fourth, Tomer scored five quick points, buckets that halted any late Red Raider comeback.

"We held them to 15 points in the second half and just six points in the third quarter," Bretsch added. "Juli Tomer had one of her better games. Those five points she scored in the fourth quarter, a deep three-pointer and a long two-pointer put the game away for us."

Where the Presidents really made North Quincy pay was at the free throw line. Quincy finished 11-for-13 from the charity stripe.

"We made our free throws," said Bretsch. "It wasn't the prettiest of games but we will take the win."

Senior captains Montana McBirney, Emily Gray and Kelsey Powers led North Quincy in the final Quincy-North Quincy game of their high school careers. McBirney finished with 13 points and ten blocks; Gray had five points and five rebounds and Powers collected eight boards and contributed four points.

Quincy Roundup

The Presidents have qualified for the Division I South Sectional tournament. Quincy (10-2, 7-1) earned its spot following a 51-44 victory over Patriot League opponent Whitman-Hanson HS on Monday night.

After falling behind 14-6, Quincy stormed back and took a 49-29 lead before holding on for the seven-point win. Team captains Kori Sorensen (18 points) and Kiley McDonald (12 points) paced the offense as the Presidents made it two straight tournament appearances; last year QHS lost in a preliminary round game.

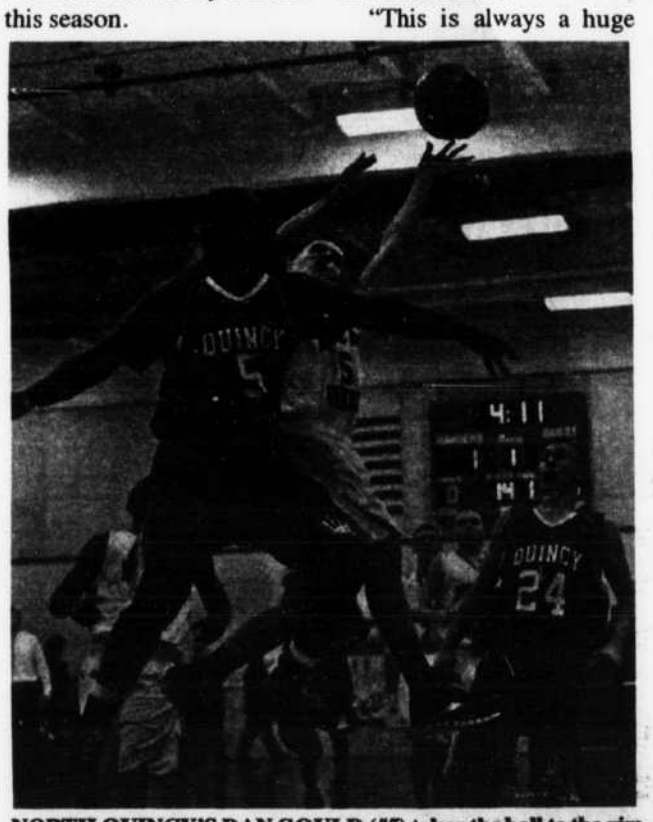
With a strong 7-1 Patriot League record, Quincy is a position to win a league title. The team's next opponent is Duxbury at home on Friday (6:30 p.m.). League games remaining include: Hingham (Feb. 1), Pembroke (Feb. 4), Hanover (Feb. 8), Scituate (Feb. 15 and Middleboro (Feb. 17).

North Quincy Roundup

North Quincy (2-9 overall, 2-5 in Patriot League) earned their second victory of the season on Jan. 18 against Middleboro High School with a 64-40 result.

McBirney led all scorers with 20 points. Senior Karla Fernandes chipped in with eight points and junior Olivia Umoren added nine points.

The Red Raiders finish their season with home games versus Brockton (Jan. 28), Scituate (Feb. 1), Silver Lake (Feb. 11) and Duxbury (Feb. 15). Road games against Hingham (Feb. 4) and Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 8) conclude the 2011 season.



Raiders Hold Off Presidents, 54-48

By SEAN BRENNAN

North Quincy improved its potential tournament standing with a gusty 54-48 victory over rival Quincy High School last Friday in the second and final game between the two city schools this season.

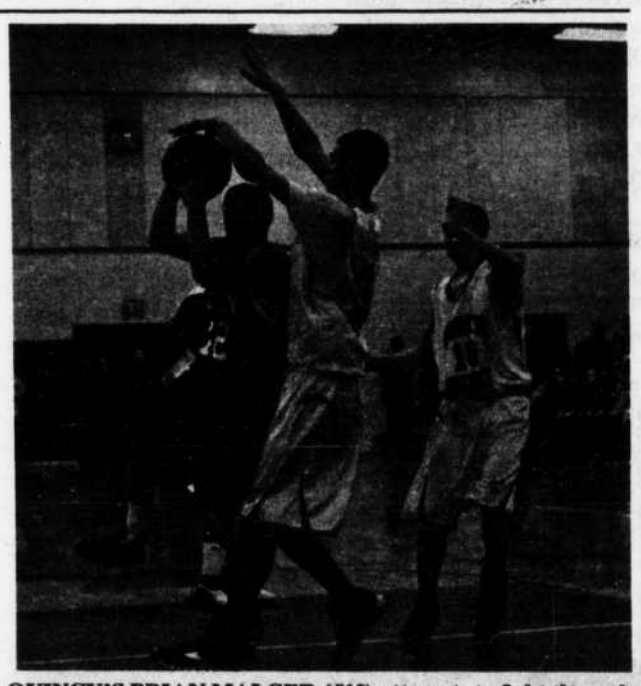
The Red Raiders (6-6 overall, 3-4 in the Patriot League) held serve on their home court and like the first meeting between the teams (a 53-52 NQ win), this edition was not decided until the final minute.

"This is always a huge game because it is so unique to have two city teams," said NQHS head coach Kevin Barrett. "The win pushes us back to .500 and hopefully we can take this momentum and make a push for the tournament. We are at a crossroads. We need to make a move now if we want to be playing come tournament time."

NORTH QUINCY'S DAN GOULD (#5) takes the ball to the rim during the Red Raiders 54-48 victory over Quincy High School last Friday night at NQHS. Quincy junior Reggie Cesar (#5) provides solid defense. North Quincy improved to 6-6 overall.

"This is a young team but we are maturing on the fly," continued Barrett. "Playing against Quincy in pressure situations and winning twice will hopefully translate into more success."

Entering the fourth quarter, Quincy (7-5 overall, 6-2) trailed 39-37. Senior forward Oliver O'Sullivan (17 points) gave the Presidents a 42-41 advantage with a deep three, but North Quincy's junior captain, Tim Liuzzo (game-high 20 points), responded with a trey of his own to push the Red Raiders back on top by a score of 44-42.



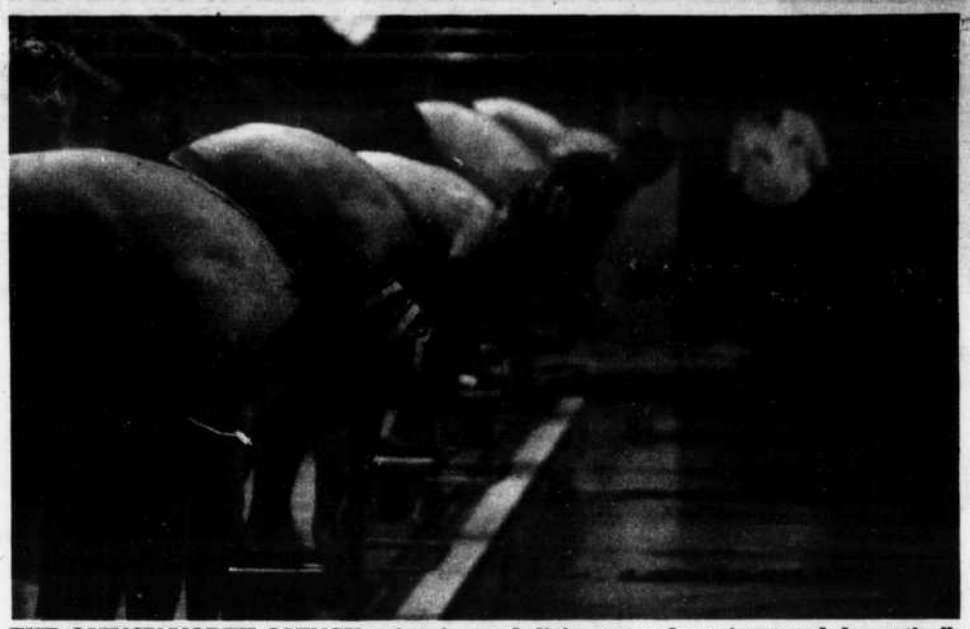
From there, North Quincy expanded its lead to 48-42 after sixth-man Marquis McClendon (sophomore guard) scored two quick buckets driving into the interior of the Quincy defense. O'Sullivan responded with a three-point play and a contested layup to bring the Presidents to within one-point with 2:30 left in regulation, however, Liuzzo (16 second-half points) gave his team a four-point cushion with a three-point play of his own (51-47).

North Quincy would outscore Quincy 3-1 in the final minute to win 54-48.

The Raiders received solid production from sophomore guards Dan and Patrick Gould. Dan Gould (14 points) provided an alternative scoring option for North Quincy and gave the team an outside threat that complimented Liuzzo's inside scoring.

"Quincy came in looking to stop our inside scoring and limit Tim's chances," said Barrett. "I have to give credit to the Dan and Pat Gould. They both made some big three-pointers and those points really pushed us over the top."

Barrett also praised the effort of McClendon, both on offense and on defense:



QUINCY'S BRIAN MALGER (#12) attempts to fight through the defense of North Quincy's Tim Liuzzo. Liuzzo led all scorers with 20 points including 16 in the second half as the Red Raiders competed a season-sweep of the Presidents with a 54-48 win last Friday. Quincy Sun photos/Lisa Aimola

"Marquis has given us a spark the last few games on offense and he did that again in the fourth quarter against Quincy. But where he really played well was defending O'Sullivan. He scored 17 points but Marquis really didn't give him any open looks. He has been really playing well this season."

Quincy dropped just its second Patriot League game despite an encouraging showing from senior guard Ryan Schultz (10 points). The Presidents are still in a good spot to challenge for a Patriot League Fisher Division title and an invitation into the state tournament.

QHS travels to Duxbury HS on Friday before hosting non-league Bridgewater-Raynham on Sunday at 5 p.m. Quincy and Hingham will square off on Feb. 1 at 6:30 p.m. at QHS.

Q/NQ Girls Swimming Win Second Straight Meet

THE QUINCY/NORTH QUINCY swimming and diving teams have improved dramatically this season under the coaching of Bob McGillicuddy. The girls' program is currently 4-3 overall while the boys are at 1-6. Both teams have already set school records this year.

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team won its second straight meet, this time defeating Silver Lake Regional, 87-60, on Jan. 20; Q/NQ improved its record to 4-3.

The 200-yard medley relay unit of Hillary Wong, Jessica O'Donovan, McKayla Johnston and Kat O'Connor established a new program standard of 1:55.18 that would set the pace for the rest of the Q/NQ swimmers who finished first in 11 of 12 events, achieving 1-2-3 in three events including 200-yard free, 100-yard free and 500-yard freestyle. Senior Kendra Johnston led the charge, garnering gold in two of those events: 200-yard free (2:08.47) and 500-yard free (5:45.07).

McKayla Johnston won the 200-yard individual medley (2:25.84) and the 100-yar butterfly (1:11.02) while Jessica O'Donovan earned the meet's best effort of 1:26.28 in the 100-yard breaststroke; Kat O'Connor won the 100-yard backstroke in 1:12.43.

Junior Olivia Goldson won the 50-yard free in 27.40 and the 100-yard free in 1:12.43.

Junior Taryn Urbanus amassed a personal-best and record-setting mark of 292.2 points in the one-meter dive. Her final two dives: an inward with one and one-half somersaults tuck positions, and back dive with one somersault with two and one-half twists earned over one-third of her final point total. Her last dive had a degree of difficulty of 2.7.

Q/NQ Boys

Silver Lake took the lead for good in the ninth event, the 200-yard freestyle relay, handing Q/NQ a 81-71 loss. Q/NQ fell to 1-6 overall.

Q/NQ showed its depth by grabbing two of the top-three times in five events. Senior captain James Lee (28.40), sophomore Diego Espinola (30.37) and junior Cyril Caparanga (31.62) finished 1-2-3 in the 50-yard free.

Tommy Nigl won the 200-yard free (2:41.38) and Elio Daci finished first in the 500-yard free (6:20.79); Sean Lerkvikarn won the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:25.06.

Q/NQ Girls (Pembroke)

Q/NQ won the meet's opening event, the 200-yard medley relay, giving them a lead that they would not relinquish en route to a 91-83 victory over host Pembroke on Jan. 18.

Pembroke outscored Q/NQ in the last four events, but Q/NQ's 400-yard freestyle relay unit of Kat O'Connor, Olivia Goldson, Kendra Johnston and McKayla Johnston won by 36 seconds to lift their team to an eight-point win.

Taryn Urbanus won the one-meter dive (250.15) and freshman McKayla Johnston bested her sister's (Kendra) program-record if 1:05.69, established on Jan. 11, with her 1:05.03 in the 100-yard butterfly.

Q/NQ Boys (Pembroke)

Pembroke defeated Q/NQ, 85-59.

Freshman Elio Daci won the 100-yard butterfly (1:17.02) and senior James Lee finished second in the 100-yard butterfly (1:08.39) and third in the 50-yard butterfly (28.56).

Q/NQ Girls (Duxbury)

The Quincy/North Quincy 200-yard and 400-yard freestyle relays established new program records with state-qualifying times but, the Q/NQ girls swimming and diving team (2-3) still dropped a 93-85 loss to host Duxbury High School on Jan. 13.

Q/NQ's quartet of sophomore Kat O'Connor, junior Olivia Goldson, senior captain Kendra Johnston and freshman McKayla Johnston set the new program standard of 1:50.35 bettering the previous mark by nearly two seconds in the 200-yard freestyle relay, while clocking 4:02.38 in the 400-yard relay. Each effort topped the meet and the latter time undercut their previous meet mark by over two seconds set against Hanover HS.

In the individual events, Kendra Johnston improved two new program standards. Johnston, who swam 2:23.15 in the 200-yard individual medley, finished second in an individual event for the first time this season the took first in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 1:05.69.

Her sister McKayla Johnston placed second in the 100-yard backstroke with a state-qualifying time of 1:07.19 that also busted Kendra's program record and won the 200-yard freestyle with another Massachusetts standard of 2:06.58, followed by teammate Kat O'Connor who finished at 2:16.00. O'Connor then broke the one-minute barrier for the second consecutive meet, swimming 59.44 in the 100-yard freestyle, good enough for second place.

Junior captain Taryn Urbanus won the one-meter dive with 229.50 points.

Q/NQ Boys (Duxbury)

The Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (1-4) succumbed to host Duxbury HS, 86-63, on Jan . 13.

Diego Espinola represented Q/NQ well in the freestyle events. The sophomore finished third in both the 50-yard (29.28) and 100-yard (1:07.28) races. Freshman Elio Daci was also third in the meet's 100-yard butterfly with a time of 1:19.4.

The Q/NQ program traveled to Pembroke HS on Tuesday afternoon for a Patriot League meet.

Quincy-Based Racing Team Fundraiser Feb. 19

The Quincy-based United States A-team International Hydroplane Racing Group will hold its 2nd Annual Mid-Winter Rock and Blues Jam fundraising party at the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Elks Lodge on Saturday, Feb. 19 from 8 p.m. until midnight.

In 2010, the team traveled to Nora, Sweden where they captured a solid third-place finish in a hard fought contest against 21 other boats from 13 different countries. The event is recognized by the International Olympic Committee.

With last year's World Championship Bronze Medal tucked away, the only United States team competing for world championship status in Europe now has its sights set on the 2011 World Championships to be held in Tartu, Estonia in July.

All of the funds raised will go directly to the shipping of race boats and related equipment to this summer's venue.

"We understand that racing on the world level is expensive but we are again confident that we will be able to raise the appropriate funds to get our team to next year's competition," said team captain Billy Allen. "We are again relying on like-minded Americans who believe that it is important to have the United States represented at this international event."

The fundraising event will include dancing and live music provided by Greg Mackenzie and The Greenbacks along with a selection of special guest musicians. There will also be racing boats on display and a full-color slide show of last year's race in Sweden along with the OIC Bronze Medal.

Tickets are $20. For tickets or for more information contact Billy Allen at 781-775-9290.

QRD Announces Girls Soccer Skills Program

The Quincy Recreation Department announced this month that the department would once again conduct an eight-week Soccer Skills Program for girls as part of its evening recreation gym program.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, this program will feature activities and instruction to improve the fundamental soccer skills of each youngster. All participants will also take part in mini-games.

The program is offered on Monday nights and kicked-off Monday, Jan. 24. There are two separate sessions; from 5-6:30 p.m. the program is for girls in Grades 5-7; the second session is from 6:30-8 p.m. and is for girls in Grades 8-11. The program will be conducted at the Broad Meadows Middle School gym.

Don Martin, head coach of the Quincy High School girl's soccer team, is directing the program. Members of the QRD staff will assist Martin.

Registration, which was taken on the first night of the program still has limited opening available. After the registration period, participants will engage in their first night of training.

The program will conclude on March 21 and there will be no program on President's Day (Feb. 21.)

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

What is the secret for successful achievement? There have been many "secrets" of success presented and defended...

Success comes in cans; failure in can'ts...

Success is a series of failures – put to flight...

There aren't any rules for success that work unless you do...

The only way to get anywhere is to start where you are...

Real success is more of an inward feeling than an outward show...

Some people have ability and some have ambition ... those who succeed have both...

It has been said that people fail most frequently because they seek a goal by someone else's path. They stumble most trying to talk the other person's way. It has also been said that you can't find a path to the top; you have to make one.

Success is not a matter of position or possessions. It is a frame of mind. It is the satisfying feeling of a life spent in a worthwhile way, and a feeling of service rendered...

Bethany has a Youth Group, a Men's Group, an Outreach Mission Group doing various charity works and a Friday morning Bible Study Class and a Thursday evening Prayer and Conversation Group.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Visit the church Web Page: www.quincybethanychurch.org for updates and activities. The Video Ministry records the Sunday worship services for broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6 p.m. on Thursday evenings on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays.

The church is wheelchair accessible.

First Church Of Squantum

First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Squantum, offers a Sunday school program for all children between the ages of 3-13.

All classes are taught Christ centered. Since all children learn in different ways, the younger group learns each of their lessons through crafts, bible stories, music, crafts and activities, while the older group learns through scripture, activities, field trips and open discussions.

Worship service and Sunday school are held Sunday mornings at 10 a.m. The public is welcome.

The church also holds Fiber Arts at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesdays and a Men's Breakfast Saturdays at 8 a.m.

For more information, call the church at 617-328-6649.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will hold a Family Sunday worship service Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

All are welcome to attend.

Pastor John Castricum will preach the sermon "Sibling Rivalry."

Ralph and Nancy Jacobs will serve the Diaconate.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

MOPS Mommy Olympics

MOPS (Mothers of Preschoolers) Mommy Olympics will be held at Fort Square Presbyterian Church, 16 Pleasant St., Quincy.

Newcomers are welcome. Free childcare is provided.

Call 617-328-3538 for more information.

Mothers of children kindergarten age and younger are invited. Test your mothering skills in events such as "Wet Diaper Toss," "Sippy Cup Challenge," and the "One-Handed Stroller Luge."

Sip some coffee and enjoy the company of other moms who can identify with the challenges of motherhood.

Art Exhibit At Crane Library

French printmaker Dominique Lecomte exhibits linocuts and woodcuts Feb. 2-28 in the Coletti Reading Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

After studying at the Ecole de l'Image in Epinal (France), Lecomte gradually specialized in landscapes made with relief printing techniques and watercolors when he came to the United States in 1994. His works, however, are not intended to describe particular places, but the ideas related to them.

Lecomte is represented in private and public collections in France, the USA, Canada, England, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Brazil, Japan, and in various galleries in France and the USA.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its own version of the cooking competition TV show "Iron Chef" on Saturday, Jan. 29.

The church program, entitled "Tin Chef," will feature chefs of all ages competing in two categories: chili and chowder. All entries will be anonymous.

Those in attendance will taste each chili and chowder, then vote for their favorites in each category.

The winner will be crowned "Tin Chef."

The competition is open to everyone.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

The church is handicapped accessible by the front door closest to the flag pole.

Eastern Nazarene College Commencement Saturday

Eastern Nazarene College will hold its winter commencement exercises Sunday, Jan. 30 at 2 p.m. at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, located at 37 East Elm Ave., adjacent to the college campus in Wollaston.

ENC President Corliss McGee will lead the commencement exercises. Approximately 90 students will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees from the Christian liberal arts college.

The program will also feature a commencement address by Paul Gorman, president and CEO of the South Shore YMCA.

In the event of inclement weather, commencement exercises will be held Sunday, Feb. 6.

With approximately 1,100 students distributed across its traditional residential undergraduate, adult studies, and graduate programs, ENC offers academic programs that prepare students to lead and serve in a diverse world by integrating the "best in education and the best in Christian faith."

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The week continues to encourage the forming of new personal relationships and the shoring up of those that might be weakening. New contacts also dominate the workaday world.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While the bold Bovine might want to move quickly to deal with sudden plan changes, it might be best to wait until you can come up with some solid facts behind the unexpected turn of events.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good week to consider how you'll move on matters both personal and professional. In either case, the more you know about them, the more likely it is that you'll make the right decisions.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Although you might find more colleagues ready to support your plans, some of them could ask for changes you don't approve of. Be ready to defend your position if necessary.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for Leos and Leonas to think about opportunities that might be outside your usual interests. You could be surprised to find something well worth your consideration.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You can turn a troublesome workplace issue to your advantage by prompting that Virgo penchant for preciseness to take over where all else has failed. An old friend makes contact.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A friend's unexpected work-related news could be a wake-up call to get you to reassess your position. See if you need to make changes to strengthen your position at this time.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might want to review a decision to work alone on a project. You might see it as efficient and prudent, but some might see it as unnecessary secretiveness, even for a Scorpio.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't be put off by a lukewarm response to a recent effort. Perhaps you didn't present a strong enough argument. Rebuild your case with more facts, and try again. Good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A surprise development in the early part of the week could be linked to an ongoing situation. Before you decide to take further action, consider calling for a group discussion.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your sensitive side helps you work through an emotionally difficult situation with a minimum of bruised feelings all around. A welcome change bows in by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) While the week still favors new pursuits, some things from the past also make a claim for your attention. The weekend is open for good times with some of the people closest to you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful gift for seeing the best in people.

Delegation Files Special Legislation For Quincy Center

Quincy's State House delegation has formally filed special legislation critical to the $1.2 billion redevelopment agreement for Quincy Center.

Mayor Thomas Koch travelled to Beacon Hill last week to hand-deliver the legislation to state Sen. John Keenan and state Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan. The bill was immediately filed as part of the 2011 legislative session.

The legislation, adopted as a Home-Rule Petition by the City Council, aims to ensure that language in state redevelopment laws coincide with the City's master agreement with Street-Works Development, LLC. The Council last month authorized Mayor Koch to sign the Master Agreement and agreed to send the special legislation to the State House.

"This legislation is the final step in approving this innovative public-private partnership. The result will be the type of long-anticipated upgrade to Quincy Center that never could have occurred through traditional financing," said Mariano, who filed the Legislation in the House of Representatives. "I commend Mayor Koch for his leadership, and look forward to passing this bill in the legislature."

Added Koch:

"Our delegation at the State House is tremendously enthusiastic about the legislation, and they have already been a great assistance. We are greatly looking forward to working closely with the delegation and seeing this process through to passage."

The bill will be filed by the Quincy members of the State House delegation and move through a committee process toward a vote by the both House and Senate with an end goal of a signature by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The Legislation also lays out details related to how labor rules will work for the project, a parking management plan between Street-Works and the City, and required flexibility in financing that is outlined in the master agreement.

The master agreement, called a Land Disposition Agreement, sets the legal and financial terms for a plan that calls more than 1 million square feet of new office space, more than 700 housing units, two hotels, a cinema and entertainment complex, and 570,000 square feet of new retail and restaurant space in Quincy Center.

The project, which will be built to "green" LEED standards, will create several new civic spaces within Quincy Center, includes 500 mature street trees, and will see Town Brook Culvert restored to a new location where it can be exposed to daylight and enjoyed as a public space.

The primary plan calls for $277 million in public infrastructure improvements as part of the project, including new underground utilities and public parking facilities with 3,500 spaces. The City and Street-Works are working to secure $50 million in state and federal grant funds for a portion of the improvements, with the remainder to be financed by new taxes and parking revenue from the downtown project.

Under the agreement presented to the Council, called a Land Disposition Agreement, Street-Works will pay the City $30 million to cover downtown-related debt already incurred through construction of the Quincy Center Concourse and other related redevelopment costs. In return, the agreement allows for the primary project to be expanded by up to 750,000 square feet of development and an additional $11.5 million in public improvements.

"This model between the developer and the City puts the financial mechanisms in place to allow the City to buy back the infrastructure, provided that the revenue is there to support it," Keenan said.

QUINCY'S STATE HOUSE Delegation with Mayor Tom Koch (center) after legislation was filed for the $1.2 billion redevelopment agreement for Quincy Center. From left, state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan and Ron Mariano and state Sen. John Keenan.

Under the plan, the City will use state urban redevelopment law known as Chapter 121A as the property tax structure for the development. After development, the City expects to receive $10.1 million in property tax revenue. Of that, 6.8 million will go toward paying for the public improvements, and $3.6 million will go straight to the City's general fund.

Other new revenues such as new meals taxes, hotel room taxes and property taxes outside the immediate project area is expected to generate at least total of $7.1 million in new revenue beyond what will be used to pay for the public improvements. In the end, the agreement will mean a 4 to 1 ratio of private spending to public investment, and a figure substantially higher than most traditional urban redevelopment projects, Koch said.

At no time will the City's general fund be responsible for paying for any of the public improvements, according to the agreement.

Leaders Raise Concerns Over Aesthetics Of New FR Bridge

the city's leaders needed to be heard and it is critical Quincy is not saddled with a bridge they have reservations about.

"We need to send a loud, strong message to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," Raymondi said. "It's huge and it is ugly. You're going to see this thing in Houghs Neck, Germantown and Squantum. It's so significant that we get this right. We have an opportunity here. I was disappointed that there were no options. This is after a year's worth of work. This is what we get for $300 million.

"We have an opportunity to construct something we can be proud of. We can do a heck of a lot better than what they're proposing."

Broad Capital Improvement Plan To Council

Mayor Thomas Koch will present a broad plan for capital improvements across the City to the City Council next week, including school roof repairs, flood relief projects, road construction, and seawall repairs.

The financing details will be laid out for the Council at next Monday's meeting, but Mayor Koch called the plan "necessary and aggressive." He said the plan will have identified revenue sources as part of the borrowing package being requested of the Council.

"We have tremendous infrastructure needs, and this plan will set a course to begin addressing a number of issues that have long needed attention," Koch said.

Specifically, the Mayor will propose the first part of flood relief project in West Quincy hit hardest by last March's flooding as well as flood relief projects in other parts of the City. The City will also begin to address long-standing seawall problems, including those hit hard by the blizzard on December 26.

"These are issues that have lingered for too long, and we are committed to doing something about them," Koch said.

The plan will include several million dollars of roof repairs to City school buildings, water main replacements, and road projects, all of which Koch said are vital to protecting the City's buildings and infrastructure in the coming years.

"We are an old City, and we cannot afford to let these needs idle, even in difficult economic times," Koch said.

Councillors Tackling Citywide Zoning Overhaul

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors began tackling zoning reform Monday in a renewed effort to overhaul the city's entire system, clarify problem issues, and institute protective measures.

"There has not been a citywide review since Jim McIntyre's administration (1966-1971)," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the Ordinance Committee, which is tasked with recommendations to City Council.

No zoning changes were recommended Monday. However, councillors referred nearly a dozen issues back to the zoning committee and the Planning Board for a new review and possible revision.

City's 5th Snow Emergency Until Thursday At 6 p.m.

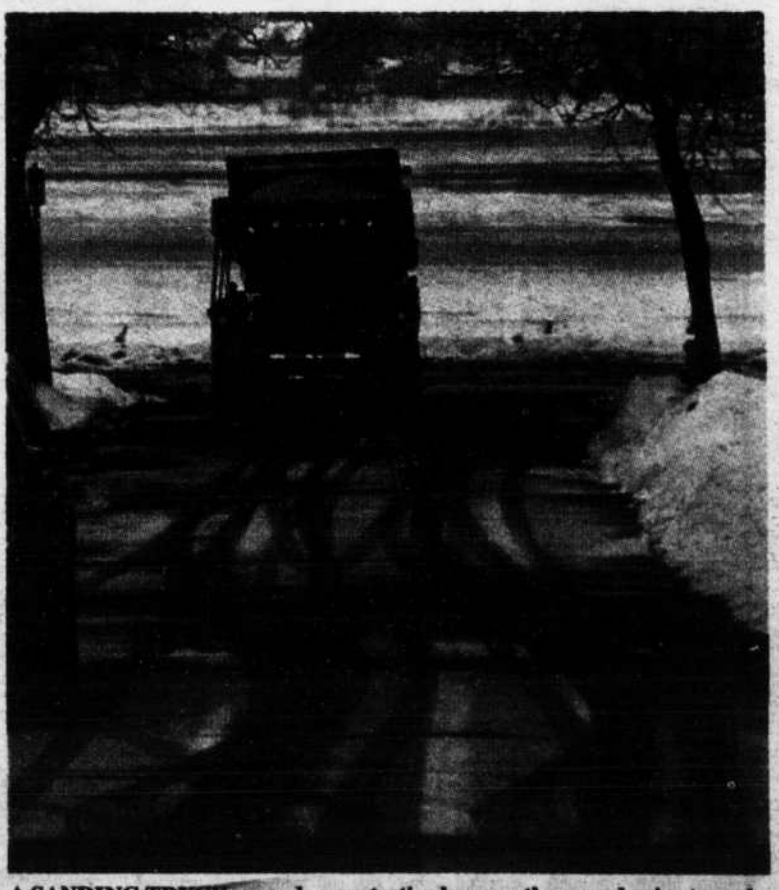
Latest Storm Likely To Push Snow Budget Past $2 Million

Related Story Page 9

The winter storm Tuesday and Wednesday – "February's 1-2 Punch" – was likely to push Quincy's snow removal spending so far to more than $2 million with more than two months to go in the snow season.

"We do what it takes to keep the city open for business and the streets safe – you cannot cut back on snow removal," Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday. "And I'm sure Mother Nature is far from through with us this year."

The city has received 56.7 inches of snow from Dec. 20 to Jan. 26, according to city officials.



This week's storm was expected to among the toughest so far with more than a foot of snow forecast and ice anticipated to mix over the span of more than two days. The mayor declared a snow emergency from Tuesday at noon until 6 p.m. today (Thursday).

The following winter rules apply during a snow emergency:

- No parking allowed on either side of Emergency Arteries. A list of those streets appears on Page 2.
- Residents on side streets (not Emergency Arteries) are allowed to park on the EVEN side of the street. This is determined by which year the snow season begins. During even year snow seasons (2010), parking is permitted on the even side of the street.

In addition:

- Overnight parking on the street is prohibited all year without a resident parking permit. Permits are available at the Quincy Police Department, 1 Sea St.
- Vehicles in violation of winter parking rules will be towed at the owner's expense. Also, if your vehicle is hampering snow removal operations (i.e. parked too close to an intersection, etc.) will be towed. The average tow fee is $125, plus cost of storage. No exceptions can be made for short-term (10-15 minutes) parking.

A SANDING TRUCK spreads a protective layer as the snow begins to make early evening tire tracks last Wednesday. Snow removal crews were at it again Tuesday and Wednesday as much as a foot of snow was forecast to fall in Quincy.

Harry Williams Eager To Start As City's New Library Director

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Monday will signal a new era for the Quincy Public Library system as Harry Williams, 3rd begins his first day as director and he said this week that he's eager to get started.

"I want to build on the excellent work that Ann McLaughlin did," Williams said Monday, referring to his predecessor who retired Feb. 1 after 40 years' service to Quincy's libraries, including 17 years as director.

Williams calls himself a "shameless" promoter of libraries and believes one of his major jobs is to "get out the word of what we do."

"Libraries are vulnerable like any other city department," said Williams of the current economic climate. In such times, it's dangerous to be "so quiet and self-effacing that we get lost in the shuffle. That could be suicidal for any department."

In fact, Williams pointed out that there's been a dramatic surge in library usage during this economic downturn, that libraries offer services for all residents through seminars, computers, job searches, information bases and literacy programs.

"It's our own fault if people say libraries are irrelevant," said Williams who believes in publicizing the work and successes of libraries.

Williams was chosen by a split vote of the Library Trustees on Dec. 13. Mayor Thomas Koch officially approved the decision.

HARRY WILLIAMS

"I don't blame people over there for being a little nervous, for taking strong opinions," Koch said of the controversy over the Trustees' vote.

However, Williams is hoping for a bit of a "honeymoon" period on the economic front in order to properly begin his work. He's already experienced major budget cuts in his most recent position as Library Director for Brockton and fears Quincy's system may be targeted again.

Last year, the Brockton budget was cut from $2.1 million to $1.7 million while Quincy's system experienced a similar cut from almost $2.6 million to $2.3 million.

Williams agreed that such cuts often put a focus on branch libraries, noting "It's an ongoing struggle in every library system. It's a balancing act."

In Brockton, Williams said the two branches are extremely busy but "having them is a struggle."

Williams noted that last year when Quincy branch libraries were threatened, residents turned out in large numbers to support them. However, Williams believes a regular review of each branch is important.

"We have a fiduciary responsibility to periodically check the usage of the branches," said Williams, adding, "It's the taxpayers' money."

Williams said he has met many of the city's department head, members of the Friends of Thomas Crane Library, and several staff members at the main library. He believes Monday's ceremony is especially significant as he joins the city team.

"It is the traditional swearing-in ceremony," said Williams, "I see myself as part of the municipal team."

As for Quincy library's very active supporters, Williams is eager to work with Friends of Thomas Crane Library describing the members as "700 ambassadors" for the library.

A graduate of Manhattan College, Williams earned his Master's Degree in Library Service from Columbia University.

Williams has served in administrative positions in five library systems in the past 25 years.

Those systems include Dudley, Webster and Southbridge, MA and Rahway, NJ.

Williams, who has been Library Director in Brockton since 2004, credits public libraries and librarians with inspiring him as a child in Yonkers, NY.

As Quincy's Director, Williams' salary is expected to be in the $80,000 range. Williams is not under contract which is fine with him.

"My thought is I'm going to be well compensated. If I can't perform, (then I'm out)," said Williams who is optimistic about his new post.

At 63, Williams is ironically one year older than McLaughlin who is retiring.

Age doesn't matter, according to Williams who said he loves his work.

NQHS Parent Advisory Council Meets Tonight

North Quincy High School Parent Advisory Council will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Trophy Room.

Principal Earl Metzler and Asst. Principal Robert Shaw will be on hand to give their monthly report.

A representative from Guidance will also be in attendance.

New House Majority Leader

Mariano Ready, Pleased With Top Legislative Post

By LAURA GRIFFIN

State Rep. Ron Mariano said Monday he was proud to be promoted to Majority Leader by House Speaker Robert DeLeo. As majority leader, Mariano is second in command of the state's House of Representatives.

"It's a great opportunity to be involved in major decisions," said Mariano who has served as state representative for the 3rd Norfolk District for the past decade.

His district covers portions of Quincy, Weymouth, and Holbrook. As Majority Leader, Mariano will receive an annual stipend of $22,500, along with his base salary of $61,440.

"As part of Speaker DeLeo's team, I hope to help lead the House of Representatives in the next session in a positive and productive way," Mariano said in a formal statement.

However, the Quincy Democrat also acknowledged the difficult economic decisions ahead as legislators "face unprecedented budget cuts and difficult choices in the legislature."

"There'll be a ton of challenges," said Mariano.

As Majority Leader, Mariano will lead the 128 Democrats in the House of Representatives which represents 80% of the House membership. While Republicans made some headway in the last election, there are still only 32 Republicans currently serving in the state's legislature.

Mariano's new position may also aid several major local projects, such as the Quincy Center Revitalization and the Fore River Bridge reconstruction and the redevelopment of the former South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

"I don't think it will hurt," said Mariano who was asked to comment on recent meetings about the Fore River Bridge design.

"It's going to be a good bridge; it will be first quality," said Mariano who added he would guarantee there would be a good bridge even if he were still a rank and file member.

Mariano, a lifelong Quincy resident, former schoolteacher and Quincy School Committee member, was elected state representative in December, 1991.

Since then, he has served several terms on the Rules Committee, as Assistant Majority Leader, Chairman of the Joint Committee on Financial Services and on the Joint Committee on Insurance.

Last session, Mariano led the House legislative effort to stabilize health insurance costs for small businesses, negotiated an education reform bill and was instrumental in budget negotiations. He also leads the legislature in support of the film tax credit which could result in permanent jobs and the construction of sound stages at SouthField, the former air base.

Mariano also worked for passage of auto insurance reform which resulted in 11 new insurance companies opening offices in the state.

In Quincy, Mariano has been active as a member of the Quincy College Board of Governors, and also headed athletic fund-raising projects and worked with local civic organizations.

Mariano is a graduate of Northeastern University with a Master's Degree from University of Massachusetts.

THE ROYAL GEMSTONE FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE

While there may be more expensive gemstones of regal purple hue, none surpass amethyst's gorgeous color. This has led many to speculate that if February's birthstone were not so widely available, it might command prices commensurate with its purple majesty. As it currently stands, however, this plentiful purple gemstone is well within the reach of anyone whose tastes for the finer things in life otherwise exceed the boundaries of his or her wallet or pocketbook. On the other hand, not all amethysts possess the same highly desirable saturated purple color. Deep colors are the most valuable, and whether or not they originate in Siberia, the best quality, darkest amethysts are called "Siberian." Medium-quality gemstones are referred to as "Uruguayan."

We're proud of our knowledge and experience in dealing with the beautiful gems of the world, and we'd be happy to share with you all we know about their individual characteristics. We hope you'll feel comfortable asking us any questions about amethyst or other eye-catching gemstones, their colors and cut, and the precious metals and settings they rest in. Focus On Taxpayers Claiming Eligible Credits

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance For Low-Income Filers

By JOE REARDON

Tax filing for low-income taxpayers has reaped a bundle in returns with a still untapped number of families and individuals, in Quincy, eligible.

The program, VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance) has drastically increased the total number of clients. In 2005, the program's inaugural year, the QCAP (Quincy Community Action Programs) assisted 131 taxpayers claim $81,000 in tax credits. The 2010 tax season saw 30 volunteers help 557 taxpayers claim over $587,000 in tax credits. More than $1 million in federal and state refunds were received.

The VITA program serves residents of Quincy and surrounding towns, targeting households making less than $49,000 in annual income. IRS-certified volunteers help taxpayers prepare most federal and Massachusetts tax returns. An emphasis is placed on helping taxpayers claim credits for which they may be eligible, including the Earned Income Tax Credit, Child Tax Credit, and Massachusetts Circuit Breaker Credit for seniors.

Representatives of the program and city met on National Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) Day on Friday.

"It's a service we're very thrilled to provide," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo. "We couldn't do this if we didn't have our tax volunteers. This allows low-income people to come here and get their taxes done for free.

"It's one of the best anti-poverty programs this country has."

The United Way, The Walmart Foundation, the IRS/MASSCAP and the Department of Housing & Community Development have all invested in Quincy to aggressively recruit volunteers, increase awareness and provide free tax filing services at QCAP.

Tom Fabrizio, who was on hand representing the mayor's office, lauded the program and hopes for continued success. "This is a tremendous program," he said. "We extend our congratulations and best of luck."

United Way Representative Kory Eng said the program is also a way to encourage people to be putting money away for savings, making them more self-sufficient. "This is part of a large strategy that we've become a part of," he said.

There are many individuals who are not aware of the program who would benefit greatly for it. "Everyone that's involved in the program is appreciated more than you can imagine," said David Laliberte of the IRS. "It's a great job. I love what I do."

Laliberte went on to say he expects the numbers to improve even more in the coming year. "It's exciting," he said. "The program has been around 10 years but it's still in its infancy."

Antenna Installation On Willard Street Topic

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting Thursday, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. to discuss AT&T's application for a special permit to modify its existing antenna installation at 230 Willard St.

The meeting will be held in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

AT&T seeks to replace three of its existing nine-panel antennas currently attached to the penthouse of 230 Willard St. The work is part of the wireless communication industry's upgrade from 3G to 4G service for the area. The proponent of the project is seeking a special permit before the Zoning Board of Appeals Feb. 22.

Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail.

• On Feb. 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln is born in Hodgenville, Ky. As an adult, Lincoln's sense of humor may have helped him hide recurring bouts of depression. He admitted to friends and colleagues that he suffered from intense melancholia and hypochondria most of his adult life.

• On Feb. 10, 1846, Brigham Young leaves Nauvoo, Ill., and begins leading 1,600 Mormons west across the frozen Mississippi River to a temporary refuge at Sugar Grove, Iowa. It was their first stop in a westward migration that eventually brought them to the Great Salt Lake in Utah. By fall nearly 12,000 Mormons had made the trek.

• On Feb. 7, 1914, the silent film "Kid Auto Races at Venice" premieres in theaters, featuring actor Charlie Chaplin in his first screen appearance as the "Little Tramp." Movies converted to sound in the late 1920s, but Chaplin held out until his film "Modern Times" (1936).

• On Feb. 13, 1945, a series of Allied firebombing raids begins against the German city of Dresden, reducing the town to rubble and killing as many as 135,000 people. It was the most destructive bombing of the war. Little, if anything, was accomplished strategically, since the Germans were about to surrender.

• On Feb. 9, 1964, the Beatles are introduced to America on "The Ed Sullivan Show," singing "All My Lovin'," "Til There Was You" and "She Loves You." It is estimated that 73 million Americans watched the show.

• On Feb. 8, 1983, gunmen steal the champion Irish racehorse Shergar from a stud farm owned by the Aga Khan in County Kildare, Ireland. The 5-year-old thoroughbred stallion was worth $13.5 million. Despite a highly publicized search by authorities, Shergar was never seen again and no ransom was paid.

• On Feb. 11, 1990, in a major upset, Buster Douglas defeats Mike Tyson, the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world, in 10 rounds at a boxing match in Tokyo. The loss to Douglas was the beginning of a long, downward spiral for Tyson, which included jail time and boxing license revocation in Nevada.

Beacon Hill Over, Capital Hill Someday?

The private sector – not politics – is the next career stop for Quincy's Tim Cahill.

CAHILL

The former city councillor, Norfolk county treasurer, state treasurer and gubernatorial candidate is looking for work in the the finance or investment world.

But he's still leaving the political door slightly ajar.

And if it swings open again, Cahill says it would be at the federal level, namely Congress or U.S. Senate. He's ruled out a return to the city council, a bid for mayor, and any other county or state-wide office.

"If I was to go back I would look at something – maybe six or eight years down the road – maybe something in Washington, D.C. It's tackling a challenge I haven't tackled yet," he says.

"But," he emphasizes, "that's a long way off. But you never know. If things work out for me in the private sector, I can envision not coming back into politics," the 52-year-old Cahill says. "I'm not focused on running for governor again. I've done that. It's not so much the governor's office, but I did eight years on Beacon Hill (as state treasurer) and it's a unique culture.

"It was a great experience and there are lot of people up there. I've been there, I've done that like city council and county government. If I were to go back into government – and it doesn't have to be elected office – . . . I would try to focus more on the federal level.

"If I were to run again, it would be for a Washington, D.C. seat. But I'm not planning on doing that and I have no intention of doing that in the near future or the far future."

He sits in a rocking chair in The Sun office – relaxed and stress-free. The rigors and every-day stress from the campaign trail a distant memory. He accepts his third-place finish behind winner Deval Patrick and Charlie Baker in stride and with no regrets.

"I moved on Nov. 3 (the day after the election). I wasn't shocked by (the outcome)."

Cahill said he stayed in the governor's race because he's not a quitter.

"If I had quit, I would have never have known how it actually would have worked out. I don't want to go through life not knowing. I'd rather take a defeat than not know how it's going to play out.

"People asked me, 'why didn't you quit?' and I'd say 'it's foreign to me' and I think it's foreign to a lot of people.

"I felt we still had a chance. I wanted people to weigh in and they did. I'm good with it."

Cahill said he wasn't surprised he finished third even his hometown of Quincy.

"I didn't take (the Quincy results) personally. I wasn't surprised, either. People in Quincy are smart. They knew because the press was telling them or they assumed that a vote for me could have had an impact on who actually won. People said they wanted Baker to win or Patrick to win.

"I think a lot of people were thinking "I don't want Baker to win' or "I don't want Patrick to win' and if I vote for Cahill that means one of the guys that I don't want may end up winning. It became a self-fulfilling prophecy: if you can't win, you're a spoiler, everyone says it, you start to believe it and then it really happens.

"They made a rationale decision. People vote what's in their best interests."

Cahill also chimed in on Scott Brown's election to the U.S. Senate last January and how that "miracle election" contributed to Patrick's re-election as governor.

"On the big picture side, I think the Scott Brown election gave people their opportunity to send a message. And the message was 'business as usual is not acceptable.' Just because you're the party in power, doesn't mean it's a birth right. That was a message that got through to Democrats and it also hurt Republicans in some ways – it didn't work out for them.

"I think it hurt me in some ways too because people first of all already felt like they had voted for someone who was outside the mainstream. Scott Brown's message of independence was my message and again people had already gone in that direction and Scott reminded everyone he was a Republican.

"From my perspective, you don't have two miracle elections in the same year. I thought maybe lightning would strike twice but it won't strike twice in the same year. Scott Brown's election was a once-in-a-generation election."

Cahill – and other political observers agree – on another point: Brown's victory energized the Democratic Party. Losing Ted Kennedy's Senate seat to a Republican was an unthinkable embarrassment to Bay State Democrats. In turn, it mobilized Democrats to a state-wide and congressional sweep last November.

"Scott Brown's victory woke up Democrats," Cahill says. "The governor realized he could not coast to victory. (Cong.) Barney Frank realized he could not coast to victory. I think what the Republicans tried to do to me also energized a lot of the Democratic base. They saw what was going on and how I was being attacked and how I was being portrayed and I think that fired up some people, too. "

"I just think people in this state overall feel it's not a red state," Cahill continued. "People respect government a little bit more here maybe than other places and the governor's message was a more compassionate message so to speak, or one that more people gravitated towards.

"Clearly if the fact that every race at the state constitutional level and the Congressional level as well as the governor's race went Democrat, it kind of tells you that Democrats really got energized whereas in January the Republicans and Independents got energized. Independents obviously didn't go with me. In greater numbers, they went with the governor and they went with Charlie Baker obviously but in greater numbers with the governor and that's kind of how elections are."

Another point Cahill learned: unenrolled voters are not true independents.

"Independents are lapsed Democrats, they're lapsed Republicans, people who don't fit in the party but they tend to go back and forth (between the two parties).

"They're not necessarily looking for an independent choice – they want to have an independent choice. They don't want to be told I have to vote for this guy, I have to vote for that guy or I have to vote for this party or that party.

"Independents, and I'm one of them, even when I was a Democrat I always felt 'I'm going to go this way this time. I'm going to go with the Republican or I'm going to stay Democrat.' I've always believed – even when I was in the party in power – that balance is important. One party rule is not healthy."

Cahill says for now he plans to stay an independent. But, if he runs for office again, he'd probably choose a party.

"I don't think running as an independent works. I tried it and we did everything we possibly could but it's a two-party state, a two-party country. You can govern as an independent but it would have been difficult and I don't underestimate the challenges, especially now, that I didn't see when I was running.

"Look what happened when I ran? I had both parties beating me up. It's bad enough to have one party beating you up, at least you have one defending you.

"I don't intend to go back and re-register at this point but if I were to run for a federal office, I'd run as a member of a party. That's something you have to accept as reality. Unless there's a third party created, it would be something I'd look at. I didn't want to go down that route of creating a third-party because I thought that the party system was what needed to change but I'm much more realistic now and a little less naïve."

Politics – for now – are in Cahill's rear-view mirror.

He's in the driver's seat and is ready to ride off to a new challenge . . . in the private sector.

WE'RE RECEIVED some replies to the question: who is this young boy dressed in his Easter finery who later grew up to become a mayor of Quincy.

We're giving our readers one more week to give us their answer if they think they know who it is. One hint – this young boy also held at least one other elective office other than mayor.

WHO'S THIS?

Can you identify him? Call me at 617-471-3100 or e-mail thequincysun@verizon.net.

We'll list the correct answer – and the names of anyone who got the answer right – in next week's Son Beams.

Scenes From Yesterday

DURING WORLD WAR II, communities across America had salvage committees to help in the war effort. This 1944 real photo postcard shows the Quincy Salvage Committee at work loading boxcars with salvaged paper in the railroad yards next to Grossman's in Quincy Square. Over 50 Boy Scouts and men volunteers collected newspapers and scrap paper that people placed out on their sidewalks. Collections were made bi-monthly throughout the city. The collections were made using city trucks and other equipment offered by private companies. In addition to paper they also collected tin cans and grease or fat left over from cooking, which people saved in tins cans or bottles. The money earned by the salvage committee was distributed to Quincy community organizations and projects after the city was reimbursed for the use of its equipment. Council To Receive Record $16.1M Budget

By FRANK McCAULEY

City Manager Edward T. Lewis will submit an all-time record budget of $16,194,947 to the city council.

This is approximately $1,194,000 more than was spent last year.

This Week

The 1956 budget as submitted by then City Manager Donald H. Blatt came to $14,569,954. By the time the council had completed its annual budget outlay chore this figure had been reduced to $14,151,395, however, after the budget passed, supplementary expenditures authorized by the council, brought the total expense up to about 15 million last year.

There is no general salary increase for city employees in the budget submitted by Mr. Lewis. After the finance committee has analyzed the budget, it will make the politically important decision on a general increase. Councillor Charles L. Shea has been leading a movement to get an across-the-board 10 percent increase with a ceiling of $500.

LEWIS TO SEEK O.K. TO BORROW FOR PUBLIC WORKS

City Manager Edward T. Lewis asked the City Council for authority to seek state permission to borrow $800,000 for the public works program for 1957.

The Manager's request is based on the action of the Public Works Committee's recommendations voted in a meeting, according to the Public Works Committee Chairman David S. McIntosh.

Some of the proposed projects included funding for street construction, Chapter 90 street projects, sewer and drain work and new public works equipment.

The city would have to get permission of the State Emergency Finance Board before the bond issue can be floated.

Evidence Points To Horrific Murder Of Innocent Boy

I would like to take the opportunity to respond to Gerard Shea's letter in last week's Readers Forum.

Mr. Shea's letter regarding the tragedy that occurred in Germantown, was nothing more than a uneducated and irrational conspiracy theory, meant to accuse District Attorney Michael Morrissey of sensationalizing the horrific murder of an innocent boy.

People do not barricade themselves into bedrooms and light hibachis inside a house to keep an 8 year old from wandering around an apartment. Toddlers wander. 8 year olds do not.

While you "don't believe the woman is guilty of infantcide," I believe that the Quincy Police and the District Attorney clearly had an overwhelming amount of evidence to charge her with her son's death.

I cannot imagine the psychological state of this poor woman, but my sympathy here lies with 8 year old Brandan Yang and with his older brother, the first responders and the DA who had to witness such a horrific crime scene.

John Gillis: A Worthy Recipient Of The Henry Bosworth Citizen Award

This is the first year of the Quincy Sun's Henry W. Bosworth Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award, formerly known as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award. How fitting that the first winner should be John M. Gillis.

Like Henry Bosworth, John Gillis has spent his life reaching out to people, lending a sympathetic ear and helping to improve their lives through many acts of kindness both large and small. During his 35 years of service in the Quincy City Clerk's office, John performed countless acts that went largely unnoticed by most people, but all of which were intended to improve the city he loves.

As a Norfolk County Commissioner, John has worked closely with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and provided great support to our community-based programs that help elderly folks and young people. These are just a few examples of his leadership and support that help people in very real ways.

Like Henry Bosworth, John has always been more interested in getting the work done than in hearing the applause and taking the bows.

John and Henry shared many experiences. Both grew up in Quincy Point. Both went off to serve their country in World War II, John in the Marines, Henry in the Navy. They were friends who traveled with their wives in the same car to Washington D.C. to hear President John F. Kennedy's famous inauguration speech. And they both were lifelong ambassadors for the city of Quincy.

The greatest way to honor Henry Bosworth's memory and the award named after him is to choose worthy winners, and there could not be a more deserving one than John Gillis.

Says Selling Hancock Lot 'A Huge Mistake'

(A copy of the following letter sent to members of the Quincy City Council was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Councillors,

I read with interest The Quincy Sun's front page article about the bond to purchase land new middle school. I was about to write a letter to the editor asking why the mayor has agreed to "sell" both the Hancock Lot and Ross Parking area, which must be about 10 acres or more, for $4.8 Million and yet he wants $9 Million of which $4 Million is to buy the former St. Ann's School.

How is the combined Hancock Parking lot and Ross Parking area values at only $800,000 more than St. Ann's School site? Was the Hancock Lot ever considered for a site for a new Central Middle School or other public facility? There is more then enough space and would have saved spending $9 Million for a much smaller site?

Can anyone explain to me the discrepancies in the selling price of $4.8 Million of acres of downtown public land to a private developer and yet request $4 Million to buy a former school and $5 Million to "prepare the site"?

To me selling the Hancock Lot for a little nothing is a huge mistake for Quincy taxpayers and setting a very dangerous precedent across the state if approved by the state legislature.

Quincy's Niamh O'Connor, North's Nick McNeil Cast In Riverside Theatre Works Production Feb. 4-6

High School Students In Lead 'Romeo & Juliet' Roles

By JOE REARDON

It seems only fitting that the leads in the Riverside Theatre Works' production of "Romeo and Juliet" attend schools where the rivalry is sometimes heated and furious.

Nick McNeil, who beat out nearly three-dozen actors for the part of Romeo, attends North Quincy High, while Niamh O'Connor, the production's Juliet is a student at Quincy High.

The irony of the Montague and Capulet relationship and its roundabout similarity with Quincy and North Quincy High wasn't lost on the play's two talented leads.

"They're the ones who came to me and said, 'Isn't that kind of weird,'" said Riverside's managing director Julie Beckham with a laugh.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be performed at Riverside Theatre Works in Hyde Park Friday, Feb. 4 at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 5 at 3 and 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 6 at 3 p.m.

For tickets and more information, visit the website www.RTWBoston.org

O'Connor said she realizes the role of Juliet has been portrayed countless times, but she's confident she can bring a fresh rendition to the part of the doomed heroine.

"I have never been so nervous for an audition," said O'Connor. "This is a huge role and I wasn't sure how to prepare because Shakespeare is so different from other shows.

"I tried not to worry about it too much because there were so many other girls up for the role. I just went in and tried my best to give Juliet a different twist and hoped for the best."

O'Connor has also tried to understand Juliet's motivations and place in the world, both before and after meeting Romeo. The part is far and away the most complex that O'Connor has ever undertaken.

"Juliet is difficult," said O'Connor. "She is very young and misunderstood. I also see her as being alone in the world, She doesn't have a great relationship with anyone except the nurse, but she is too old to understand.

"She isn't a brat, I see her as being indifferent and bored with her life. And when she meets Romeo she feels like he is the first person to understand her, and she doesn't really know what to think because she is overcome by emotions that she's never felt before, That makes her act out and do anything she can to be with him.

"The difference in me getting the role was most likely my age, I'm 15 and I feel like I can relate to Juliet's immaturity and growth because I am the same age as she was.

"My strength as an actress is that I guess I try to take risks. By taking risks I mean that I try to find different ways to portray my character, to make my performance unique, especially in a show like this that has been done so many times. You really need to bring a new twist. I also make connections from my life and my character's life, and I try to relate to my character's emotions as best I can."

Director Meghan Kenny said rehearsals have been moving along on schedule, despite the winter, and the audience will embrace Juliet in O'Connor's acting. "She's doing a good job making Juliet a teenager," said Kenny. "Juliet has her moments where she tries to become a woman. I think Juliet will be a pleasant surprise to everyone who sees it."

Beckham said it's O'Connor's subtleness that helped earn her the role. "She's quiet, sweet and very kind," she said. "She's also very innocent. Those qualities can be overlooked when casting a show."

McNeil approaches his roles with a workman-like attitude and immerses himself in the character, never failing to lose sight of the fact that Romeo is a teenager, not a grown man. "Nick brings a real sweetness to the role," said Beckham. "He's very well spoken. He's mature for his age and very determined. He's been in a lot of plays as a kid and has also worked to develop his singing talents."

Like O'Connor, McNeil is close in age to Shakespeare's Romeo and is confident in his ability to handle the role.

"This is my first Shakespearean play, but I think as an actor one of my strengths is I can take direction well which has been a very important strength with this part and with doing a show like this," said McNeil.

"Being able to memorize large amounts of material is also one of my strengths and has really helped me in this role."

RIVERSIDE THEATRE WORKS production of "Romeo and Juliet" features the lead roles portrayed by North Quincy High School student Nick McNeil and Quincy High's Niamh O'Connor.

McNeil never goes into an audition stone cold. He puts at least two weeks of preparation into the role and isn't afraid to give his own take on a character. And his range prepares him for whatever the audition entails.

"The audition was to perform two contrasting monologues," said McNeil. "I did a serious monologue from Much Ado About Nothing and a comedic monologue from Brighton Beach Memoirs. I don't know exactly how many guys auditioned, but I do know that I was one of the youngest."

McNeil wants to bring out Romeo's vulnerabilities and make the character someone the audience empathizes with and cares about.

"I think he should be portrayed as a teenage guy that people can relate to," said McNeil. "That is my major goal through out the show. I am trying to act like a kid people in this day and age can relate to, so when I'm saying these complicated, and often hard to understand lines, my actions and inflection will make it so people in the audience will still understand what is going on."

McNeil and O'Connor have worked together before on stage and have a good rapport. In March, they'll be playing the leads in The Sound Of Music and then move to their summer schedule. "Niamh and I have acted together for a couple of years and we have good chemistry together on stage," said McNeil.

Eastern Nazarene Theatre Department To Present 'The Glass Menagerie' Feb. 24-26

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present Tennessee Williams' classic play, The Glass Menagerie, Thursday, Feb. 24 through Saturday, Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center, located on ENC's Wollaston campus.

Production Manager Tara Brooke Watkins said ENC's production will attempt to fulfill Tennessee Williams' original vision for the play, which included using images projected upon the stage to heighten the sense that the audience is watching memories of years ago.

"Williams originally wrote the play with the intention of using photographs and film of various moments and images mentioned throughout the play," Watkins said. "His efforts were thwarted, however, when the original producer rejected the idea."

In ENC's production, Director and Set Designer Michael W. Ballard will bring Williams' original vision to life. "Audiences will see a version of what Tennessee Williams originally hoped to accomplish," Watkins said, "with Tom's visual memories projected on the scene, driving home the weight such memories carry for an individual."

Tickets for The Glass Menagerie are $10 general admission, $7 for ENC faculty/staff and outside students, and $5 for ENC students and children 12 and under. For tickets or more information, call the Cove box office at 617-745-3715.

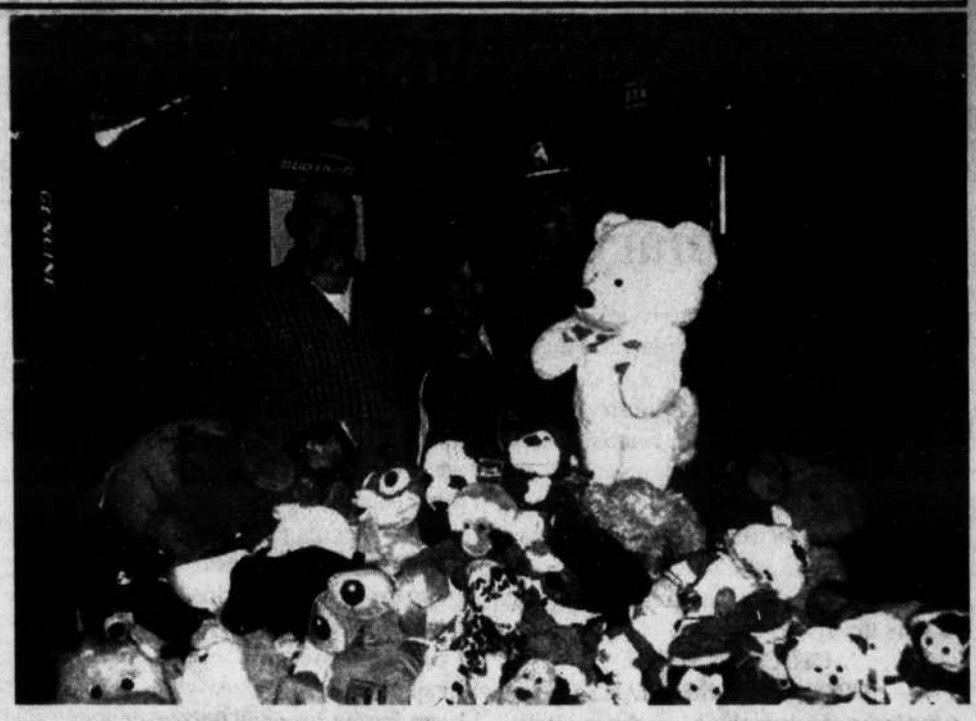
Quincy Lunar New Year Festival At North Quincy High Feb. 13

Quincy Asian Resources (QARI) will present the 23rd annual Lunar New Year Festival Sunday, Feb. 13 at North Quincy High School from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Admission is free.

This is the Year of the Rabbit, an animal that symbolizes peace and harmony. Approximately 7,000 attendees took part in last year's festival, making it one of the most popular and largest Lunar New Year celebrations in Massachusetts.

In addition to the traditional lion dance, Asian food vendors, and live performances representing five Asian cultures, the festival will introduce three new venues: Cultural Village, Wellness Activities, and Green Living.



Families will have opportunities to partake in interactive activities. Volunteers will provide educational materials on New Year celebrations.

The South Shore YMCA will offer fitness demonstrations and children's crafts.

Families are invited to enjoy games, shows and the popular Red Envelope ceremony at the end of the festival.

The festival is made possible by grand sponsors State Street Corporation, South Cove Community Health Center, Mohegan Sun, and Sunshine Travel.

The Festival is also supported by many corporations and community organizations, local community groups, businesses, government, social service agencies and volunteers. With their support, the Quincy Lunar New Year Festival has become a major cultural event for the Greater Boston area.

TEAM WORK – The Quincy Police Department recently received a donation of stuffed animals from Mari's Place in Quincy Square. The stuffed animals' project was initiated by Chef Joe Cushing, who one day, saw a Quincy Police Officer give a child a stuffed animal. He asked the officer about the incident and learned that Quincy Police officers often give children these toys after a traumatic incident, such as a car accident, injury or domestic violence calls. Cushing and the owner, Mari Sandonato, asked customers to bring in stuffed animals and after two months, called the Quincy Police to make the donation. From left to right are, Joe Cushing, Mari Sandonato and Patrol Lt. Kevin Tobin.

Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service Cancer Society's Daffodil Days Coordinator

Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service in Quincy has been named a sponsor and coordinator for the American Cancer Society's annual Daffodil Days.

One of the American Cancer Society's oldest and most beloved fundraising programs since 1973, Daffodil Days has empowered people to help save lives from cancer by raising money and awareness to help beat the disease.

"We are excited to be a part of the fight against cancer by participating in this unique campaign," said Dennis Keohane, funeral director of Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service. "Every dollar is so very important in supporting the American Cancer Society. For as little as $10 you can make a donation and give a bunch of daffodils to brighten someone's day!"

Residents and businesses of Quincy and surrounding communities can donate by ordering daffodils and other Daffodil Days gifts by visiting the Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service Web site at http://www.keohane.com.

The site includes a list of beautiful items available in exchange for donations, including everything from fresh-cut daffodils to an adorable Daffodil Days Boyds® by Enesco® Bear.

"By giving daffodils or other beautiful gifts to friends, family members, and even cancer patients, you're really giving hope and helping to save lives by supporting the American Cancer Society," Keohane said. "Their on-going work helps people get well and stay well by finding cures, and by fighting back against a disease that takes too much."

Flowers will be delivered to Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service the week of March 21st. Orders must be placed by March 1, 2011.

To place an order, Visit http://www.keohane.com.

City Energy Manager Guest Speaker At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting Tonight

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the community room at the Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of Harvard and West Squantum Streets.

Guest speaker will be John Sullivan, the city's Energy Manager.

Sullivan was recently appointed energy manager by Mayor Tom Koch. His goal is to encourage residents to take part in a number of energy efficient and cost-savings programs.

Sullivan will address the plan to reduce city government's energy usage by 20 percent over the next few years and make recommendations on improvements and community outreach.

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association will follow up with additional information as it comes available.

All meetings are open to the public.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Chicken With White Vinegar & Rosemary; Chicken With Rice

Over time, I have prepared chicken in tons of ways, and recently at a dinner at daughter Ann Marie and Dave's house, she made a chicken entrée that I hadn't made in years. I forgot how delicious the combination of white vinegar and Rosemary are.

Today's recipe is for two different ways to prepare it both made with white vinegar and Rosemary.

With all this snow, cooking was one way to pass the time.

CHICKEN WITH VINEGAR, ROSEMARY

6-8 pieces chicken thighs or drum sticks
1 tablespoon of Rosemary
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup of white vinegar with about 1/4-cup water or chicken stock
3 potatoes (cut for baking)
2 sweet potatoes (cut for baking)
1 medium onion (chopped)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Season the chicken with salt and pepper. Cut up potatoes and onions and coat them with olive oil and salt and pepper to taste.

Place the chicken and all the ingredients in a baking pan, and sprinkle as much Rosemary as you want. Cover with the vinegar and the water or stock. Bake uncovered for 40 minutes. By this time the chicken should be done. Potatoes take longer to cook. Remove the chicken and place in a covered dish. Set the oven up to 425 degrees and cook until potatoes are crispy.

The other recipe is for chicken with rice

4 or 5 pieces of chicken
1-cup instant brown rice
1 tablespoon Rosemary
1 cup white vinegar
1 cup chicken stock
1 cup frozen broccoli florets
½ cup frozen peas

I thought the instant rice would be mushy, but it wasn't. It's so easy and can all be done uncooked in a casserole dish.

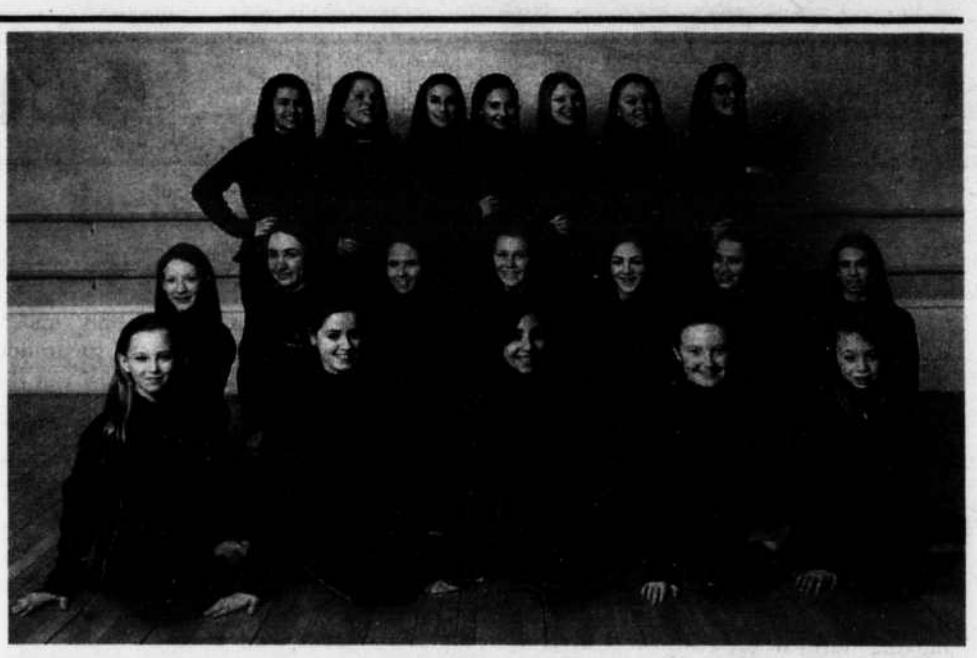
Preheat oven to 350 degrees

Season the chicken. Place uncooked chicken on the bottom. Add the uncooked rice, the uncooked broccoli and peas. Add the vinegar and the chicken stock. Bake for one hour. It all came out so flavorful as the liquid absorbed and was still moist.

P.S. I have also made the rice dish with a frozen veal chop. Any meat can be used.

Four Quincy Students On UNH Dean's List

Four Quincy students have been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at the University of New Hampshire in Durham, N.H.



Lauren D'Andrea earned highest honors which are awarded to students who earn a semester grade point average of 3.7 or better out of a possible 4.0.

Jessica Giordani, Rebecca Layden and Paul Oldham received honors for earning a grade point average between 3.2 and 3.49.

Entertain At Downtown Disney On The Water's Edge Stage

19 Dancers From Center Stage Arts Studio Perform At Disney World

Nineteen students from the Center Stage Performing Arts Studio in Quincy recently performed in Disney World in Florida.

The dancers, who ranged in age from 10 to 20, performed in Downtown Disney on the Waters Edge stage which is the newest premiere facility for the Disney Performing Arts program. The studio sent in an audition video of the girls dancing last spring along with an application and the group found out they had been accepted into the program about six months ago. The theme they chose for their performance was "Rhythms of The World."

The students learned nine individual dances to create a twenty one minute performance both beginning and ending in America but visiting Switzerland, China, Africa, Italy, India and Spain along the way. There were eight costume changes during the performance with one to represent each of the countries chosen. There are five teachers on staff at Center Stage, three who created the nine dances.

Deanna Aurelio, a former Disney dancer, has been with the studio for three years and created a tap number for Switzerland and two jazz numbers for Spain and India.

Jacque Churchill has been the ballet teacher on staff for 11 years and created two dances for China to a song entitled "Rising Sun" and Italy to a "Tarantella."

Laurie Graf did a tap number for America, two jazz numbers for America and an African style hip hop number for Africa.

"I am so fortunate to have a great faculty that works wonderfully as a team. We had so much fun working with our girls to create, choreograph and costume this show. They are a great group of young women."

Graf has been with this studio since the age of five when it was known as Total Attraction and took over two years ago when the former owner retired.

"There was an immediate level of excitement and enthusiasm for this project at the studio and before we knew it, 40 family members had decided to come along with us to show their support!" Graf said.

Justin Muchoney, Disney's Talent Coordinator said, "I can't speak highly enough of you, your staff, and your girls. They are some of the kindest, most respectful, and most professional young performers I've worked with. The show was delightful and – seriously – it attracted one of the largest audiences I've ever seen at this time of year.

"I am fortunate to always enjoy my job, but groups like yours remind me of how much I love what I do and just how lucky I am to be here for moments like this. I sincerely hope that we will see you and your students from Center Stage here with Disney Performing Arts again in the future, but until that time, I wish you the best in all you do"

Graf said "I am beyond thrilled with the response our dancers received from the Disney employees. They are a special group of young people who worked very hard to earn an opportunity like this.

"We spent many months not only perfecting our performance but also fundraising to help defray some of the costs associated with the trip."

The group was able to find an anonymous sponsor who covered most of the cost of sending the girls on the trip but also had much support from local businesses and families from their studio.

"Even after we found our generous sponsor I still felt it was important to have the girls continue with their fundraising efforts. They did all sorts of things like ran babysitting nights at the studio, had a raffle and sold chocolate, wreaths and t-shirts.

"I wanted them to understand how difficult it can be to earn a dollar so they really appreciated what it took to get them to Disney."

The kids were able to do extra things like buy team warm up suits with the money they earned.

The students were also able to take a dance workshop with Disney performers who taught original choreography from actual dances performed at the park from such shows as "The Lion King."

"They have really enjoyed sharing the Disney dances they learned with the younger students at our studio since they got home. Overall, this was a great experience for all of us involved. These kids know that we might be a small studio but we can make big things happen," Graf said.

Last year the students were asked to perform in Cambridge to help promote the premiere of the movie Fame and some of their dancers were also asked to perform ballet in an independent film.

Snowstorms Depleting DPW Resources

By JOE REARDON

Terrell Johnson and Jena Powell of Boston walked gingerly on the Hancock Street sidewalk last Thursday afternoon, at the same time keeping an eye on the slush and small patches of ice.

The pair was bracing themselves for another barrage of snow after a fast-moving storm in the early-morning hours dropped eight more inches of the heavy, wet stuff on a city that has been besieged by extreme weather all winter.

Johnson, though, said getting around Quincy Center was smooth sailing for the most part. "People have already shoveled out," he said. "The city has been ahead of the storms."

For Tim Fonseca of Whitman, the snow was hardly an inconvenience. Fonseca was finishing up shoveling the front entrance to the Stop & Shop headquarters in the bright sunshine.

Snow has never been a four-letter word to Fonseca. "I love the winter so it (snow storm) doesn't make any difference to me," he said.

A mixture of snow and icy rain was due to hit the South Shore on Tuesday and Wednesday with the potential of 12 inches when all was said and done.

The continuity of the snowstorms has been especially trying on the department of public works and its resources. The DPW has already gone through 7,000 tons of salt with the four snow emergencies. The biggest problem has been the fact that snow hasn't had the chance to melt before the next storm hits. And with 12-14 inches per week, DPW is running out of real estate to move the snow.

"There's only so many places you can put it," said DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville. "It has been a very taxing winter on the budget, men and equipment."

Witheachstorm,Prendeville sends out more than 130 city and sub-contractor plows, front-end loaders, back loaders and sanders in an attempt to keep up with the snowfall and try to keep roads drivable. The trucks were busy last Friday and Saturday night clearing out businesses and school areas more thoroughly around the city.

Prendeville has made it a point to maintain a reserve supply of salt in the neighborhood of 1,000-1,500 tons. The winter has been a drain on the budget with the total cost already at a staggering $1.7 million with yet another storm in the forecast for Wednesday.

"The frequency of the storms is more than we've seen in a while," said Prendeville. "We're getting hit every week."

The city has been lucky, Prendeville said, being able to use two "snow farms" to relocate huge amounts of snow in the aftermath of the storms. Both the Dan Quirk location at the shipyard and Boston Scientific, on the site of the old Jordan Marsh warehouse, have gone a long way in alleviating some of the problems associated with dealing with large amounts of snow in the city.

The snow farms also save the DPW money by not having to bring in snow melters to combat the piles of snow the storms have left behind. The snow melters, though useful, don't come cheap. The cost runs at $300 per hour, not including fuel.

Prendeville fully understands residents' frustration in having to shovel out the end of their driveways closest to the street more than once because the plows push snow from the street back in front of them. He said the trucks go over streets multiple times during and after storms and there is simply nowhere to put the snow.

Prendeville is also urging residents to clear out catch basins so they'll be able to handle runoff water and avoid flooding when the snow inevitably melts. Shoveling out fire hydrants, too, is important for residents for safety reasons.

Building Inspector Jay Duca hasn't had any reports of commercial or residential roofs collapsing this winter. With the snowstorms in such close proximity, it hasn't had a chance to melt and snow builds up on roofs.

Duca said that anyone with flat roofs with large amounts of snow might want to contact a professional to make the determination whether or not the snow has to be removed. Even in the most rugged winters, Duca said that snow on the roofs of homes is not a big problem.

"For most situations the amount of snow is not problematic," said Duca.

He emphasized the importance of residents to get their sidewalks clean. "It's not only a city ordinance, it's the neighborly thing to do," Duca said. "Everyone should do what they can."

Extreme Weather Means Busy Winter At Father Bill's Place

The extreme weather conditions have made for a busy winter at Father Bill's Shelter so far this winter.

Over the last two weeks, the shelter has been at maximum capacity, and then some, with an average of 130-140 individuals per night. The shelter has 95 beds, but there are mats and blankets when more people seek sanctuary from the frigid weather.

"The weather has been pretty extreme," said director John Yazwinski. "We won't turn anyone away this winter. We're doing our best to keep everyone in all day."

The quarters at the shelter are overflowing, but things have run smoothly thanks to the more than 300 volunteers and the meals that have been donated by the public. Homelessness, Yazwinski said, doesn't discriminate as the range in age of people staying at Father Bill's running between 18 and 80. The 60-and-over numbers have more than doubled since 2001.

There are a handful of Quincy High students spending their nights at the shelter, Yazwinski said. "Some high school kids are trying to study while they're here, trying to get their diplomas," he said.

During a typical year, Father Bill's shelters more than 2,500 individuals. At the shelter, guests can participate in a range of services that work on helping them move from homelessness to a home of their own. The services include health care, adult education, mental health services and substance abuse services.

While in the shelter, families receive housing stabilization services, assistance with child care and housing placement services.

An on-site registered nurse from the Boston Health Care for the Homeless is available at the Quincy shelter. A physician makes weekly visits to both the shelter in Quincy and Brockton. The service is available 40 hours per week.

Point Webster 8th Graders Win Harvard's Program For International Education Award

Harvard's Program for International Education (HPIE) teamed up with Meg-McMillen's 8th grade history classes at Point Webster Middle School to share with students the HPIE global program titled, Legacies of Development: An Examination of the International Economy, Past and Present.

For seven weeks undergraduates from Harvard traveled to Point and discussed with students various components of the international economy including its historical development, natural resources, and the economies of poverty and economic crises.

Students were treated to a full day field trip to Harvard University which included a tour of Harvard Yard and an extremely interactive mock crisis where Point's 8th graders worked with students from Boston to discuss trade policies for their assigned countries. Delegates from each country had to strike deals with other countries to meet their country's needs. Political alliances were formed or strengthened through the trade negotiating process.

The day culminated with lunch and an awards ceremony for students who contributed essays or posters. The submitted work addressed the balancing of a developing country's environmental needs against the "distribution of wealth, interest groups (i.e. religious and political interests), and the economic relationship with other developed and developing nations."

Top prize winners for their essays were Suhail Purker (first place) and Vasil Duka (second), and first place winner for her poster was Ursula Biba.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Oil Burner Fuel Lines

For some time now, oil burner fuel lines have required protection in the event a leak occurs. These lines run from the oil tank to the oil burner. Since I've worked within this office, every time a modification is made to an oil burner or oil tank beyond the yearly maintenance requirements, the fuel line has to be updated and protected to conform with the newer regulations if it hasn't been already.

There are two methods of doing so. One is a sleeve within which the copper fuel line is placed. Should a leak occur, it is more apparent while to some extent confined within the sleeve without seeping into the ground undetected. The other method requires a valve referred to as an OSV. It stands for an oil safety valve, which is designed to shutdown the flow should a leak occur within the line. It is the easier fix between the two while some installers discourage their use.

As of July 1, 2010, the DEP requires protection from one or the other. Instead of having the issue addressed when a change occurs, now you will have to have the issue addressed proactively.

It has to do with a new state initiative that requires homeowners to take steps to prevent costly spills within a home. In the event of a leak, where oil seeps into the basement or floor below, costly cleanups will be prevented when the lines are protected.

Meanwhile, the law includes a provision that insurance companies that presently write homeowner policies within Massachusetts provide coverage for leaks from heating systems that use oil. Most homeowner policies do not currently include such coverage leaving many to pay for costly cleanups out of their own pocket. Although it is mandatory that insurance companies offer this coverage as of July 1, 2010, the insurance is an optional purchase for homeowners.

Both these provisions affect owners of 1 to 4 family residences that are heated with oil. Again, they must already have or install either an oil safety valve or an oil supply line protective sleeve. A licensed oil burner technician must perform the installation of these devices. Technicians are typically employed by companies that deliver home heating oil or are independently self-employed. Either way, they must hold a oil burner technician's certificate issued by the state in order to work on these systems.

You will find more information at http://www.mass.gov/dep/cleanup/laws/hhsl.htm.

The reference is titled: HOMEOWNER OIL HEATING UPGRADE AND INSURANCE LAW. Meanwhile you are welcome to contact The Quincy Fire Department for further information as well.

Thank you.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton WinWater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton WinWater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterRepacement.cfm

Retired Library Director 'Has Been A Great Asset To The City'

Ann McLaughlin Excited For Life's Next Chapter

By JOE REARDON

After 40 years, the time has come for Quincy icon Ann McLaughlin to say goodbye to the halls of the Thomas Crane Library, where at the age of 6 she received her first library card.

And as much as she'll miss her colleagues and the friends she has made in four decades at Thomas Crane, the beloved library director is excited for what lays ahead. Friday marked her final day of work at the library.

"It's like that moment in high school when you graduate and think, 'I can do anything I want,'" said McLaughlin at a small gathering last week to celebrate her retirement. "I almost never sit down for a minute. I always feel like there are things I should be doing. I have to learn to relax a little. I want to be able to sit down and read a few chapters of a book, know things can wait until tomorrow for me to do."

Cataloguing Supervisor Claudia Shutter has worked alongside McLaughlin for 35 years and wishes her good friend nothing but happiness in the years ahead. "I'm grateful for the years we had with her," Shutter said. "Now it's time for her to have new experiences. She was a wonderful mentor, a great friend and a wonderful director. She always gave us a chance to grow."

McLaughlin treasures the friendships she has cultivated over the years. "It's going to be hard," she said. "I'm going to miss all these people. I grew up with them. It's like moving away to school."

McLaughlin has no shortage of activities on her to-do list. She recently took up quilting and has grown to enjoy it immensely. She wants to continue traveling to the country's state parks and eventually visit all of them.

Walter Sproul, a friend of McLaughlin's since 1983, believes McLaughlin put her own mark on the library. "She's been a great asset to the city. She's done a tremendous job here. This is the centerpiece of the city. Everyone loves the library."

McLaughlin began her illustrious career when she took a job as the library assistant at the North Quincy branch upon graduating from Simmons College with a masters degree in library science. Shortly thereafter, McLaughlin transferred to the Adams Shore branch and worked as a reference librarian. In 1983, McLaughlin was promoted to assistant director under Warren Watson. She's spent the last 17 years as the library director.

Other towns realized McLaughlin's talents as library director, but she never budged, not even when she was offered the job at Falmouth Public Library, the town where she currently lives.

"I didn't leave when I had opportunities to leave," she said. "I wanted to stay her."

Leaving Thomas Crane was never on McLaughlin's radar.

"It's a building you'd want to come in and explore," she said. "I never wanted to work anywhere but a public library. And it would be hard to work in some ordinary building after working in this beautiful, historical building.

"It's part of the fabric of the city and means a lot to the people. People in the city have a strong need to protect, care for and preserve this building," she added.

Former State Treasuer And Gubernatorial Candidate Eyes Opportunity In Finance Or Investment

Cahill's Next Job In Private Sector, Not Politics

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Tim Cahill, the former state treasurer and gubernatorial candidate, says his next occupation will be in the private sector, not the political arena.

Cahill, who vacated the treasurer's seat he won in 2002 and was re-elected in 2006 before waging an unsuccessful independent bid for governor last year, said he'd like to work in finance or investment, perhaps at a bank. His last day as treasurer was Jan. 19.

"Nothing has been finalized yet. I'm talking to people in the investment world such as banking or finance. I waited until I was done as treasurer before I pursued anything because we do business with a lot of (financial) institutions in the state.

"Hopefully, I'll have something by the end of the first quarter – February or March."

Cahill, in a recent wide-ranging one-hour interview, addressed last fall's governor's race, the Scott Brown election and his own political future. He also reflected on two of his proudest accomplishments during his eight years as state treasurer: structuring the School Building Authority program and navigating through the financial meltdown of 2008.

Job-wise, Cahill said he hopes his next opportunity is here in Massachusetts. But he's prepared to move out of state if that knock is somewhere else.

"I'd like to stay here but if the right opportunity comes up, I'll go where the opportunity is. It's not likely . . . I think there are plenty of good opportunities here in Massachusetts."

But it won't be at the State House.

"I'm not looking for anything that has to do with Beacon Hill," the 52-year-old says. "It's good for me to be out. That's why I ran for governor because I knew if it didn't work out, I would be out. And now I want to try something different and succeed with something else."

He doesn't rule out going back into business for himself. But the former owner of Handshakes Café in Quincy Center said it wouldn't be in the food or retail industries.

"I'd go back into business only if it were with a financial company and there was an opportunity for a start-up business – but not retail, not restaurant.

"I spent the last 14 years (eight as state treasurer and six as Norfolk County treasurer) overseeing investments, dealing with debt and cash and finance issues. I would like to take that experience and knowledge and build on it and provide a service to a company in the private sector," Cahill says.

Politically, he has not closed the door on a future run for office. If he campaigned again, Cahill says he'd vie for a seat in Congress or the U.S. Senate.

"I'd like to do something else and when it comes to finance and investments, really all of the activities are in Washington, D.C. The federal government, even though they've sold the stock and have gotten out of the direct partnerships with the big banks and the finance companies they're still involved, they're still writing rules and regulations and those have impact.

"What goes on in Washington, D.C. is important to my next career and it's a place I haven't gone. If I was to go back I would look at something, maybe six or eight years down the road – maybe something in D.C."

"At this point in my career, I don't look at going back to a state run. If I were to run for office again, it would be for a Washington, D.C. seat. But I'm not planning on doing that and I have no intention of doing that in the near future or the far future."

For now, he's adamant about keeping politics on the "back burner."

"I want to contribute to the private sector."

Cahill said his exposure to the 2008 world financial crisis and how Washington handled it left a lasting impression.

"When the financial world was melting down all eyes were on Washington, D.C. They did some good things and they did some bad things and they're still kind of working out what the outcome was but that's where the focus of the entire world was. It was an exciting time for us (at the state treasury.)

"We were focused on Washington because we were looking for some solutions because the banks weren't lending money. The state needed to borrow money. We couldn't get access to the capital markets so it was exciting. Knowing some of the people there (in Washington) and if I feel I could contribute especially with the background that I have now then I'd look at it."

Financially, Cahill says he's concerned about the country's direction.

"All the things that brought down individuals and Main Street which is too much debt and taking on mortgages you couldn't afford and just living beyond your means is taking place in Washington, D.C. I don't know if they've figured it out yet. You just can't keep borrowing money and not worrying about paying it back. One thing I learned as treasurer – both in the county and at the state level – is whatever you borrow, you've got to pay back. Bankruptcy is not an option in government.

"Living beyond your means is what government has been doing since the mid-1990s and it can't continue if we are to stay competitive (globally).

"Those are the things that I hope to be able to be able to contribute to. I would love to be able to do that in the private sector working for a private company because of my experience in Massachusetts."

Cahill said Massachusetts has been managed much better than some other states.

"Overall, we weren't falling apart. Our credit rating continued to be a high rating. We didn't fall into traps that some other states did in part because of the way we ran the treasury. Our unemployment rate was lower. It's not a bad example to use in other states – like California and New Jersey.

"We have challenges but our pension fund is much stronger than others. Our employees here in Massachusetts contribute a pretty high amount – it's not like a freebie, and people think it's a freebie – but you have to bring it down into a range that we can afford going forward. But it's not broken like it is in other states. It's not dysfunctional."

Cahill characterized state finances as "relatively responsible" during his tenure as treasurer.

"In the eight years that I was there under two governors – we've been relatively responsible. Mitt Romney's philosophy was not to raise taxes but he raised fees and he kept spending under control. This governor (Deval Patrick) spent more when times were good and his philosophy was 'we'll raise taxes to meet that spending.' Neither side got it perfectly right but it was responsible.

"It may not have been politically popular and I wasn't a proponent of it – I was more of a proponent of let's spend less – but at the end of the day, at least it was a plan. In some states like California, New Jersey, Illinois and New York, they couldn't figure it out."

"If you're going to spend more, you have to figure out how to pay for it."

Cahill said the school building authority is a solid example of running a tight financial ship.

"That's how we fixed the school problem. We figured out a way to pay for it; we didn't stop building schools and local communities stepped up overwhelmingly to pay for their share. We had Prop 2 ½ overrides all over the state of Massachusetts from 2008 on in the worst recession and it wasn't because local residents wanted to raise their own taxes, but they knew they had a good deal. The state was responsibly stepping up for its share, the costs were under control and it made sense on the local level. Investing in schools always makes sense if the price is right.

"It was amazing to me that local communities – and we weren't putting pressure on them, we weren't trying to leverage it and we weren't saying 'you have to do this,' – we just said 'this is our share, this is what we think will work for your school. If you want it, put it on your ballot and vote for it.' We're not talking 51 to 49 votes, we talking 85 to 15 – huge majorities of people.

"It proved to me that if you have a plan – again we used for our share tax revenue, we weren't saying we're going to borrow the money into the future and not figure out a way to pay for it later – and I think those kind of solutions make sense. I learned this in Quincy: if you show people what the program is, be straight with them and tell them this is how we're going to pay for it, they'll be fine. You make a cost-benefit analysis. I don't like it when taxes go up but if my street is being plowed, the city's safe, there's a good education system, then I'll pay a reasonable cost. Our job in government was to prove that point. This is how we're going to do it."

Cahill said he thinks the state should follow the same method with repairing and building new bridges.

"I think people understand that you just can't let these bridges fall apart. You can't wait until they fall apart. We helped supply tax revenue for it, we helped put the financing plan together. It's ambitious but it makes up for 20 years of no investment so it's got to be done and it's being done. If there's the right oversight and we don't have another "Big Dig" . . . and the governor's office oversees it properly it will be another feather in the cap of Massachusetts because it's important.

"You have to have a decent infrastructure. The days of the Taj Mahal or the Golden Gate Bridge and those kind of public works projects . . . those days are gone but it doesn't mean you can't build a Zakim Bridge which works and looks

During Monday's meeting, most ward councillors targeted zoning problems in their areas with questions ranging from the number of boats that can be parked at a residence to signage, home businesses and whether clothes like BVD's and Victoria's Secrets can be strewn across hedges.

On a more serious note, Councillors Joseph Finn and Margaret Laforest, Ward 1, discussed the issue of small wind turbines in residential areas.

Finn noted the issue was raised when councillors voted regulations on large wind turbines, but they did not address the issue of residential wind turbines.

"That technology is growing," said Finn who believes residential turbines should have been included as an accessory use. "Now's the time to correct it."

Laforest noted there is already one application for a residential turbine in her ward and she plans a neighborhood meeting on the issue.

While reviewing home business, one councillor suggested the city might increase tax revenues by taxing those sections of residences at the higher commercial rate.

Councillors also considered the zoning proposal's limit of one recreational vehicle per residence.

That won't fly at least in her ward, according to Laforest who said that would mean her constituents could only have one boat per house.

"I have five," said Laforest who also said that the zoning proposal would prohibit a resident from parking two kayaks in his or her yard.

During the review, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi questioned issues on parking, suggesting that the number of required parking spaces for buildings be determined, not by the number of units, but by the number of bedrooms.

"Density is a problem. On-street parking is a problem," said Raymondi.

On hand for to lead the review were Mark Bobrowski of Blatman, Bobrowski & Mead, LLC and Quincy's former City Planning Director Richard Meade. Bobrowski specializes in Land Use Law, Real Property and Administrative Law.

Both Raymondi and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin questioned Bobrowski regarding signage issues. Raymondi cited the city's problem with a billboard on Willard Street while Coughlin noted that his constituents were unhappy with a neon sign installed for a liquor store on Adams Street.

Coughlin worried about the city's "sign blight."

"The billboard is one of the most offensive things that's occurred," said Raymondi who asked how the billboard could be erected in violation of the city's existing zoning.

Bobrowski noted that councillors can curtail the actions of a Zoning Board of Appeals through the proper zoning language.

Gutro said the issue of signs was significant enough to warrant a special meeting on Feb. 9.

Finn urged fellow councillors to make direct changes in the document, noting that the council is the final arbiter on zoning.

Finn and Coughlin cited a section on home businesses for childcare and adult care and suggested changes that might ease the financial burden on a small operation.

Originally, home business were limited to lawyers and doctors, said Bobrowski who noted that "65% of Americans now work at home."

Gutro scheduled several future meetings for councillors to revisit the 121-page zoning proposals prepared by the Zoning Task Force and reviewed by the Planning Board. He, also, noted that councillors originally began reviewing zoning proposals in October, 2009.

Since that time, the zoning proposal has been revised 12 times and grown from 100 pages to 121 pages (including definitions).

Community Meeting Feb. 10 On Proposed West Quincy Residential Project

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting to discuss a developer's proposal to build 21 residential units in the Dunns Hill Road/Filbert Street area, behind the Elks Lodge.

The proponents of the project are seeking neighborhood input into the project before finalizing their plans for the site. The developer will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

Palmucci has scheduled a neighborhood meeting regarding this proposal Thursday, Feb. 10 at 6:30 p.m. in the former members lounge, downstairs at the Quincy Elks Lodge at 254 Quarry St.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

Residents with questions about this or any other matter can contact Palmucci on his cell phone, (617) 834-3945 or by email at bpalmucci@quincyma.gov.

Chan Appointed To Key Legislative Committees

State Rep. Tackey Chan announces he has been appointed to three key committees valuable to Quincy.

Chan has been appointed to the Joint Committee on Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy, Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure and the Joint Committee on Global Warming and Climate Change.

"I am very proud to represent my district on these important committees," Chan said.

TACKEY CHAN

The Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy Committee has oversight over the electric, gas and telephone industries. The Global Warming and Climate Change Committee review policies and initiatives on the state and national levels relative to energy efficiency, renewable energy and ways to reduce energy bills and our reliance on fossil fuels.

"Affordable energy distribution and generation are important to job creation and keeping the economy moving in a positive direction," Chan said. "These committees look at reducing our need on foreign oil, exploring innovative ways to expand renewable energy generation and efforts to lower energy bills for residents and businesses in Massachusetts."

Chan is a former assistant attorney general who was charged with representing customer interests against utility companies. He has an extensive background on energy policy.

The Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure Committee addresses a wide range of consumer issues ranging from alcohol licensing, licensing of various professions; such as plumbers, electricians and hair stylists. It also examines ways to protect the public from unfair business practices.

"This is an exciting committee that will work to encourage good business practices while protecting consumers." said Chan.

"I look forward to working with my fellow committee members on important policy matters that affect us all."

Keenan Chairman Of Committee On Mental Health And Substance Abuse

State Sen. John F. Keenan has been named Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse.

"I appreciate the faith Senate President Therese Murray has shown in naming me chairman of this incredibly important committee," Keenan said. "Mental illness and substance abuse does not discriminate based on race, gender, income, education or status. It is so pervasive that few families in my district and across Massachusetts have not been directly affected by mental illness and substance abuse."

JOHN KEENAN

Mental health and substance abuse intersect with many of the state's most important issues, Keenan said. An estimated 80% of inmates have mental health concerns or are addicted to drugs or alcohol; veterans have an elevated risk of suicide due to the lingering effects of PTSD and other combat-related ailments; and police point to the growing opiate addiction as a leading cause behind recent spike in home break-ins and armed robberies across the state.

"We cannot address homelessness, crime, poverty, violence and suicide without also having to confront mental health and substance abuse," Keenan said. "While I can't promise we'll find solutions to these problems, any little bit of progress we can make will have tremendous long-term implications."

Keenan was also named Vice-Chairman of the Senate Committee on Bonding, Capital Expenditures and Long-Term Debt, and will also sit on the Joint Committees on Financial Services, Revenue, Judiciary, Veterans and Federal Affairs, and State Administration & Regulatory Oversight.

"I'm going to have the opportunity to have a say on some very important bills, and I'm looking forward to representing the residents of the Norfolk and Plymouth District," he said.

Ward 6 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 12

Registered Democrats will hold a Ward 6 Democratic Caucus Saturday, Feb. 12 at 10 a.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

Delegates and alternates will be elected to attend the Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

This year's Action Agenda Convention will be held Saturday, June 4 at the Tsongas Arena in Lowell. All Massachusetts Democrats chosen at their caucus will gather to adopt a new Action Agenda outlining grassroots and party building initiatives in preparation of the 2012 elections.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Quincy. All ballots will be written and secret. Those not elected as delegate and/or alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority, and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, disability, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129, no later than 10 days after the caucus daate.

For more information, contact Chairman Paul K. Kennedy, Sr. at 617-328-1059.

Cahill's Next Job In Private Sector, Not Politics

good. Hopefully they'll be able to resolve this Fore River Bridge project. I'm hopeful the community can get a good-looking bridge that doesn't cost $400 million.

"In city government I learned if you're going to spend the money, spend it right. Build something that looks good and works. Because there's nothing more that people hate than spending money and in the end it looks like you Mickey-Moused it."

Cahill says it usually makes better fiscal sense to build new than to renovate when it comes to schools, including Quincy High School.

"Ultimately the best decision was to build a new Quincy High School rather than to try to renovate the old one and 'Mickey Mouse' it," Cahill said. "We ended up going with new schools 70 percent of the time because renovations didn't make sense. Some of these schools were built in the 1950s and 1960s and 1970s. You look at these schools and they were a hodgepodge. It wasn't just one building that you could renovate. You had to look at it differently.

"We accomplished a great deal with the school building authority and that's something that can be replicated. We didn't raise taxes to get our state share, we took a share off of the state sales tax. That's one of the reasons I supported not taking the sales tax down to three percent. It would have had an impact on our schools, on the MBTA, and everything else."

How much money has been pumped into school building projects statewide?

"Between the money we outlayed for schools and the amount of money we paid debt on buildings that were built and we inherited was about 7 billion dollars," Cahill said. "Some of that was for schools. I think we ended up building over 500 schools. We inherited 400 on the wait list, some of them were built. Some of them weren't and others are in the stages of being built. It might be 600. We did over 100 in 2007. We made a tremendous amount of progress.

"Now were into a big repair program because it makes sense. You get ahead of it. We're caught up and now we're looking at repairing roofs, and boilers and windows so you can maintain a good school as opposed to waiting for it to fall apart.

"Everyone at the local level kind of bought into the program but it took a long time. At first they saw us as the enemy. They saw us as a state agency coming in to tell them what to do. They said, 'this is a local community and we know best and we're going to do our own thing.' And we said 'that's fine but you'll have to pay for it though. If you want us to share the cost, then let's collaborate. That's how we got the model school program."

Cahill also said he's proud of the fact that the program was started from "scratch."

"I hired the first employee – (director) Katherine Craven. It taught me that writing legislation (to enact the school building authority) and getting it passed as difficult as it is it's only 10 percent of the solution. The other 90 percent is actually getting the legislation to work. Just because it looks right on paper, it doesn't mean it will work right . . . There's always the law of unintended consequences."

The School Building Authority and Model School Program was intended to limit the total costs of school projects by capping the state's share dollar-wise, not percentage-wise.

QUINCY'S TIM CAHILL is sworn in as state treasurer at the State House by then Gov. Mitt Romney in January, 2003 after Cahill's win for his first four-year term in November, 2002. Cahill was re-elected to a second term in 2006. He ran unsuccessfully for governor as an independent candidate last November. Quincy Sun Photo/Trish Bossart

"We just can't let these communities build anything they want. Even if our costs are limited, it could still blow up. If we're paying 40 percent of a $200 million high school, we're spending more money than we would be if we're paying 60 percent of a $60 million school. Even when we had the money and tax revenue was flying in, we knew there was far too many demands and we had to draw the line."

The scenario was true for the new Quincy High School project. Politically, Cahill said he took some heat because he didn't simply open the state's checkbook for his alma mater.

"I had to draw the line in Quincy," Cahill says. "It also sent a message to every other community in the state. If he doesn't hold the line in his own community, what makes you think he's not going to tell us to do the same thing? I think that was important.

"I wasn't trying to punish anyone, I believed in it. I was getting a lot of advice from people – don't kill your base (of Quincy voters) – but I felt pretty confident having represented Quincy for so long that I knew the taxpayers wouldn't want to spend $200 million on a new high school either, especially when you have two high schools (in the city). Then you have a fairness issue. I knew that. Half of the city said, "what the hell are you doing?"

Cahill cut his political teeth as a city councillor at-

Sterling School's George DePaulo Drive To Benefit Troops

Items, Cash Donations Being Collected

By JOE REARDON

It's tough to figure out who gets the most out of the Sterling Middle School's George DePaulo U.S. Troop Drive.

There are the military soldiers, of course, who are fighting militant Islamists and al-Qaeda in the war on terror, half a world away in places like the Arma Mountains, Tora Bora and the Shahi-Kot Valley. Through the drive, they receive care packages loaded with essential items including snacks, food, deodorant, sunglasses and books. There are also letters written by the students.

And during the school year, it's always a thrill for the students when they receive thank you letters from the soldiers, who talk of their daily life in the mid-East and what they are trying to accomplish, all in the name of defending the United States from terrorism.

"The kids are always amazed that the troops are so appreciative," said Sterling Principal Christine Barrett. "We get about a dozen letters every year. It's an awesome experience and the kids love it."

Now in its sixth year, school's students are currently gathering items to send to troops through carepacks.org. The drive is named after DePaulo, who retired from the Quincy Public Schools and Sterling Middle School after 60 years of service.

Sadly, DePaulo recently passed away and Sterling is looking to make this year's drive the most successful yet. DePaulo was a decorated Word War II United States Army Veteran who never forgot the values the Army instilled in him. The values, loyalty, duty, respect, service, honor, integrity and personal courage are all emphasized to the students at the Sterling.

Items and cash donations can be dropped off at the Sterling Middle School, 444 Granite St., before Feb. 11. Five Reasons To Re-Key Your Locks (NAPSA)-Is your home security at risk? According to FBI statistics, 8,600 break-ins occur in the U.S. every day (that's one every 10 seconds!), and more than half the time, they're happening during broad daylight, entering right through the doorway. But most break-ins are a crime of opportunity, so you have the power to take back control.

According to the Kwikset American Security Study, nearly one-third of homeowners have lived in their current residence for five years or less. And while moving into a new home can be very exciting, it's also a vulnerable time for home security because there's no telling how many people have copies of your house key. That is, unless you've physically changed or re-keyed the locks yourself...which is an affordable, smart and simple way to up your odds of foiling a break-in before it even occurs.

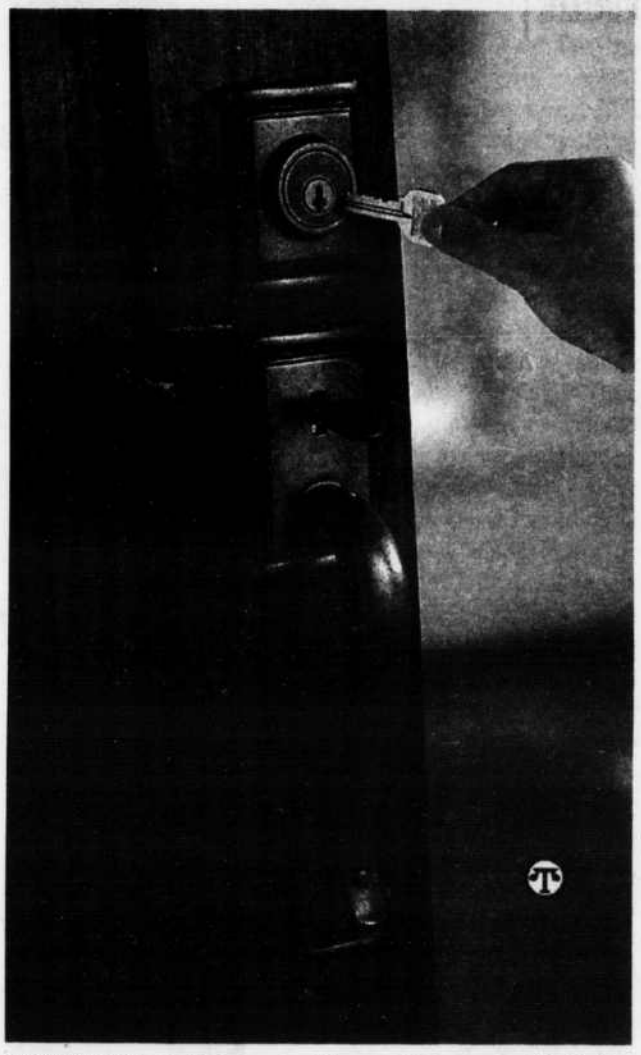
Following are five more important reasons to re-key or change the locks to your home:

1. You have lost, stolen or unreturned keys: More than half of homeowners routinely loan out house keys to people who don't live there; e.g., housekeepers, gardeners, babysitters, neighbors and so on.

2. You've recently moved: A shocking 47 percent of U.S. homeowners did not re-key their locks upon moving into their home, with about a third having never re-keyed or changed their locks at any point since living there.

3. You have tenants: When tenants move out, they give the key back. But there's no way to know if they're holding on to a copy. Ensure the security of your rental unit by re-keying the lock immediately upon tenant departure. Not only will this ensure no unwanted "houseguests" are staying on the premises while vacant, but it's also important for the safety of your new tenants.

4. You're remodeling, up-grading or updating: Even when working with the most reputable contractors, the minute you give them a house key you're relinquishing control over your home security. There's no telling how many copies they could potentially make, and there's no guarantee of the integrity of their subcontractors.



5. You'd prefer one-key convenience: Imagine how much easier it would be if one key unlocked all the points of entry to your home. No more fumbling through key rings trying to decipher which key unlocks what.

While it may sound like a daunting project, re-keying your locks can be as easy as 1-2-3. Kwikset(r), a leader in residential door hardware, developed a groundbreaking lock technology called SmartKey(r), which allows homeowners to quickly and easily re-key their own locks in a matter of seconds without having to remove the lock from the door.

Providing superior security, SmartKey deadbolts are made with high-quality stainless steel internal parts to ensure smooth operation, increased strength and exceptional durability. These deadbolts are designed to withstand picking, and include the security of BumpGuard(tm) to protect against lock-bumping attacks. They've even proven their superiority at a recent professional lock-picking competition. Only one of 56 Kwikset SmartKey deadbolts was able to be picked by a professional locksmith in under 10 minutes, compared to 44 out of 56 deadbolts that were successfully picked for the competition.

A KEY PART of staying safe at home is having quality locks-and knowing who has the keys.

Creating Workspace in a Tiny Garage

Q: I don't have a lot of workspace, but I want to have a good variety of tools for any repair job and want to make sure they're stored properly. Can I have a decent workspace in a tiny garage that has to be shared with my car? – Karl in Philadelphia

A: It's very possible to build an adequate workspace in a small area and have room for storage besides. First, evaluate how much space you can create during a repair job. Can your car be moved onto the driveway or parked on the curb for a few hours while you work? This would temporarily open up more space.

For storage, since you're starved for floor space, think up. A pegboard installed on a wall is ideal for hanging up hand tools and gardening equipment. Folding workbenches and tables can free up space as well, and it's even possible to install a worktable that hinges to the wall, flips down for use, and then can be folded flat to the wall at the end of the day. Tool sets, like wrenches and drill bits, can be purchased in long, flat boxes that can then be tucked away into storage niches or inside a rolling tool chest.

If most of your money is going into tools at this point, take a look at construction sites and note how work areas are improvised on site. For example, a piece of plywood set atop two sawhorses allows painters to place their paint and brushes within reach but can be quickly broken down and stored in their truck.

The important thing with creating a workspace in a limited area is simplicity. You need to be able to set up and break down quickly, just as the pros do. Stick to just one repair or home-improvement project at a time. If the project is going to take more than a day, plan it in stages so that at the end of each workday, when it's time to put the car back in, you have a good stopping point and can put away all the project materials and clean up without too much effort.

Stay disciplined about cleaning up and storing everything away. It's easy to put it off, and then suddenly it's two weeks later and your spouse is asking when she's going to get the garage back ... and oh, by the way, since it's your fault, you get to clean all the snow off the car since it was stuck outside during the snowstorm. (Not that that's ever happened to me.)

HOME TIP: Save a little sawdust during woodworking projects: if you're using wood glue to fill a spot, mix a bit of fine sawdust or sanding dust into the glue before applying so the glue takes on the same hue as the wood.

Conway Quincy Officer Manager Helen Shiner Inducted Into Gold Club

A snow-swept golf course surrounded the glass-walled ballroom of the Spring Hill Country Club in Sharon last week as more than 50 Jack Conway Realtors were honored for top performance. These agents and managers were inducted into the company's Gold and Platinum clubs for superior sales production during 2010. They were treated to a cocktail reception and lobster and steak dinners while Conway officials, including Chairman Jack Conway and CEO Carol Bulman, thanked them for exceeding their goals during last year's challenging real estate market.

Inducted into the Conway Gold Club was Helen Shiner of Quincy.

Conway CEO Carol Bulman urged her company's top producers to continue to serve as role models for their teammates during 2011. "You are the leaders, the mentors, if you're feeling good about our business, they will too," said Bulman. "You set the pace, and everyone else will follow."

Bulman's father, Chairman Jack Conway also alluded to the "race" analogy in his opening remarks at the luncheon.

"You are the thoroughbreds of this company," said the 54-year-old firm's founder. "You lead the way in sales and listings, in spirit and cooperation. We are working toward a finish line in 2011 of 25% ahead of 2010 and I know we can make it. When jockeys lose a race, they tip their hats to the winner and come back to run another day. But they always return to the track with the intention of winning. If you don't come to win, you may as well stay home."

The Conway Champions luncheon concluded with remarks from Company Counsel Jay Chaisson predicting a promising spring market with less unemployment, a rebounding stock market, and increased home sales. "A lot of the excesses in the housing market have been squeezed out," said Chaisson.

"Homes are more affordable than ever, and people are beginning to realize now is the time to buy."

Register Of Deeds William P. O'Donnell To Address Ward 4 Senior Group Feb. 9

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell will be the guest speaker at the Ward 4 Senior Group meeting Wednedsday, Feb. 9 at 2 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., West Quincy.

The short speaking program will touch on the historical nature of the Registry and the Register's efforts to modernize and computerize the vast number of Norfolk County real estate records.

Following O'Donnell's remarks, the Register will be available to answer individual questions.

Members of the Register's staff will assist in providing information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act and have an internet computer and printer that can be used to demonstrate the Registry's internet website, confirm the status of a mortgage discharge, or print out a copy of a deed.

No appointment is necessary.

This program is a community outreach program sponsored by Register O'Donnell to help inform senior citizens of the services the Registry offers and to make it convenient for those who may have difficulty traveling to the Registry building in Dedham.

WILLIAM O'DONNELL

Although the Register and members of his staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions, give general information, provide Homestead Declaration forms, and assist in showing residents how the free public access computers work.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. To contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department call 781-461-6101.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Jan. 25, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Officer Michael Powers was on patrol, traveling on Pleasant Street toward Fort Square.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the Officer headed toward Quarry Street, he queried the registration of a Ford Explorer ahead of him on his cruiser's mobile data terminal (MDT). The data showed that the vehicle was registered 07/29/2010, but was not inspected. The query also revealed that the vehicle was registered to a Quincy female, but the driver was a male.

The officer put his blue lights on and stopped the vehicle on Quarry Street for the inspection sticker violation. Officer Powers asked the operator for his license and registration. He provided the registration for the vehicle, however he stated he did not have his license in possession.

The operator gave the name of "Thomas Henderson", along with a date of birth and a Social Security number. The operator said that he has a license but did not have it with him, so Officer Powers returned to his cruiser's MDT and pulled up information on "Thomas Henderson." This provided the officer with the operator's license status, license photo and criminal record.

Although the license was active and the Social Security number correct, the photo did not resemble the operator, who was much thinner. At this time, Officer Mike Brandolini arrived on scene to assist and concurred that the operator did not look like the photo of the driver's license.

Officer Powers asked "Thomas" why he didn't look like his license photo and he said that it was a long time ago and since then, he lost weight. "Thomas" then asked if he could have a friend come down and vouch for him. Officer Powers rejected that request and then questioned the operator about the last time he was arrested and he said it was ten years ago in East Boston for Class A drug. The last time the real Thomas Henderson was arrested was 1998 in East Boston, however it was not for class A, nor was there a Class A drug violation on his record.

Officer Powers asked the operator about his arrest for robbery and he stated, "Yeah, but that was a real long time ago."

Officer Powers knew he had the suspect in lies. The real "Thomas Henderson" was never arrested for robbery.

When asked his mother and father's name, he was able to get the fathers name correct but made two incorrect attempts at the mother's name. At this point, Officer Powers informed "Thomas" that he was lying, removed him from the vehicle and told him that he was under arrest for refusing to identify himself while operating a motor vehicle.

"Thomas" then grunted, "@#$%, you got me." "Thomas" then provided his real name, which was confirmed by a Massachusetts ID in his left hand pocket, along with his prescription bottle half full of Suboxone. A new criminal record check showed that the operator's license was suspended/revoked.

As is customary, an inventory search of the vehicle was conducted by Officer Brandolini. In the back seat directly behind the driver's seat was a McDonald's bag rolled partially into a ball with a needle sticking out of it. Upon further inspection of the McDonald's bag, after removing the needle, there was a metal spoon with Heroin residue. The needle was confiscated and disposed of at the station, while the spoon was confiscated as drug evidence.

En route to the station, the operator/suspect stated that he grew up with a Thomas Henderson in East Boston and that is how he knew some of the background questions asked of him. The suspect, a 38 year-old Milton resident, has an extensive criminal record, with 102 adult court appearances and 14 juvenile appearances. He is charged with "Operating a MV on a Suspended License Subsequent Offense, No Inspection Sticker, Refusing to Identify Self While Operating a MV, Misleading a Police Officer and Possession Class A Subsequent Offense, Heroin."

The real Thomas Henderson may have a growing motor vehicle and criminal record - without his knowledge, thanks to a childhood friend stealing his personal information and his identity. Due to the Officer's diligence, the suspect was caught!

Nice Work!

Cahill's Next Job In Private Sector, Not Politics

large. He lost his first bid for a council seat in 1983 but won in 1987. He served on the council until he was sworn in as state treasurer in January, 2003.

"The 15 years I spent on the city council really prepared me for many of the things I dealt with going forward," he says. "Working with (former auditor) Bob Foy, serving under (former mayors) Frank McCauley and Jim Sheets, dealing with (former council colleagues) Mike Cheney and Paul Harold and Dan Raymondi and Larry Chretien and (others) and all the different people that I came in contact with. I learned a lot and played an important role. That allowed me to really understand what a city council does.

"I was never a school committee person but I worked with enough school committee people to understand that and that really helped with the school stuff. That's why I got involved with it – I felt it was important. In the end, we got to share in the good news of building schools and solving problems."

He said he wants to take that school building experience "to other states helping them solve their problems from a private sector perspective. I'd love to be able to do that."

Then, he adds, "I know it sounds like a cliche but there's plenty of ways to make a difference. I never believed that government is the only way. That's why I didn't always fit in the Democratic party because I believe in government but I don't think it's the solution to all our problems. There has to be balance.

"Treasury was a good place for me because it's less partisan, less political office by nature because you're dealing with finances," Cahill continues. "Your record is your numbers – good or bad. I have no regrets. I loved running the lottery – not always – but it was interesting and different and it was a business."

Cahill also said he enjoyed overseeing the state retirement board. "We made some really tough calls. We don't get credit for the pension reform that is going on now but I think we led on it. We were drawing a line in the sand before pension reform became a popular and important issue.

"Pension liability is important and people expected us to hold the line on disabilities, people who are trying to gain on the system. We weren't always successful but we took on some big heavy-duty players on Beacon Hill, some institutions. I think we dealt with it fairly.

"We tried to solve the problem that was out in front of us."

He's also proud of how the treasurer navigated through the financial meltdown of 2008 .

"From the spring of 2008 to the fall of 2008, it was scary. Things happened that I'd never thought I'd see in my lifetime," Cahill explains. "Banks went under, systems dissolved that we assumed were solid. Money market funds went haywire."

For instance, Cahill noted "the run" on a money market fund in Florida and how a similar situation would have strapped the state's ability to pay local aid to cities and towns.

"We managed the money for cities and towns, about 8 billion dollars (worth) and when the state of Florida's (money market) went people started losing confidence and kept pulling money out and there was a run on the bank there. We were concerned is that going happen here. We got some calls from a few cities and towns, we checked all our assets to make sure they were real investments, that they weren't sub prime and they weren't off the wall. They were stabilized.

"Nobody was looking to pull their money out, there was no loss in investment return. That was in July or August of 2008 and from that point on Lehman Brothers went out of business over a weekend. We were able to exit Lehman Brothers before they went bankrupt because we got ahead of it. We got our exposure under control and move from one bank to another bank; fortunately the other banks held up. It was a good move.

"We really started to look at everything in the worst case scenario. At that time it looked like each week a bank was going under. We lost access to the market but because we had borrowed enough money earlier in the month – we started in August and we needed it in October – we were able to make local aid (payments). If we had waited until when we usually do – a few weeks before or the last week of September – we wouldn't have made that local aid payment because we wouldn't have had the money. At one point, we thought our major institutional bank was going to go out. One day we just decided to move a half million dollars to another bank.

"But the crisis passed," Cahill said, adding the state was a stronger position because it had weathered that financial storm.

"Dealing with that and coming out the other side stronger, or all the little things we spent doing over the six years making sure we borrowed money properly and we had real assets backing them up, I think proved itself in 2008," Cahill said. "It was a hairy time. You go in and you're not sure. For me as treasurer I knew my career was over if there was a blow-up. If there was a run on a money market people would have asked me why were you invested in sub prime? What would be my answer?"

Cahill also commented on Scott Brown's upset win the special election to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. Ted Kennedy last January, and it's impact on last November's gubernatorial election. In short, Cahill said he thinks electing a Republican to one of the Bay State's U.S. Senate seats restored a balance of power.

"I think people felt we put some balance back, we put Scott Brown in. He's a senator, one of the most important people in the state. But we don't want to go too far that way. The Republican message didn't resonate. People we're afraid that we had eight percent unemployment and we're going to cut even government jobs. I think the governor's message resonated.

"I also think people weren't thrilled with any of us. I heard that a lot. But that's politics. Nobody loves you, especially in campaigns because all they're hearing most of the time is that they're watching TV and seeing all the bad stuff, there's very little good stuff out there. So it doesn't matter. People think we're all bums.

"What that does is allow the parties to have more say because the parties get their bases out and again the base of the party for the Democrats went out in November, it didn't go out (last) January for Martha Coakley. The opposite happened for the Republicans and their base. And bases are important.

"Not being a part of it and I never was and I never will be part of either base but that's where the difference is often made in elections. Who comes out to vote – does the base (come out and vote)? It doesn't mean they're excited about him in any great way – (Patrick) got 49 percent of the vote. But he won because he convinced more people that he was safer choice and a better choice than either of us.

"I didn't succeed in giving people that sense . . . Let's face it: change is hard. And maybe what I was proposing was a little radical because it's never happened before in Massachusetts. It will be interesting to see how (Independent Governor and former Republican Senator) Lincoln Chaffee does in Rhode Island."

Cahill, who collected eight percent of the vote in the governor's race, said he needed 36 or 37 percent in order to win.

"That's what Chaffee got – 36 percent of the vote. That means 64 percent of the people weren't with you. That's hard to govern with that. I faced two very tough parties with candidates and I got squeezed out. I wish I had done better but I realize why I didn't. I don't regret it. I don't look back and say I should have done it somewhat differently because I learned so much from it. And people had a choice and that was my goal: to give people a choice."

He did not, he emphasize, ever want to play the role of a spoiler in a three-way race.

"If I were at five or six percent (in the polls) over the summer or the spring of 2010, I would have had to look at (staying in the race) strong. I wasn't looking to be the spoiler."

The defection of his running mate a few weeks before the final election was a setback his campaign couldn't overcome.

"Had I been at the five or six percent if things had 'blown up' back then, would I have kept going? I would have had to really think about it. The last month (of the campaign) was pure torture. Just getting up every morning and putting on a brave face and I never gave up by I knew the closer we got to the election, I knew how high the climb was and how virtually impossible that climb was going to be.

"People started to go one way or the other. . . Up until mid-September I thought we were still in the race. And I have to believe that's a big reason why the Republicans went after me because they thought I was still in the race. My poll numbers were reasonable."

Cahill also acknowledged there was some "movement" about a possible Charlie Baker-Tim Cahill Republican gubernatorial ticket

"There was some movement behind the scenes. How real it was I don't know. And I didn't have any intention of running for lieutenant governor," Cahill says. "It's not something I was interested in."

Cupid Splash At Wollaston Beach Feb. 12

The Friends of Wollaston Beach and Save The Harbor/save the Bay will host the first annual Cupid Splash Saturday, Feb. 12 at Wollaston Beach.

Registration begins at 11:30 with the splash at noon across from the DCR Bathhouse at West Elm Avenue and Quincy Shore Drive.

A post Splash 'Warm Up' Party will be held at the Beachcomber.

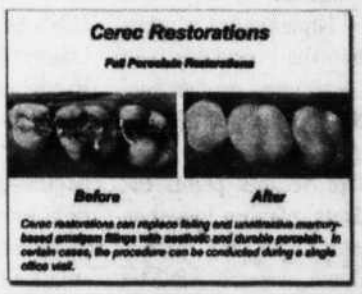
Other splashes will be held at other beaches simultaneously across Boston Harbor.

FWB needs splashers, donors, volunteers and spectators, said President Neil McCole.

"Proceeds from this event with Save the Harbor/Save the Bay will come back to FWB via grants for 2011 events," McCole said. SH/SB has supplied FWB with nearly $10,000 in grants written by McCole for family events the past three beach seasons.

"This is just another way to use the beach year-round and the funds will all come back to the community through FWB for summer fun," McCole added.

The post Splash "Warm Up" is being sponsored by The Beachcomber, Harpoon Brewery, Summer Shack, and Coffee Break Cafe. FWB is supplying the pizza.



A grand prize of two round-trip airline tickets is being offered to the Splasher from each beach who raises the most money. The winner can choose any U.S. Jet Blue destination.

Prizes will be awarded for festive costumes by Splashers and spectators. Register or donate online at www.cupidsplash.com.

Teams To Play Again On Feb. 19

North Quincy And Quincy Draw 3-3

NORTH QUINCY'S JAMES DUNN makes one of his 16 saves during last Friday's 3-3 draw with Quincy High School. Dunn and the Red Raiders were scheduled to play a pivotal league game against Scituate HS on Wednesday night.

The magic number was three for the North Quincy Red Raiders last Friday against the Quincy Presidents in hockey showdown between the city's two high schools.

The Red Raiders trailed 3-0 after two periods but North Quincy scored three goals all of which came in the third period, earning the suddenly front-running Raiders a 3-3 draw with Quincy.

"I told the guys that it didn't feel like we were losing 3-0 after two periods," said NQHS Matt Gibbons. "We controlled play in the first period, Quincy took it to us in the second, and in the third we picked it back up and earned the tie."

North Quincy (5-2-5 overall) received all it could handle against the feisty Presidents. Quincy (3-7-5) took a 1-0 lead on Derek Murphy's 22nd goal of the season; Murphy converted a neutral zone turnover by the Raiders into the game's first tally. Just minutes into the second period, sophomore forward Shawn Grady put QHS up 2-0 and Murphy increased the lead to 3-0 with a power-play goal.

An interference penalty on Quincy near the end of the second rolled over into the beginning of the third and the Red Raiders capitalized as sophomore forward Nick McGaughey redirected a shot from defenseman Rudy Tryon past Quincy's Justin Keenan just 20 seconds into the period.

"We came out and scored and that was a big boost," said Gibbons. "I told the guys in the locker room that if we could score right away it would make it a two-goal lead and everyone knows that is the toughest lead to maintain in hockey. After that we shortened the bench and stepped up our play."

North would use this momentum to its advantage. Not five minutes later, senior Joe Kowlski scored his first varsity goal on the power play with the assist going to senior captain Brendan Glynn.

With their energy and confidence building steam, North finally got the equalizer when McGaughey buried his second goal of the period with 4:05 left in the game. A late-game barrage from Quincy was denied by the goaltending of James Dunn (16 saves).

"You have to give North Quincy credit," said QHS head coach Tim Lewis. "Matt had his team prepared to start the third period. If we could have killed off that penalty it may have been a different result, but that goal swung momentum. But I am proud of my kids they didn't roll over after that and we hit a couple of posts late. We just couldn't get that goal."

Both teams earned one-point on Friday and QHS picked up another point on Saturday with a 3-3-draw with Whitman-Hanson, but it was North Quincy in the larger picture that had the better weekend.

The Raiders knocked off Silver Lake HS on Saturday, 3-1, behind two goals from Glynn and three assists from captain Dereck Graham to finish the weekend gaining three-out-of-four possible points.

North Quincy also watched as league-leading Scituate HS defeated Pembroke HS, 3-1, on Sunday setting up a huge game Wednesday evening for first place in the Patriot League. The Red Raiders are currently two points behind Scituate HS, but North has already defeated the Sailors - Jan. 8 by a 3-1 count. A win Wednesday would give North Quincy first-place in the league. The team needs five points in their final eight regular season games to qualify for the postseason.

"I was worried about a letdown against Silver Lake, playing the next night after the Quincy game but the team played steady each period," said Gibbons. "We ended up having a nice weekend and as of right now we are two points behind Scituate. With three league games left we hope to pull out another six points. A league championship banner would look nice but our goal is to improve and be ready to make some noise in the tournament."

The playing of this game was contingent on the weather coming through Quincy midweek.

Presidents Starting To Get It Together

QUINCY AND NORTH QUINCY battle in front of the net during last week's 3-3 result at the Quincy Youth Arena.

By SEAN BRENNAN

The final score wasn't the ideal result for Quincy High School, but last Friday's 3-3 draw against rival North Quincy High School, a game in which the Presidents held a 3-0 lead entering the final period, was a step in the right direction.

To prove this point, the Presidents, playing less than 24 hours after the rivalry showdown, skated to a 3-3 tie with Whitman-Hanson High School on Saturday.

Quincy has improved dramatically over the course of the winter. The team is currently on a 2-1-2 streak with an overall record that now stands at 3-7-5. Starting with a senior class which is highlighted by captains Derek Murphy – the Patriot League's leading scorer with 24 goals and ten assists – and defenseman Bobby Kozlowski along with a forward core of Nick Scibilio, Brendan Gibbons, Chris Connelly, Danny Higgins and Myles Riddle and defensemen John McNulty and goalie Robby Lawton, the Presidents are beginning to peak at just the right time.

Quincy, though not mathematically eliminated from a potential postseason berth, would need to run the table the rest of the way to earn inclusion. But the progress being made is a testament to the hard work of the entire bench.

"We have been playing well over our last five games," said QHS head coach Tim Lewis. "It is important to note that four weeks ago (Jan. 5) we lost 7-2 to Whitman-Hanson. The turnaround is evident and we have picked up play. It just took them about ten to twelve games to figure out the system."

Another reason for the late-season improvement has come in the form of a more discipline style of play.

"Our overall discipline has improved dramatically," continued Lewis. "In two out of our last three games we have had no penalties. The North Quincy game was the exception but penalties are bound to happen in that type of game."

Lewis liked what he saw out of his team at the start of the NQ game. Maybe as important, he liked the way his team responded the next day against the Panthers.

"We had a couple of good days of practice leading up to North Quincy and we came out of the gate fast," Lewis said. "Give North Quincy credit. They are well coached by Matt Gibbons and they didn't give up. But we didn't roll over. We hit a couple of posts late and just couldn't get that last goal."

"But we didn't let that affect us against W-H," continued Lewis. "We outshot them 42-21. I really liked they way the team played and from a coaching standpoint it was good to see them put that NQ game behind them and come out and approach this game ready to go. It was a sign of growth."

The best player on the ice this season for Quincy has been senior Derek Murphy, bar none. Murphy scored six goals and broke a QHS school record on Jan. 17 against non-league Brookline HS.

"Derek may not be the most vocal leader but he always the first guy on the ice and the last guy off," said Lewis. "He is the best player in the Patriot League and he always makes an impact."

Lewis also singled out the play of defensemen Bobby Kozlowski, John O'Callaghan, Danny Higgins, Matt Kozlowski and Matt Davis as well as forward Shawn Grady during Quincy's last five games.

Tied For First-Place In Patriot League's Fisher Division

Quincy Knocked Out Duxbury, 59-40

By SEAN BRENNAN

The path to a potential Patriot League championship became a little clearer for the Quincy Presidents following their impressive 59-40 victory over Duxbury High School last Friday at Quincy High School.

The Presidents (11-2 overall, 8-1 in Patriot League) kept pace with Fisher Division foe Scituate High School for the best record on that side of the Patriot League. Duxbury, despite the blowout loss to QHS, remains the top team on the Keenan Division side of the league at 10-2, 7-1.

The Patriot League does not crown one single league champion, instead crowning two division winners, but, if Quincy can take care of business against upcoming league opponents Hingham (Tuesday night), Pembroke (Friday), and Hanover (Feb. 8), their game against Scituate HS on Feb. 15 could decide which team ends the regular season with the overall best record in the Patriot League, and takes bragging rights into the postseason.

Against Duxbury, Quincy started hot and never cooled off. The romp started with a three-pointer from junior Juli Tomer on her team's first offensive possession. Six first-quarter three-pointers later gave Quincy a 24-11 lead after one.

"We came out of the gate and set the tone," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We did a nice job of setting up our zone offense and continually swung the ball around to our best shooters and made threes."

"The outcome was a surprise," continued Bretsch. "We expected it to be a competitive game and a dog-fight but we matched up well with their style of play and we executed our game plan. We were in control the entire game which was great to see against a tough opponent."

Quincy continued its offensive display in the second quarter. Behind the stellar play on offense from junior captain Kiley McDonald (18 points, 16 rebounds), the Presidents continued to shred the Green Dragons' defense with a deadly inside-outside combination. With McDonald supplying offense inside, senior captain Kori Sorensen (12 points), junior guard Nicole Lamie (ten points) and junior forward Caity Lowry (12 points) rained in points from the outside.

The result was a commanding 35-19 advantage at the halftime break.

"It was by far our best game of the year," said Bretsch. "We played with intensity but we didn't play out of control. It was good to see that intensity without playing sloppy."

"On offense we produced, but it was really our defense, closing out their shooters, that was the difference," continued Bretsch. "Duxbury was undefeated in the Patriot League and they had just defeated Scituate. It was our biggest win of the season."

In the second half, the Green Dragons continued to be baffled by Quincy's swarming defense. The Presidents used a press to slow down Duxbury's offense as Tomer and Lowry created havoc in the backcourt. When Duxbury got the ball into their offensive set, McDonald did a fine job of shutting down Michela North, the Patriot League's second-leading scorer (17.9 points per game).

"Juli and Caity continued to create havoc and disrupted their rhythm allowing us to pickoff some lazy passes," said Bretsch. "Kiley did a nice job slowing down North. It was a very good defensive game overall."

To say this was a statement game would be to diminish what Quincy has already accomplished this season. The Presidents may have surprised folks in the early goings, but, at this point, the team needs to be looked at as a serious threat come the postseason.

Yet, Bretsch acknowledged that his girls still can get better, especially on defense.

"We work on defense every day," he said. "We need to still get a lot better to reach that next level. We need to do a better job attacking and being aggressive. But the team is coming together and I have seen huge improvements from everyone of them."

"My team is young," he continued. "They may be juniors but they are new to this role. Their confidence is high so I do not expect any letdown after this big win. We need to continue to take care of business."

With seven games remaining, this Quincy team is on pace to become the most successful (victory-wise) during Bretsch's ten-year tenure. His 2003-2004 team finished with a 15-6 record.

Quincy has already qualified for the postseason.

Notes:

The North Quincy girls' team picked up their third victory of the season on Jan. 25 with a 52-29 decision over Pembroke High School. Sophomore Samantha McNally finished with 11 points and six rebounds and junior Olivia Umoren tallied seven points and seven rebounds.

Last Friday, the Red Raiders lost a heartbreaker to nonleague Brockton, 59-58. Senior captains Emily Gray (22 points) and Montana McBirney (16 points) led North Quincy on offense. The loss drops NQHS to 3-10 overall.

Boys Basketball

The Quincy High School boys' team lost to Duxbury HS, 54-40, last Friday to fall to 7-6 overall and 6-3 in the Patriot League, but rebounded nicely over the weekend with a 69-61 nonleague victory over Bridgewater-Raynham.

Sophomore Jaquan Harris finished with ten points and senior Brian Malger (11 points), Kevin McDonagh (11 points) and Zerick Fadairo (ten points) also contributed to the Quincy win. The Presidents are currently 8-6 overall and hosted Hingham HS on Tuesday night.

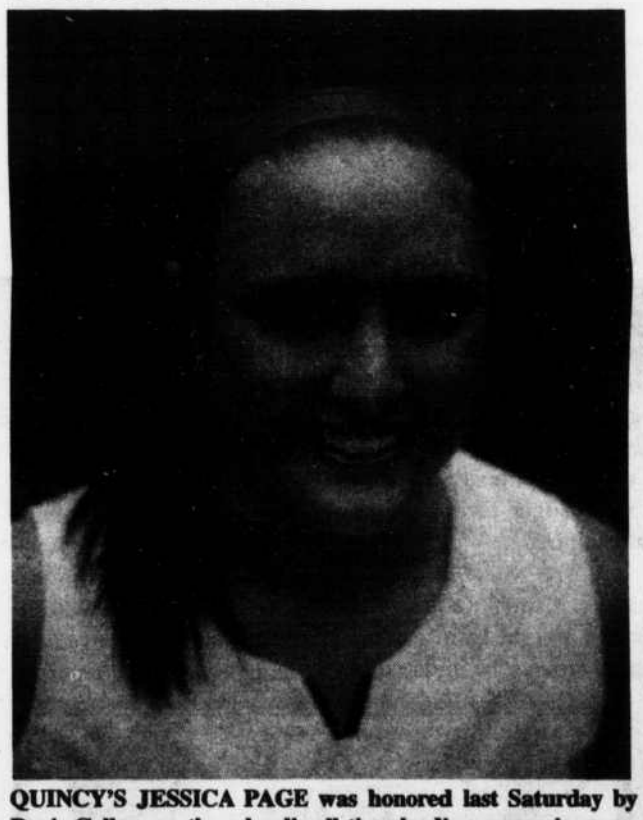
Junior Ryan Evans (14 points) and sophomore Marquis McClendon (14 points) carried North Quincy (8-6 overall) to a 64-43 nonleague victory over Our Lady of Fatima (R.I.).

Jessica Page Honored As Regis College All-Time Scoring Leader

Last Saturday (Jan. 29), the Regis College Athletics Department honored Jessica Page, of Quincy, in a ceremony during halftime of the women's basketball game, officially announcing Page as the all-time scoring leader in women's basketball history.

Page, who graduated in May 2010, scored her 1,000-career point Jan. 3 in a 67-46 defeat of the University of Massachusetts-Boston in Nassau, Bahamas; she would finish her career having scored 1,659 points.

During the 2009-2010 season, Page led Regis College to its first The Commonwealth Coast Conference Championship since the mid-1990s. Although the team lost to the University of New England in the finals.



Page is currently tied for first in the nation having made 12 consecutive free throws against Roger Williams (2/1/07) in her sophomore year. That year she scored 412 total points. Her senior year she scored 445 points, 11 points more than she did in her freshman year; she posted a career-high 27 points against Rivier on 11/22/2008.

The Commonwealth Coast Conference recognized Page each year she played for Regis College. In her freshman year she was named All-TCCC Honorable Mention and TCCC Rookie of the Year. In that same year she was named TCCC Rookie of the Week three times.

As a sophomore and junior she was named All-TCCC Second Team. She averaged 15.8 points per game in 2007-2008 while shooting an average of 39% from the field. Known as a three-point shooter within the TCCC, Page averaged 31.1% from behind the arc in her career. Her senior season was her best from three-point range, averaging 33.3%.

It was not until Page's senior year that she was named All-TCCC First Team. She tallied a career-high 14 rebounds versus the University of New England.

While at Regis College, Page was a nursing major that balanced a rigorous clinical schedule while also handling the commitment to the women's basketball team.

QUINCY'S JESSICA PAGE was honored last Saturday by Regis College as the school's all-time leading scorer in women's basketball. Page finished up her college career with 1,659 career points. She majored in Nursing while in school.

How To Keep Smiling While Losing Weight

By SHERRY TORKOS

(NAPSA)-Good news: There is a way to keep your spirits up and your weight gain down.

Most adults gain between one and two pounds a year. Driven by hectic schedules, increased stress, reduced physical activity and poor eating habits, weight gain affects overall health in many ways. Not only can it increase the risk of diabetes and heart disease, it can also affect sleep and mood and may even contribute to sexual dysfunction. Fortunately, you can avoid this trap. Here's how:

1. Change your exercise routine with the seasons. Don't let cold winter weather make you sedentary. There are plenty of ways to stay active during the winter. Try skiing or ice-skating, or take a class like Pilates or yoga. Any physical activity will benefit your weight, mood, hormonal balance and immunity.

2. Follow the glycemic index. Avoid foods with a high glycemic index (foods that break down quickly into sugar, such as refined starches and sweets). These foods cause dramatic fluctuations in blood sugar that can increase appetite. Reach for low-glycemic whole grains (whole wheat, brown rice, oats, flaxseed, legumes, vegetables). They're broken down more slowly and evenly, helping control blood sugar levels and reducing hunger.

3. Try to steer clear of stress. Chronic stress can cause weight gain, particularly around the midsection. Stress increases the release of the hormone cortisol, which promotes body fat storage. Stress also triggers unhealthy eating.

4. Choose smart supplements. Supplements can help promote good health and support a weight management program.

• Multivitamins and minerals help you get antioxidants, B vitamins and vitamin D when you may not be getting enough through diet.

• Phase 2 Carb Controller can help support weight management and reduce after-meal blood sugar levels. This white kidney bean extract, found in Carb Intercept from Natrol, reduces the digestion and absorption of starchy foods. Starches are a major factor in weight gain and blood sugar fluctuations.

• Fish oil, which provides omega-3 fatty acids, is good for heart health and emotional well-being. Research suggests that omega-3 fatty acids may also help fight fat by increasing its oxidation.

• Green tea contains antioxidant-rich catechins, as well as a small amount of caffeine. Research suggests that these compounds work together to increase calorie burning.

Tips For Healthier Eating

(NAPSA)-If this is the year you resolve to eat better, it's important to remember that healthy is an every day process-and requires some changes in the way you approach meals and snacks.

One smart way to improve your diet is to replace unhealthy fats with healthier fats, such as those in avocados. The oils and fats found in the fruit are "good" fats and can help lower your cholesterol. The avocado is a great source of heart-healthy monounsaturated fat. It actually helps to raise levels of HDL ("good" cholesterol), which protects arteries, while lowering levels of LDL ("bad" cholesterol).

Avocados also contain more beta-carotene than any other fruit, offering important antioxidant properties that may help prevent cancer and other diseases.

"I use avocado to incorporate five-star restaurant flavors into healthy meal options," said Chef Jen. "Avocados add nutrition, and a product such as Wholly Guacamole is a convenient friend because you can use it in lots of recipes. And, best of all, it's fresh, preservative free and ready to go."

More delicious and nutritious substitutions can be made by using natural, preservative-free salsa. Salsa is not just for dipping chips in. It's a heart-smart food and considered a "free" item by many point-counting diets. Low in calories and high in nutritional value, salsa can be used to zest up sandwiches, potatoes and rice.

Keeping ready-made, preservative-free guacamole and salsa on hand can make it easier to cut down on calories and fat and stick to healthier, new eating habits. Convenience is a major factor in sticking to any new plan. Here are some easy ideas from the makers of Wholly Guacamole and Wholly Salsa:

• Get off the ranch. Veggies usually served with ranch dressing can instead be served with guacamole or salsa. For example, ranch dressing has 140 calories (130 from fat) while guacamole has 60 calories, only 45 of which come from fat.

• A burger usually topped with ranch dressing or high-calorie mayonnaise is tasty when topped with guacamole or salsa.

• Instead of topping a hot dog with ketchup, try salsa or guacamole. Healthy salsa has replaced ketchup as the No. 1 condiment in the country.

• Whip up tuna salad with guacamole for less calories and more flavor.

• Chicken salad is also delicious with guacamole, and for extra-tasty texture, add corn and beans.

• Crab cakes that are usually served with mayonnaise are especially tasty when served with spicy guacamole or salsa.

Stroke, Osteoporis Screenings At River Bay Club Feb. 15

Life Line Screening will offer a stroke and osteoporosis screening Tuesday, Feb. 15 at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy.

Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

Screenings identify potential cardiovascular conditions such as blocked arteries and irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which is a strong predictor of heart disease.

A bone density screening to assess osteoporosis risk is also offered and is appropriate for both men and women.

Packages start at $139. All five screenings take 60 to 90 minutes to complete.

Screenings are fast, non-invasive, painless, affordable and convenient.

Stroke is the third leading cause of death and a leading cause of permanent disability. Some 80 percent of stroke victims had no apparent warning signs prior to their stroke.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-877-237-1287.

Pre-registration is required.

EDUCATING PATIENTS

Patients suffering from low back pain benefit from becoming educated about their conditions. That is the news from a recent study of back-pain patients. Researchers found that those with high levels of disability expressed significantly more negative beliefs with regard to physical activity, taking time off from work, and the need for bed rest. By comparison, patients receiving the most information about their conditions were best able to manage their conditions. Patients overwhelmingly stated that complex medical terminology hampered their ability to understand their condition, its causes, and its management, while visual diagrams and skeletal models were the best explanatory methods. Patients in both groups showed a preference for chiropractors over primary care physicians for specialized information.

Our goal is to markedly improve your life. Pain relief is usually the first step. Restoring your human potential and optimizing your health is next. How long has it been since you were pain free? Close your eyes and imagine what it would be like to start and end your day without one. It can happen! At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can diagnose your type of ache and treat its underlying causes. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Chiropractic treatment provides patients with a personal hands-on approach that helps them to fully communicate with their doctors and better understand their circumstances.

As the World Spins

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will you please explain vertigo? I fell asleep in a chair one evening, and when I woke, I was slightly dizzy. The next morning when I woke up and sat up, I was extremely dizzy. Everything was going back and forth. When I tried to walk, I was bouncing off the walls. The room was moving. My doctor prescribed Dramamine. I still wake up dizzy, but not as bad as the first two nights. I am 69. – E.B.

ANSWER: Vertigo is a hallucination that everything is moving. It's not. What you describe fits the definition. Many causes of vertigo can be traced to the inner ear, which has two important functions: hearing and balance, the orientation of our body to the things around it. That function is handled by the vestibular system of the inner ear.

Sometimes a viral infection of the ear can trigger vertigo. The only way to handle it is to take a medicine such as you're taking and wait for the infection to clear in about three to six weeks.

Or it can come about because tiny calcium particles in the inner ear have made their way to places where they shouldn't be. This is benign positional vertigo. When affected people move their head or change position from lying or sitting to standing, the calcium particles activate the vestibular system abnormally, and profound dizziness strikes. When you woke up and sat up, you became dizzy. You changed positions. Calcium particles activated your vestibular system.

A doctor easily can prove benign positional vertigo by provoking a dizzy spell through a series of head and body movements. He or she can coax those transplanted calcium specks back to their site of origin through another series of movements, called the Epley maneuvers. The medicine you mention often lessens symptoms. Antivert is another useful drug. So is scopolamine – in its oral form, not in its patch form.

I made vertigo sound like an easy diagnosis and an easy treatment; it isn't. Many other serious conditions have to be considered by the examining doctor.

The booklet on vertigo discusses this common malady in detail. To obtain a copy, write to: Dr. Donohue – No. 801W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My teenage daughter twists and pulls her hair when she reads, watches TV or studies. She has two small bald patches on her scalp. I cannot get her to stop doing this. Is this normal? – R.T.

ANSWER: It's not normal, but it's pretty common. It's trichotillomania (TRICK-oh-TILL-uh-MAY-nee-uh). Some classify it as an obsessive compulsive disorder. The hair pulling quiets an inner anxiety. It's almost an involuntary act.

If you can't get your daughter to stop, the family doctor can recommend a therapist for her. The therapist can explain to her why she does this and how she can curtail the urge. Sometimes, medicines are prescribed for a short period.

She really does need attention. Constant hair pulling can damage the hair roots and lead to a permanent bald patch.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Andrew Carnegie once said, "The average person puts only 25% of his energy and ability into his work. The world takes off its hat to those who put in more than 50 percent of their capacity, and stands on its head for those few and far between souls who devote 100%."

Do you ever feel an emptiness or unfulfilled desire in your life? If so, have you ever considered your view is perhaps nearsighted, instead of farsighted enough to vision your capabilities? The plain fact is that every one of us possesses certain energies and resources that are often unused or wasted.

Let us remember that each of us has some unique capacity waiting for realization. Let us remember every person is valuable in his own existence . . . for himself alone . . . Let us remember that in our communities, in our circle of family and friends, each of us can bring to fruition these innate, God-given abilities . . .

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A gracious Lamb can learn more about a problem-filled situation than one who is openly suspicious of what could be happening. A friend might offer some well-directed advice.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting adjusted to an unexpected change might be difficult for the Bovine who prefers things to go according to plan. But help could come from a most welcome source.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This could be a good time to get a head start on those career-related plans. The sooner you check out the pluses and minuses, the sooner you can act on your information.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A personal situation you thought would no longer present a problem suddenly could produce some surprises. Try to sort things out with the help of trusted colleagues.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An upcoming move holds both anticipation and anxiety for Leos and Leonas who have some big decisions to make. Advice is plentiful, but it's up to you to decide which way you want to go.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone from a previous project could provide valuable guidance on how to handle a current problem, especially where it might involve a legal matter.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business situation presents some unexpected complications. But rather than try to handle them all at once, it would be best to deal with them one at a time.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You just might get what you want, despite the odds against it. In any event, be sure to thank all those people involved who believed in you and went to bat for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Before you even hint at an accusation, remember that you'll have to prove what you say. So be sure you have what you need to back up your comments.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A romantic situation takes an unexpected turn that favors some Sea Goats, but causes others to reassess how they've been handling the relationship.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A surprise turn of events could unsettle the Water Bearer. But it also might help open up an entirely different way of working out an important matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A smoothly running operation could bump up against an obstacle. This is where your ability to assess situations and make adjustments can restore things to normal.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your kindness is legendary, and so is your strong sense of responsibility.

Proposed New Bank On Adams Street Meeting Topic

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community Tuesday, Feb. 15 at 7 p.m. to discuss TD Bank's proposal to build a bank at 516 Adams St., Quincy.

The meeting will be held in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend.

TD Bank is seeking to build a branch location on the site that currently houses Firely's Restaurant. Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

For more information or to contact Palmucci, call 617-834-3945.

New Antenna On Ricciuti Dr. Subject Of Feb. 17 Meeting

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting to discuss AT&T's application for a special permit to install three panel antenna at 171R/193 Ricciuti Dr.

The meeting will be held Thursday, Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to participate.

Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

AT&T seeks to install three new panel antenna on the large 192-foot antenna structure that current exists. The request, if allowed, would not add any additional height to the tower that currently looms over West Quincy, Palmucci said.

The work is part of the wireless communication industry's upgrade from 3G to 4G service for the area.

Residents with questions about this subject or any other matter can call Palmucci at 617-834-3945.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to restoration and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest line of Massachusetts.

Memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle Lydon of the Lydon Funeral Home. When the tree is planted, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Veterans Council Sponsors Electronics Recycling Event

The Quincy Veterans Council, which unites all veterans organizations in Quincy, recently held a collection drive to gather electronic items from Quincy residents for recycling and to raise money for Council activities.

Assisted by the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post No. 294 and volunteer Air Force Junior ROTC cadets from North Quincy High School, the Council gathered many hundreds of pounds of electronic devices for recycling.

The company performing the recycling pays a stipend for the event and cash donations were also collected. The city also saves thousands of dollars on the cost of disposing such devices.

Rear: employees of recycling company who assisted unloading vehicles.

BIG HEARTS, WARM HANDS – Atherton Hough School kindergarten classes recently completed its annual community service effort entitled the "Mitten Tree." Each year, Atherton Hough School families generously answer the call for donations of new, warm mittens, gloves, hats, and scarves for decorating the "Mitten Tree." Items the children collect are then donated to DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended). Special Council Meeting Monday

More Data Sought On $9M Bond For Central

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Despite urgent pleas by city officials, city councillors balked at voting Monday on a $9M bond issue for the Central Middle School project after stating they didn't have adequate information at the time.

Councillors charged there was insufficient data on the proposed site, the bond costs, or plans for Sterling Middle School for them to vote during this week's joint meeting of the Education and Finance Committees.

However, councillors will revisit the bond issue again Monday when the committees reconvene and at a special city council session called solely on that issue later that night by Council President Kevin Coughlin.

Movie Shoot At Old QHS To Benefit Public Schools Music Program

Mayor Thomas Koch has inked a deal with Columbia Pictures that will see movie scenes for an upcoming Kevin James comedy shot inside the former Quincy High School in exchange for at least $80,000 that the Mayor plans to dedicate to the Quincy Public Schools music program.

"I can confirm that we've worked out an arrangement with the production company to use the interior of the old Quincy High School, and that the City will be compensated for the use of the vacant building," Koch said. "We're putting to use an otherwise vacant building and getting paid for it, and we expect to see a nice boost to the City's economy with the number of people associated with the movie who will be spending time – and money – in Quincy. It seems like a great fit."

Working together with the Quincy Film Bureau, the Mayor's Office worked out details of the arrangement with Columbia over the last several weeks. Chief among the issues raised by City officials was limiting any disruption to the new Quincy High School, next door to the old building.

The production will be contained entirely inside the building, and there will be no scenes shot outside, limiting the possibility for traffic, noise or sight-seeing distractions for nearby students. The City is working out parking arrangements for the production crew that will also minimize disruptions, officials said. Shooting is expected to last for about three to four weeks and is tentatively scheduled to take place next month.

"We've had great conversations with the production company. They understand the City's needs and the importance of minimizing any disruptions and compensating the City for use of public property," Koch said.

Koch: $25M Bond For Citywide Improvements 'Not A Wish List'

Authorization Submitted To City Council

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch asked city councillors Monday to approve a $25.4 bond authorization to rescue the city's residents from flood threats, protect school and municipal buildings from decay, and halt roadway and sidewalk deterioration.

Bond Breakdown – Page 9 –

Councillors subsequently referred the mayor's request to the Finance and Public Works Committees for review and recommendations.

"This isn't a wish list," Koch told councillors as he presented the 32-page Capital Improvement Plan (CIP) and called the projects essential for the city's future, "We owe it to the people of the city."

"If we don't spend mon-

To Remain A Part-Time Member Of Board; Department Heads Sworn In At City Hall

Marion Fantucchio Retiring As City's Chief Assessor

Marion Fantucchio, the chairwoman of the City's Board of Assessors since 1991, is retiring after a total of 58 years of service with the City.

Fantucchio will stay on as a part-time member of the Board of Assessors, and will be succeeded as the City's Chief Assessor by West Quincy resident and third-generation real estate appraiser Peter Moran, Mayor Thomas Koch announced.

"Marion's tenure with our City has been nothing short of remarkable, and I am truly grateful for her many years of service to our community," Koch said. "There is no one in the City with as much knowledge of real estate and property values than Marion, and I am pleased she will continue to share her expertise as a part-time member of the Board of Assessors."

As an assessor, Fantucchio has spent her career intricately involved in Quincy's real estate and property values, and has been chief assessor for three different Mayors. The Assessor's Office is responsible for classifying property values in the City, maintaining ownership records and administering property tax abatements.

MARION FANTUCCHIO

Moran, a Wollaston native and lifelong Quincy resident, has been a certified real estate appraiser for more than 20 years, running his appraisal business, Castle Appraisal Services, since 1996. Appointed as a part-time Assessor by Mayor Koch last year, he is a certified residential real estate appraiser and a member of the Massachusetts Association of Assessing Officers and the Norfolk/Suffolk County Assessors Association.

Moran said he sees technology upgrades in the Assessing Office as a top priority, a goal which is slated to get a boost from a portion of the Mayor's Capital Improvement Plan that includes $50,000 to integrate all of the City's GIS software systems.

He said his philosophy in dealing with taxpayers who file abatements on their property values is simple:

"I'm here to be fair," he said.

Added Mayor Koch:

"Peter brings tremendous industry experience, a great knowledge of real estate values, and one of the most important attributes I always consider in a department head – a true passion for this City. He's going to be a great addition to our team."

Moran was sworn in during a brief ceremony at City Hall on Monday along with other department heads, including new Library Director Harry Roger Williams.

Ward 1 Neighborhood Meeting On Proposed Zoning Updates Feb. 16

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will host a neighborhood meeting on proposed zoning updates Wednesday, Feb. 16 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St., Houghs Neck.

The evening's agenda will focus on boat storage, commercial vehicle parking, accessory apartments and home occupations.

For the past two years, a committee has been working to update Quincy's zoning ordinances. The committee's work has been presented to the City Council Ordinance Committee for review and edits and a series of committee meetings including a public hearing before the City Council will be held.

"Of particular interest to Ward 1 residents," Laforest said, "are the sections concerning parking of commercial vehicles in residential districts, home occupation, accessory apartments as well as a limit of storage for one piece of major recreational equipment (i.e boat, camper, trailer) per property."

For those unable to attend the Feb. 16 meeting but who want to share their opinion should call Laforest at 617-376-1351.

Quincy Lunar New Year Festival Sunday At North Quincy High

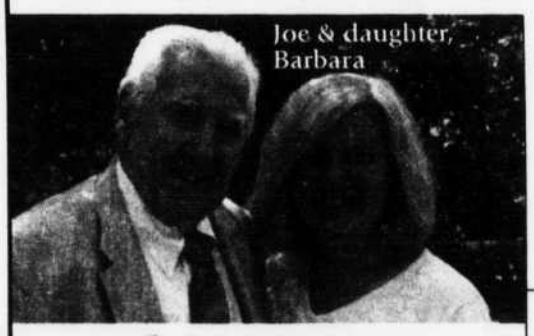
Quincy Asian Resources (QARI) will present the 23rd annual Lunar New Year Festival Sunday, Feb. 13 at North Quincy High School from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Admission is free.

This is the Year of the Rabbit, an animal that symbolizes peace and harmony. Approximately 7,000 attendees took part in last year's festival, making it one of the most popular and largest Lunar New Year celebrations in Massachusetts.

In addition to the traditional lion dance, Asian food vendors, and live performances representing five Asian cultures, the festival will introduce three new venues: Cultural Village, Wellness Activities, and Green Living.

Families will have opportunities to partake in interactive activities. Volunteers will provide educational materials on New Year celebrations.



The South Shore YMCA will offer fitness demonstrations and children's crafts.

Families are invited to enjoy games, shows and the popular Red Envelope ceremony at the end of the festival.

The festival is made possible by grand sponsors State Street Corporation, South Cove Community Health Center, Mohegan Sun, and Sunshine Travel.

The Festival is also supported by many corporations and community organizations, local community groups, businesses, government, social service agencies and volunteers. With their support, the Quincy Lunar New Year Festival has become a major cultural event for the Greater Boston area.

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

STRIKE UP THE BAND

While the romantic notion may persist that a man selects an engagement ring for his bride-to-be on his own, couples usually select wedding bands together. This is as it should be because these precious symbols of love are intended to be worn forever and should reflect the couple's personal style and particular tastes. With all this in mind, today's couples are showing a definite preference for platinum over yellow gold. This precious white metal, which is stronger and more durable than gold, provides every assurance that it will last forever. As far as style is concerned, more couples are moving away from wearing matching bands toward the selection of men's and women's bands that express individuality.

When you have your wedding rings custom designed, you are investing in timeless beauty that makes an intensely personal declaration. For such an important purchase, you want to be sure your special design says what is in your heart. At 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, we'll be practical so you can be romantic. We'd be glad to answer any questions you may have, and we'll work with you in the creation of rings or other fine jewelry that will be treasured for a lifetime. Visit soon so we can show you our wonderful selection of Valentine's Day gifts. PH: 617-773-3636.

Local Legislators Eye Governor's Cuts In Aid

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Local legislators said they believe Governor Deval Patrick should rethink his plan to tie local aid cuts to health insurance costs, particularly in communities like Quincy.

Patrick's fiscal year 2012 budget includes a $65 million cut in non-school local aid under the presumption that municipalities can recoup the lost state aid by either transferring their employees to the state's Group Insurance Commission (GIC) provider or a similarly cost-effective plan.

However, that logic doesn't work for Quincy, according to several local legislators who note that Quincy joined the GIC in 2008 and is now being penalized along with other communities that have done nothing to cut costs.

In fact, the current non-school local aid appears to include an across-the-board seven percent cut for everyone, according to totals provided by state Sen. John Keenan whose district includes Quincy, Braintree and Holbrook.

"In effect, these cities and towns would be punished under the Governor's budget for being fiscally responsible, and those municipalities who have held out would be rewarded," states the letter written by Keenan.

Local legislators signing Keenan's letter include Rep. Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy) Rep. Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy), and Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy).

The letter also states, "Please know that while we support steps that make it easier for our cities and towns to regain their fiscal footing, it should only be done in a fair fashion. We will not support the Governor's plan so long as it does not hold harmless those communities who have been proactive and started to address their health care costs."

Asked about the cuts, Chan said the delegation will work hard to "keep Quincy's local aid whole. The city should not be penalized as the unions and the city worked together to (join the GIC). They shouldn't have a local aid reduction because they did it."

Ayers responded in a similar tone to Chan and

FERNANDO MANZONO (right), a Mexican sea turtle conservationist, visited the New England Aquarium's new state-of-the-art Animal Care Center on South Street in Quincy Monday. With him are interpreter Lazero Herrera, a biologist and Connie Merido, head of the Aquarium's Marine Animal Rescue Team. Manzono, also known as Papa Tortuga, has run an important grassroots conservation effort to protect the Kemp Ridley sea turtles, their hatchlings and the critical nesting beaches of northern Mexico. The baby turtles from these beaches can be found several years later feeding on crabs south of Cape Cod during the summer. Kemp Ridley sea turtles – the world's most endangered sea turtles – have been making a slow and steady recovery over the past 20 years. The trio is looking at some of the 42 stranded sea turtles being cared for at the Animal Care Center. Each autumn, dozens to hundreds of these turtles become hypothermic in Massachusetts water where they are rescued and rehabilitated by the New England Aquarium. This past autumn had the second largest number of stranded sea turtles over the past 20 years on Cape Cod. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

Anti-Bullying Information Night For Parents March 1

Quincy Public Schools, as with districts across the state, is charged with implementing the mandates of a new anti-bullying law signed by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The new law provides students with an age appropriate anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Rotary Club has helped with funding for several school initiatives in the past. The Club has offered to provide funding to assist in the purchasing of a high school anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Public Schools will offer a parent information March 1 at Quincy High School with Dr. Elizabeth Englander from the Massachusetts Aggression Reduction Center (MARC) of Bridgewater State University at 7 p.m.

She is considered an outstanding presenter on the issue of bullying.

Remembering Sargent Shriver And The '76 Race

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The death of former statesman, activist and Presidential candidate Sargent Shriver Jan. 18 at the age of 95 rekindled some fond – and funny – memories for Quincy attorney Matthew McDonnell.

McDONNELL

Digging through our archives at The Sun, it also reminds us of the wide-open 1976 presidential campaign when this newspaper was a hot spot of media coverage for candidates seeking the Democratic nomination.

Shriver – the first director of the Peace Corps and the former ambassador to France – was among a record 23 Democratic contenders for their party's nomination for President in 1976. Shriver visited The Quincy Sun a week or so before the all-important New Hampshire Primary in February of that year. With him was McDonnell, Shriver's campaign coordinator in Quincy.

Appearing on the front page of The Sun's Feb. 19, 1976 edition was a photo of Shriver and McDonnell with Henry Bosworth, the Sun's longtime publisher and newspaper founder. Shriver is reading a copy of Quincy Heritage, a forerunner of the Sun's Historic Quincy that continues to be published annually.

There was also a story on Shriver in that edition written by the late Tom Henshaw, the Sun's longtime reporter and political correspondent. The headline: "Shriver Sees Kennedy Relation Campaign 'Mixed Blessing.'" The overline reads "Ted Eventual Candidate."

In the story, Shriver said then Sen. Ted Kennedy would eventually run for president – but not in 1976. He was right. Four years later, Kennedy unsuccessfully challenged President Carter for the Democratic nomination in 1980. Carter would lose his bid for re-election to Republican Ronald Reagan.

Referring to Ted Kennedy's Presidential prospects, Shriver said "I hope he does, sometime. Do I think he ever will? My guess would be yes. But I don't have anything to base that on. It's just a hunch."

Shriver, who was married to Eunice Kennedy – the sister of President John F. Kennedy – called his relationship with the Kennedy a "mixed blessing" on the campaign trail.

"I'm proud to be married to one of the Kennedy sisters and I have great admiration for the family," he is quoted. "But it is also true that I seem to get all of the negative vote of everybody who is opposed to the Kennedys. They voted against me automatically because I'm related to the Kennedys.

"The opposite is not true. Everybody who likes the Kennedys doesn't automatically like me or support me," he added.

Shriver was also a Democratic candidate for vice president in the ill-fated 1972 election.

McDonnell called Shriver "a liberal ahead of his time. He was a pro-life guy and a liberal and there aren't too many of those around even today." As for the Kennedy family relation, McDonnell added, "I don't ever remember him thinking about it other than being a blessing. I don't remember hearing anything negative about that."

During his Sun visit, Shriver predicted he'd finish fifth in the New Hampshire primary. And he did. Jimmy Carter, who was governor of Georgia at the time, finished first followed by Arizona Cong. Mo Udall, Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh and former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris.

Shriver's campaign was short-lived that year. "It was apparent he wasn't going to go anywhere very, very quickly," McDonnell says.

A week after New Hampshire, Shriver managed a second-place finish in the Vermont primary with 28 percent of the vote behind Carter's 42 percent. But in Massachusetts, Shriver received a mere four percent – a distant eighth. (Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson, a senator from Washington, won the Bay State primary with 22 percent.)

The Shriver campaign was done.

"I just remember getting a call from him saying 'we're wrapping it up," McDonnell says. "That's the way it goes.'"

Asked if Shriver would have made a good president, McDonnell replies, "He was a helluva man. He was cut from the same cloth as his brother-in-law (JFK)."

Shriver was the driving force behind the creation of the Peace Corps and it was President Kennedy who appointed him as the first director. During the administration of Lydon Johnson, Shriver served as the first director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. He's considered one of the main architects of Johnson's "War on Poverty."

"Sargent always wanted to run something on his own," McDonnell says. "He could have been governor of Maryland or Illinois. He was a very, very decent man and a very, very funny man."

The field of candidates in the 1976 presidential race was well represented in Quincy.

Besides Shriver, also visiting The Sun office were Rosalyn Carter, who would become First Lady after her husband's win over Gerald Ford in November; Udall, whose list of local supporters included the late Paul Harold who at the time was a councillor at-large; and former Alabama Governor George Wallace.

Having so many presidential candidates visiting a weekly newspaper was indicative of the time. First, the presidential race for the Democratic nomination was wide open because there was no clear front-runner. Second, newspapers were a main source of media for candidates. Any ink – the saying goes – is good ink.

The Democrats had plenty of campaign messages to get across, too. One of the biggest: trying to instill a new sense of trust in a nation's psyche after the political corruption of President Nixon and the Watergate scandal.

But not every moment on the trail was serious.

Indeed, the coverage of the Shriver and Wallace visits to Quincy provided a humorous anecdote from the 1976 campaign.

The week after Shriver came to town, Wallace visited The Sun where he was interviewed by Henry Bosworth and Tom Henshaw. Wallace was also a guest at the Quincy Lions Luncheon.

During the luncheon, McDonnell – a member of the Quincy Lions – greeted Wallace and shook his hand. A Sun photographer was there and captured the moment between McDonnell and Wallace.

What appeared in The Sun's next issue? A picture of McDonnell – Quincy coordinator for the Shriver Campaign – and George Wallace, one of his campaign rivals – meeting and greeting, shaking hands.

"Sarge read The Sun and saw the photo in it. He called me on the phone and for about an hour and a half we were roaring laughing about the whole thing," McDonnell chuckled. "I made sure Sarge was on the Sun's mailing list after he was on the front page the week before."

Serving with McDonnell on the local Shriver campaign were two South Shore coordinators: Larry DiCara and Ed Harrington. DiCara, a former Boston city councillor, is a Boston attorney. Harrington today is a federal judge in Boston.

McDonnell's friendship with Shriver dates back some 45 years ago.

During the summers of 1965 and 1966, McDonnell was a patrolman with the Barnstable Police Department in Hyannis. His main beat was 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., 7 days a week at the Kennedy Compound. "At night I drove a cruiser. I worked long hours. Some weeks I worked 96 hours a week. But we were kids," he laughs. "We could take it."

At the compound, McDonnell was stationed at the guard box right in front of Jackie Kennedy's house on Scudder Avenue. It was during these summers that he got to know the Kennedys, including Shriver.

"I always thought Sargent Shriver was a great guy. I always thought his kids were wonderful – every one of them. They raised very, very nice kids. They were respectful," McDonnell recalls.

He still has his police officer's notebook from the days on the Cape. McDonnell said there were "issues" with the pubic at the Compound back in those days.

"I remember grabbing a guy for driving under the influence. It was 9 o'clock in the morning and he was coming from Otis Air Force Base. He had no idea where he was. He was drunk and I was trying to get him to go some place local and he didn't know anybody. I had to arrest him probably about 100 feet from where Jackie was located in her house."

McDonnell knew Jackie and Bobby Kennedy but didn't see too much of Ted Kennedy who lived out on Squaw Island about a half mile beyond the compound. He also remembers a big yacht pulling into the dock outside the compound one day. It was Frank Sinatra.

He also knew some of the Kennedy children fairly well, especially "John John" – the late John F. Kennedy, Jr.

"I was holding onto John's bicycle the first time he rode it solo," McDonnell recalls.

Later, he also tried to have a little fun with Jackie and John. He issued a "parking violation" to the youngster for leaving his bicycle against a neighbor's fence.

"It was after Labor Day and in the morning and nobody else was around. (John) got the major stub and I wrote all over it 'SAMPLE' and 'NO VIOLATION.' He brought it to his mother and she came out and she wasn't too happy with me. She thought I had let her son think that he was violating the law.

"She let the Secret Service know, too. (Agent) Jack Walsh was a good friend of mine and he was in charge of the children detail. We had a good laugh about that one."

He still has the "parking violation."

And plenty of fond memories from the Cape Cod-Shriver years.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1914 real photo postcard is a view of Winthrop Avenue looking up Wollaston Hill from the corner of Beale Street. The steeple in the right distance is the Wollaston Congregational Church, one of the first buildings erected here when the hill was developed as the Wollaston Heights subdivision in 1870. Previously this part of Quincy was all farmland. The houses shown here are a few examples of the many fine homes built on the hill by Boston businessmen who were encouraged with incentives to come here. In the foreground is Safford Park with new plantings and landscaping. It had been the site of the first wooden Wollaston School that was here for over 35 years until it was demolished in 1912. The postcard was one of many published by the Barron Souvenir Co., Manufacturers of Photographic Cards in Wilmington, MA. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Democratic City Committee Membership Meets Saturday

The Quincy Democratic City Committee will hold a general membership meeting Saturday, Feb. 12th at 11 a.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant on The Parkingway in Quincy Center.

Cong. William R. Keating (D-Quincy) will be the guest speaker.

"In an effort to engage as many people as possible in 2011 the City Committee will meet to formulate our Action Agenda," said Committee Chairwoman Alicia Gardner. "This year's Action Agenda will focus on building the grassroots movement in Quincy for electoral success in the 2012 elections."

The membership meeting will take place immediately following the Ward 1 through Ward 5 Democratic Caucuses. The caucuses will meet to elect delegates and alternates to the 2011 Massachusetts Democratic State Convention set for Saturday, June 4th at the Tsongas Arena in Lowell. All Democrats registered as of Dec. 31, 2010 are encouraged to participate at their caucuses.

Real Estate Taxes And Campaign Promises

Yes, I voted for Tom Koch for Mayor.

Yes, I heard Tom say taxes would not go up!

Did I look at my tax bill and compare it to last year? No.

Why would I? I heard Tom say he would not increase our real estate taxes.

It wasn't until someone asked me, "Did your taxes go up? "I thought, "Of course not; Tom Koch said he wasn't going to increase taxes for a second year."

The question, however, prompted me to look at my tax bill and my taxes had, in fact, increased.

SURPRISE! Tom said he would not increase our taxes, so I thought it was a mistake. After doing some research, I found that anyone who owns a house assessed for over $325,800 (Fiscal Year 2011) has an "above average single family house" and will probably be surprised by an unexpected increased tax bill this year.

Actually, 37.875% of the single family homes in Quincy were assessed at above average.* Surprise, again!

What I learned directly from the Assessor's Office is that the City did not increase the total amount of real estate tax revenue it takes in this year; however, it accomplishes this by cost shifting (because most property values decreased throughout the recession).

This means that certain select Quincy residents (those who own an "above average single family home") had their real estate taxes increased from the prior year, so the city can collect the same amount of revenue as last year.

Who would have guessed that you have to be so precise when you ask a politician if they are going to increase "your taxes specifically" not the city's taxes!

To quote Mayor Koch: "We are one of the only communities in the Commonwealth to refuse to raise property taxes for two consecutive years and we do so for our families who are still struggling, our neighbors who are still jobless, our workers who have seen wages cut or hours reduced."

It should be brought to the Mayor's attention that so many more than the "average homeowner" have been struggling through these tough economic times. Tom claimed to help those who are still struggling then shifts taxes onto property owners who own an "above average" house in Quincy and are most likely struggling as much as the "average homeowner."

The tax rate went up for the lucky "above average." These lucky individuals are used to paying a higher property tax bill based on higher assessments, but now they pay a higher rate as well. When did taxes become so unbalanced and so opaque in Quincy? Let's keep it fair across the board.

So next time a politician says while campaigning, "I will not increase taxes," do your homework and inquire about whose taxes he's referring to. You may want to look at your 2009 to present real estate tax bills, you may be surprised!

*The following statistics were requested from the Assessor's Office to determine what percentage of Quincy's single families are "above average houses" and were the chosen ones to have the tax increase shifted to their real estate tax bill.

How Long Will The 'Honeymoon' Last?

It's hard to believe what happened at City Hall with the signing of the $1 billion-plus deal.

It appeared the mayor was acting more like a love sick puppy than a dignified city official telling the people at the meeting that he and Ken Narva are now married.

We will see how long the honeymoon will last. When and without a doubt the first big problem arises, and when you find out that most of your estimates are way too low.

By the time this project gets off the ground you will be talking $2 billion or more. In this day and age, you can't guarantee any price for over six months.

I can attest to this fact having been in the construction field for over 60 years and still work part-time as an estimator.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Tobin, Council Wrestle With $89M Budget

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin was scheduled to present an $89 million budget for Fiscal 1982 to the City Council at a special meeting.

This Week
1981
30 Years Ago

At the time, the mayor and some councillors girded for battle over a separate legislative package that Tobin termed vital to his budget proposal.

Tobin's budget, down $13 million from the $102 million passed by the council last year (due to the constraints of Prop 2 1/2, represents the loss of 275 jobs).

The second legislative package contains the Mayor's proposals to set up Enterprise Accounts for the city hospital, Quincy Junior College and newly created Water and Sewer Commission.

Thus, the expense of running those departments and institutions would be removed from the tax levy, which is limited by Prop 2 ½ to 2.5% of the city's valuation.

TOBIN TAPS TERRANOVA TO REPLACE PAPILE ON QUINCY HOUSING AUTHORITY BOARD

Frank Terranova, retired superintendent of maintenance for the Quincy Housing Authority, was Mayor Arthur Tobin's choice for a spot on the authority board.

Tobin said he would ask the City Council to approve his nomination of Mr. Terranova for the seat now held by Alphonse Papile.

Terranova, 72, retired in 1977 as maintenance superintendent for the QHA.

TOBIN, COMER WARD TWO SPEAKERS

Thomas Barrett, president of the Ward Two Civic Association, announced that Mayor Arthur Tobin and John Comer, chairman of the board of assessors, would be the guest speakers at the Association's February meeting.

They will discuss the effects of Proposition 2 ½ as well as the state of the city and downtown development plans. A question and answer period will follow.

In Sync Center Of The Arts To Present 'Cinderella' Ballet Saturday

In Sync Center of the Arts will present a ballet production of Cinderella Saturday, Feb. 12 at 6 p.m. at Milton High School.

Mary Quigg of Weymouth will be starring in the role of Cinderella.

Liam Fitzpatrick of Quincy will be dancing the role of The Prince.

Emma Cargill and Caprial Harris of Milton dance the parts of the stepsisters.

The mother is danced by Milton's Grace Kernohan.

Giuliana Giddings of Milton will be dancing the role of the Fairy God Mother.

All of the In Sync ballet students perform in the annual ballet production and this year will be portraying seasonal fairies who prepare Cinderella for the grand ball, pumpkins, clocks, Cinderella's attendants, pages, and guests at the ball.

MARY QUIGG is Cinderella and Liam Fitzpatrick will portray The Prince when the In Sync Center of the Arts presents a ballet production of Cinderella Saturday, Feb. 12 at 6 p.m. at Milton High School.

Maggie Crowley, the ballet director at In Sync Center of the Arts, choreographs the classical ballet performance and is happy to offer this opportunity to her students.

Teri Mangiaratti, artistic director at In Sync, said, "We are always very excited to give this performance opportunity to our ballet students. There are so few classical ballet options for young dancers - we are happy to incorporate this into what we offer at In Sync.

"Our annual classical ballet performance energizes the ballet students and keeps them interested in their art form. In a time where most of our society is geared toward pop culture, it is refreshing to see so many kids excited about classical ballet and classical music. We are looking forward to another inspirational ballet performance!"

In Sync's production of Cinderella is approximately 75 minutes long. Mangiaratti called the production a "perfect opportunity to expose young children to accessible classical ballet."

Tickets are on sale at In Sync and will be available at the door Saturday.

ENC Theatre To Present 'The Glass Menagerie'

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present Tennessee Williams' classic play, The Glass Menagerie, Thursday, Feb. 24 through Saturday, Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center, located on ENC's Wollaston campus.

Production Manager Tara Brooke Watkins said ENC's production will attempt to fulfill Tennessee Williams' original vision for the play, which included using images projected upon the stage to heighten the sense that the audience is watching memories of years ago.

Tickets for The Glass Menagerie are $10 general admission, $7 for ENC faculty/staff and outside students, and $5 for ENC students and children 12 and under. For tickets or more information, call the Cove box office at 617-745-3715.

Cupid Splash Postponed To April 2

With several feet of crusty snow and ice on the region's public beaches, more snow in the forecast, surface water temperature of just 33 degrees and a hard freeze forecast for later this week, organizers have postponed "The Cupid Splash" and Harpoon Warm-Up Parties until Saturday, April 2.

Locally, the splash and party were originally scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 12 on Wollaston Beach.

The event website, www.cupidsplash.com, will remain live and contests for best Cupid costume, biggest fundraiser, and best beach turnout will go on as planned.

Despite the postponement, organizers say the Cupid Splash has already been a terrific success. Over 150 registered participants have raised more than $12,500 to support Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and New England beaches.

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay is a non-profit public interest harbor advocacy organization that works to restore and protect the Boston Harbor and the Massachusetts Bay.

For more information contact Bruce Berman, director of Communications Strategy and Programs, at (617) 451-2860.

Comedy Night To Benefit Red Stockings Team

A Comedy Night (must be 21 or over) to benefit the Quincy Red Stockings 11u (Red) Baseball Team will be held Saturday, Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at Club 58 Nightclub & Bar, 58 Ross Way, Quincy.

Tickets are $20 per person and are available at the door.

Featured comedians are:

John David, feature performer on NESN's Wicked Funny Comedy Tour and Nick's Comedy Stop; Bob Gautreau whose credits include The Tonight Show, HBO and Comedy Central; and Mark Riley, feature performer at Nick's Comedy Stop and Giggles Comedy Club.

'Dancing With The Angels' Fundraiser

Visiting Angels of the South Shore will host its second annual "Dancing with the Angels" fundraising event to benefit South Shore Elder Services and Old Colony Elder Services Special Needs Fund Saturday, April 2 from 6:30 to 11 p.m. at the Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

The Special Needs Fund helps elders in 34 towns on the South Shore who need help with everyday necessities of life, such as food, clothing, shoes, fuel, medicine and shelter.

The event will feature live music by the White Heat Swing Orchestra which played at the Governor's inauguration ball.

As part of the evening's entertainment, Visiting Angels staff members, partnered with professional dancers from the Center Stage Dance Academy of Plymouth, will participate in two Latin dance competitions. In additon to hearing judges' comments on their performances, everyone will have an opportunity to vote with cash donations for their favorite dancers. Whoever "wins" the most cash, wins the competition.

All money collected through voting will go to the Special Needs Fund.

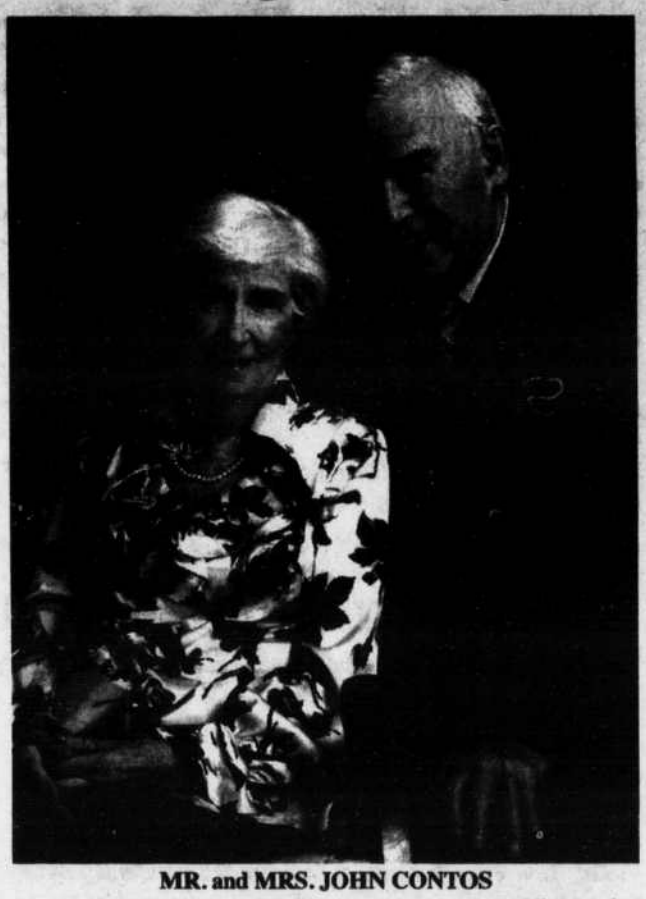
Mr., Mrs. John Contos Celebrate 65th Wedding Anniversay

Mr. and Mrs. John Contos were recently joined by family members at the Venezia Restaurant in celebration of their 65th wedding anniversary.



The dinner party was hosted by their children Gregory and Josephine Contos of Littleton, Jack and Geraldine Contos of Quincy and Lisa and Rick Smith of Quincy.

Claire Mostyn and John Contos met at a YMCA dance in Boston. John was born and raised in Dorchester. Claire was born in County Cork Ireland and moved to South Boston at the age of three.

They were married Jan. 27, 1946 in Saint Monica's Church in South Boston. They moved to Quincy where they lived on Beach Street for a short time, and then bought a home on Russell Street where they raised their family.

John was a loyal employee of Whitings Milk, and retired from The New England Telephone Co. Claire was a secretary with the Jordan Marsh Company.

The couple has traveled extensively through Europe and the Caribbean, but they always return to the warmth of their Quincy home.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Italian Bread 'Pudding'

During the recent snowfalls, I was looking through my various recipes and found a recipe that includes French or Italian bread either left over or fresh. I call it an Italian bread pudding.

It is a rare occurrence at our house if bread is ever left over, but once in a while it is. But if it isn't, it's worth it to buy fresh to make this delicious side dish.

ITALIAN BREAD PUDDING

About 5 or 6 cups cut up bread (with crust on)
3 large fresh tomatoes (diced)
½ cup fresh basil leaves
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
3-4 tablespoons olive oil for sautéing
2 cloves garlic (chopped)
1-cup mushrooms (cut) (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

In a large skillet, heat the oil and the garlic. Add the bread and mushrooms and cook for a couple of minutes. Add the tomatoes, basil, salt and pepper, and cook until the liquid is almost absorbed. Add the Parmesan cheese. Place in a greased baking dish and bake uncovered for 20-25 minutes until bubbly. Bread will be nice and crispy on the top.

Concert Feb. 19 At Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center

Quincy Symphony Orchestra To Host BSO Violinist Lucia Lin

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra wil host Boston Symphony First Violinist Lucia Lin in the Brahms Violin Concerto Saturday, Feb. 19 at 8 p.m. at the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center located in Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

This will be the only performace of this exclusive concert.

With the featured artistry of Lucia Lin, this concert epitomizes the Quincy Symphony's new vision -- to "Bring World-class Music to Everyone."

A limited number of complimentary tickets will be offered to the public at designated outlets, in addition to priority seating tickets available for a modest donation.

The concert will open with Weber's "Oberon" overture. The symphony will be Schumann's 4th in D Minor, a work viewed by some as the forerunner of the "Tone Poem" symphonic format.

In the event of inclement weather, the concert will be held Tuesday, Feb. 22 at 8 p.m.

For tickets, ticket outlet locations, directions to the concert, and more information, call the QSO at 800-579-1618.

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra is a member of the League of Symphony orchestras, and is funded, in part, by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, supported by the Massachusetts Arts Council.

$80 Million Direct Annual Economic Impact On Quincy And Surrounding South Shore Communities

Eastern Nazarene College Releases Community Benefit Report

Eastern Nazarene College has released its 2010-2011 Community Benefit Report demonstrating a direct annual economic impact of more than $80 million on Quincy and surrounding South Shore communities.

For the last century, Eastern Nazarene has provided generations of local residents with a strong academic and spiritual foundation that has made them productive citizens and valued contributors to Quincy, the South Shore region and beyond.

The college, located on a 15-acre campus in the heart of Quincy's Wollaston neighborhood, is renowned for its success in getting students into top law, medical and graduate schools. After graduation, a large percentage of Eastern Nazarene alumni continue to live and work in Quincy and the metropolitan Boston area.

In addition to its annual budget of more than $22 million, Eastern Nazarene employs more than 496 full and part-time staff positions. Many of ENC's employees are local residents, whose property taxes support municipal services and who infuse revenue into the local economy by patronizing area businesses. This is combined with the estimated $4.8 million in annual local spending by the 1,100 students enrolled across the college's residential undergraduate, adult studies and graduate programs.

"For almost a century, Eastern Nazarene College has been seamlessly interwoven into the local community -- as an educator, an employer and a community servant," ENC President Dr. Corlis McGee said. "Our faculty, staff, students and alumni have long been assets to the local community. And in this difficult economy, we're pleased that ENC continues to serve as a regional economic engine, both as a major local employer and through significant local spending."

The money introduced into the Quincy and South Shore community from the college's constituencies has a multiplying effect, circulating on average 2.5 to 4.5 times before leaving the area. Using a multiplier of "three" gives Eastern Nazarene a conservative estimate of $82 million in annual impact on the local community.

In addition to the actual dollars Eastern Nazarene infuses into the local community each year, the college's faculty, staff and students generously donate their time, skills and knowledge to the community through service projects, civic engagement and other service-learning initiatives, such as the Germantown Neighborhood Center After-School program and Eastern Nazarene's Center for Responsibility and Justice. It is estimated that ENC constituencies perform hundreds of service hours annually.

The total amount of financial aid awarded to Eastern Nazarene's undergraduate, adult studies, and graduate students from the region for the 2009-2010 academic year was $8,396,962. For the 90 students with financial need residing in Quincy, the financial aid contribution was $1,758,351, while 341 students with financial need residing in the greater South Shore area were awarded aid totaling $6,638,609.

To read Eastern Nazarene's 2010-2011 Community Benefits Report in its entirety, visit: www.enc.edu/cbreport.

Alzheimer's Disease Study At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) and Nielsen Eye Center announce the start of a multinational, multi-center Phase 2 clinical trial for Alzheimer's disease, conducted by the Alzheimer's Disease Center at QMC (http://thealzcenter.org) under the direction of Anil K. Nair MD, Chief of Neurology.

QMC is among 20 sites in the United States approved by the FDA for this clinical trial and the only one in Massachusetts.

The placebo-controlled study will evaluate the effect on cognitive performance, safety, and tolerability of a new drug, SAR110894D, in patients with mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease on stable Donepezil (Aricept) therapy.

In order to qualify for the study, the subject must:

- Be a man or woman more than 55 years of age
- Have been diagnosed with mild to moderate AD by a physician
- Be on a stable dose of Aricept (Donepezil) for at least 4 months
- Have a consistent and reliable caregiver

For more information about this clinical study, contact Sheela at 617-302-6388 or email study@thealzcenter.org.

Bottle/Can Drive Saturday To Benefit Robotics Team

A bottle and can drive fundraiser to benefit the Quincy Public Schools FIRST Robotics team will be held Saturday, Feb. 12 fro 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center.

The proceeds from the event will go towards the robotics team in helping the students raise funds for their upcoming competitions.

All donations of cans and bottles are appreciated.

For more information, contact team facilitator, Ed Smith at qps.hyper.robotics@gmail.com.

Koch: $25M Bond For Citywide Improvements 'Not A Wish List'

ey at the appropriate time, it costs a lot more," said Koch who, also, outlined the disastrous impact of flooding as well as the cost of not repairing buildings and streets on the city.

As examples, the booklet contained color photographs of cracked school roofing, stained ceilings in schools and at City Hall, and buckets collecting rainwater inside the Park and Recreation complex.

As for funding and bonding, Koch stated that Quincy's bond rating at Aa3 remains strong, "Of the ten largest cities in the state, Quincy has the fourth highest bond rating...."

The mayor's Capital Improvement Plan details 16 projects ranging from $10 million needed for flood relief projects to $1.6 million for equipment purchases and rated each as 'Urgent,' 'Necessary,' or 'Desirable.' All but the equipment purchases were deemed urgent.

In addition, the plan outlines the city's debt service on a 20-year bond for $25,485,000 as well as potential sources for payments of the bond debt, such as the Hotel Motel tax, the sewer rehabilitation fund and the Comcast revenue account.

"In order to ensure affordability, the CIP will be funded through a variety of sources, all designed to reduce the impact on local property taxes. These include: debt financing, grants, state revolving loans, and revenue offset," according to the plan statement which sketches other revenue sources. "One-time revenue is an excellent funding source for capital projects."

If fully bonded, the CIP's debt analysis chart indicates the city would pay $17,200 in 2012 and 2013 and then 12 peak years of over $1 million dollars on a 20-year bond, provided the city negotiated a 5.5% interest rate.

Koch asserted that the CIP investments will save the city money in the long run and cited, as an example, the proposed $1.5 million overhaul of Coddington Hall.

According to Koch's plan, the renovated Coddington Hall would be used for school administration and, thus, save the city the current monthly lease payments for administrative offices on Burgin Parkway.

(At this time, the school department leases office space on Burgin Parkway for approximately $24,000 a month, according to City Auditor Sue O'Connor whose records show total lease payments of $290,000 in fiscal year 2010 and $193,333 to date this fiscal year for the office space.)

Of the $25.4 million, $10 million would be earmarked for drainage projects, $5 million each for building repairs and equipment, $3.5 million for streets and sidewalks and $305,000 for environmental projects.

The breakdown of what the bond will pay for is listed at the right.

The $25 Million Capital Improvement Bond
THE BREAKDOWN:

SCHOOLS:

- $2.3 million in school roofs repairs and replacements at 16 schools.
- $1.5 million to renovate the Coddington School to house school administrative offices to eliminate rental of NAGE building.

CITY BUILDINGS:

$675,000 for roof repairs at old City Hall and Park Department headquarters and HVAC upgrades at the Department of Public Works.

EQUIPMENT:

$750,000 for a Fire Department ladder truck
$45,000 for a Fire Department incident command vehicle
$135,000 for a bucket truck in the traffic department
$750,000 for a new Public Safety Communications system and a GIS integration system for assessor's department.

FLOOD-RELIEF

- $5.8 million to begin to address Furnace Brook flooding issues. Streets affected include Sheldon, Ballou, Stedman, Alrick, Joyce, Miller, Cross and Furnace Avenue.
- $1.2 million for to repair Broad Street tide gate.
- $2.1 million for drainage improvements in Sagamore Creek/North Quincy area, including Fayette, Farrington streets, Teal Field, Atlantic Middle School area, Arlington, Brook, Belmont, Hobart and Burgess streets.
- $350,000 for Sachem Street Tide Control Street system
- $730,000 for Circuit Road/Spence Avenue
- $150,000 For Division Street pump station repairs

SEA WALL REPAIRS

- $4.5 million in repairs to Edgewater Drive
- $500,000 to assess all other city-owned sea walls.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION

- $3.5 million for road and sidewalk projects citywide.

Movie Shoot At Old QHS To Benefit Music Program

Mark Carey, the head of the Chamber Of Commerce's Quincy Film Bureau, said he is working closely with the production company in an effort to maximize the film's economic impact on Quincy.

Quincy was one of the first cities in Massachusetts to create a dedicated film office, which Carey said is now bearing fruit.

"For an industry that flies in and out of any given city over a very short period of time – maybe a couple of months at most – the impact on restaurants, hotels, real estate and other indicators can be huge," Carey said. "We're doing everything we can to make sure those dollars are spent right here in Quincy."

Columbia Pictures has not disclosed details about the movie, but industry websites have reported that James, star of the sitcom "King of Queens" and the hit comedy "Paul Blart: Mall Cop" will play a teacher who joins the UFC fighting circuit in the hopes of raising money to save his school's music program.

KEVIN JAMES

"We've heard the plot involves a teacher raising money to protect school music programs, so we've decided to allocate the money to our own music program in the spirit of the film," Koch said.

More Data Sought On $9M Bond For Central; Special City Council Meeting Monday

Councillor Michael McFarland chaired the three-hour joint committee meeting.

Councillors asked that the city's bond council and Director of Municipal Finance be present for questions, and that officials provide details on potential hazardous waste at the proposed Central School location, as well as plans to remediate Sterling School.

Prior to the committee discussion, City Solicitor Jim Timmins and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro provided details on the purchase of four properties for a new Central Middle School site, the state's School Building Administration's deadlines, the school system's projected enrollment and long-term plans for all buildings.

Timmins said that March 30 is the date Mayor Thomas Koch plans to meet with members of the state's School Building Administration (SBA).

If the city's plan is finalized by that date, "We'd be able to begin construction this year," said Timmins, citing the crucial deadlines on the project which will be developed under the SBA's Model School Project.

"The SBA is looking for current projects at the middle school level," said Timmins who said the state's share of the costs could be as high as 75% and that may include site preparation.

"We started at 68%. We are at 73% and there's a possibility we could go two percent higher," Timmins said of the state's reimbursement of the $40 million plus building cost. The state will not reimburse the city for the property purchase costs, but could pay for building demolition as part of site preparation.

However, the city has to purchase the properties first, according to Timmins who urged councillors to act at Monday's meeting, stating that they'd had over three weeks to study the issue and contact him.

Councillors responded that they wanted the questions answered in public.

Under the current plan, the $9M bond would be earmarked for the purchase of the former school, convent and community hall properties at St. Ann's Church as well as two houses on Hancock Street and a property owned by Eastern Nazarene College.

Timmins said purchase and sale agreements have been executed on all properties except the Eastern Nazarene College property which should clear this week. Lori's Coffee Shop is located on the Eastern Nazarene property.

The purchase prices for the four properties range from $4 million for St. Ann's to $320,000 for one of the two single family homes on Hancock Street. The second home houses a doctor's office and is priced at $380,000.

The college property is set at almost $2.6 million but will, also, require relocation payments as will the Hancock Street property, according to Timmins who said that relocation payouts are still being negotiated.

As for the $1.5 million balance, that could be used for demolition of the St. Ann's buildings, according to Timmins who acknowledged more funds may be needed to prepare the site.

While Timmins focused on plans for a new Central Middle School, DeCristofaro outlined the school system's master plan developed in 1997 and enrollment projections.

"Central has been on the radar screen for a long, long time," DeCristofaro said of the century-old building on Hancock Street. "This fits into the short-term and long-term plans for the Quincy Public Schools."

DeCristofaro provided enrollment statistics indicating that the Quincy school enrollment in the past, the present and the future predictions always hovers around 9,000 students.

"We are an incredibly stable school population," said DeCristofaro who said that planners expected a major bump in enrollment with the completion of the HighPoint project in West Quincy but that never materialized.

Councillors Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2; Doug Gutro, Ward 5; and Joseph Finn said they were not prepared to vote on the bond Monday.

"I didn't expect we'd be asked to vote on a $9 million project the first time....." said Raymondi while Finn said, "What really bothers me is a vote is expected this evening."

Finn said such a vote would lack "even the appearance of due diligence. I don't see that to be the function of this body, that we're kind of rubber-stamping."

Gutro and Finn said they wanted more information on possible hazardous issues at the proposed site and the potential clean-up costs while Raymondi focused on the needs of Sterling Middle School.

"I'm hopeful it's not as heavily contaminated as (found elsewhere)," said Gutro who added, "This could be a wild card in the schedule. This could be a wild card in the cost."

"We have not found that concern," responded Timmins, adding, "I'm not saying the $1.5 million (balance) is going to cover it all."

Gutro also questioned whether the new school building would offer the same community opportunities currently available through St. Ann's parish.

DeCristofaro assured Gutro that other schools are used for community groups.

"My concern is that Sterling continues to be lost in this matter," said Raymondi who repeatedly sought information on Sterling Middle School for his constituents.

Raymondi detailed the history of the city's school building project, noting that Sterling was originally first on the list ahead of the Central Middle School project.

"It's decades later and nothing has been done about Sterling," said Raymondi who said it isn't even handicapped accessible.

The Sterling Middle School is actually in Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci's ward but he appeared ready to approve the bond, stating he'd gotten the necessary information.

"Central is on the table tonight," said Palmucci.

Both Councillor Brian McNamee, Ward 6 and Senator John Keenan called the current Central Middle School plan "a unique opportunity."

Local Legislators Eye Governor's Cuts In Aid

Keenan's criticism of the budget's premise that everyone should be penalized.

In a formal statement, Ayers said, "The City of Quincy has been proactive in working with its municipal unions in addressing their health care costs by joining the GIC, therefore, in fairness they should be held harmless from Governor Patrick's plan. Quincy should not be penalized for their leadership and fiscal responsibility on this issue. This point was made clear to Secretary Gonzalez."

Ayers referred to efforts to contact Patrick's Secretary of Administration and Finance, Jay Gonzalez.

House Majority Leader Mariano also signed the letter and outlined all the difficult choices ahead in his comment, "As we enter the Fiscal Year 2012 budget cycle, we are faced with particularly difficult choices at the state level."

Mariano continued, "We must address a deficit of over $1.5 billion while striving to maintain services and protect local aid as much as possible, understanding that each municipality is facing a similar set of difficult choices. As a delegation, we will work to maintain funding for Quincy through Chapter 70 education funds as well as general local aid."

Council Approves $500,000 In Transfers for City Services

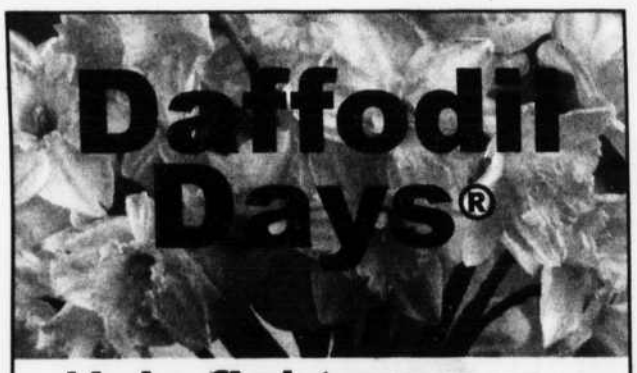
City councillors Monday approved over $500,000 in transfers which will cover the purchase of police vehicles, and drain improvements as follows:

The council unanimously approved a $300,000 transfer to the police department for the purchase of police vehicles and cruisers from the city's Free Cash account.

Also approved as transfers from Free Cash were two payments: $30,000 for the Planning Department's Fuel Assistance and $942 for Public Works expense payments.

Councillors appropriated $157,000 from the Sewer Rehabilitation fund for drain work and an additional $50,000 for drain improvements from the Highway Personnel Services account.

Councillors referred the following additional requests to the Finance and Public Works Committees for additional review.



These included requests for $645,350 from the Sewer Enterprise Free Cash Fund to Sewer Contractual; $185,000 for Sewer Capital expenditures from the Sewer Enterprise Free Cash.

In addition, Mayor Thomas Koch and DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville requested a $1.7 million appropriation for engineering and construction of sewer system improvements which would be charged to the city's MWRA Loan Agreement.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Alcohol And Fire

Here's a subject to consider, one that firefighters frequently experience during late evening and early morning incidents, the impact of alcohol use and the increase risk of fire.

Statistics indicate that alcohol intoxication may increase the risk of starting a fire by impairing an individual's judgment and coordination. A smoker for instance, under the influence of alcohol, is more susceptible to falling asleep and dropping a lit cigarette onto upholstery or clothing. Cooking is frequently left unattended when those impaired by alcohol forget their prior efforts in the kitchen and either leave the premise or head off to sleep in another room.

The effects of alcohol may impair an individual's sense of smell and retard one's perception of smoke, or impair an individual's ability to hear an alarm delaying their response to a fire incident. Escaping from a fire can be hampered by the loss of motor coordination and mental clarity.

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, alcohol use and the resulting impairment may be the strongest independent factor for death from fire. One study concluded that intoxication contributed to an estimated 40% of deaths due to fire within residences. Alcohol alters one's cognitive, physiological and motor functions increasing the chance of starting a fire, while reducing the chance of survival during a fire.

Men have been found to consistently outnumber women among fire casualties; this disparity increases for men under the influence of alcohol as well. Drinking behaviors that are characteristic of each gender and various age groups may explain these findings.

It has been suggested that alcohol-related injuries have more to do with drinking patterns rather than the total amount of alcohol consumed. Who drinks, where they drink, what they drink and under what social and cultural circumstances they drink under are perhaps more significant factors than the amount of alcohol consumed by an individual.

For instance, a lone drinker at home is probably at a greater risk of fire than a group drinking in a bar or restaurant. The number of drinks consumed in a sitting seems to matter a great deal as well.

In another study, alcohol related deaths begin increasing at 4 p.m. and peak at 5 a.m. Fatalities are relatively constant throughout the year, 70% of these fatalities occur between the ages of 25 and 54 years of age.

Locally, we so often witness the effect of alcohol on fire incidents. They do tend to occur in the evening and early morning hours. Unattended cooking and careless disposal of smoking materials seems to dominate the cause of these incidents. Therefore kindly drink responsibly, and please keep in mind that as studies indicate, alcohol can be a contributing factor in impairing judgment, the consequences of which can lead to residential fire incidents.

Be safe!

Keating Named To Three Influential Committees

Rep. Bill Keating, the newest Member of Massachusetts' Congressional delegation, has been named to three prominent House Committees for the 112th Congress.

Keating has been appointed to the House's Small Business, Homeland Security and Foreign Affairs Committees. Keating said the committee assignments will allow him to work directly on many of the priorities which will serve as the cornerstones of his domestic and national portfolio.

"Our top priority must be creating jobs," Keating said. "For the 15 years prior to the start of our current recession, small businesses created approximately 64 percent of the new jobs in this country. We need to recreate an environment where that is once again possible, and we can do that by creating tax incentives and making smart investments in areas such as clean energy. The local businesses on Massachusetts' South Shore and Cape are an integral part of the fabric of our community, and I will fight on the Small Business Committee to make sure they are flourishing once again."

Keating also said "Our national security and foreign affairs policies cannot be ignored while we try to combat the recession. And even though it has been almost a decade since the September 11th attacks, we must be mindful that America remains the primary target for many terrorist organizations who wish to destroy democracy and our way of life.

"The House's Homeland Security and Foreign Affairs Committees will provide me with an opportunity to oversee matters offending our personal and nation security while exploring better ways to protect our country moving forward."

The House Small Business Committee has jurisdiction over matters relating to small business regulation and federal funding. It also oversees the Small Business Administration, which provides loans, counseling and other assistance to small business owners throughout the country.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs has jurisdiction over foreign policy and assistance, USAID, national security developments affecting foreign policy, the enforcement of international agreements and sanctions and arms control issues. It also oversees the safety of our brave men and women serving overseas.

The House Committee on Homeland Security was established in 2002 to oversee our domestic security and protect our country against acts of terror. During his tenure as Norfolk County District Attorney, Rep. Keating became particularly interested in airport security, which falls under the Committee's purview.

One of his final cases as DA was to investigate the death of Delvonte Tisdale, a teenage boy from North Carolina who was able to breach the security of North Carolina's Charlotte-Douglas International Airport and stow away on a flight to Boston's Logan Airport.

Rep. Keating has been a prominent voice speaking out about this serious lapse in safety and the necessary changes to our airport security practices. On Jan. 7, he sent a letter to the Committee's Chairman and Ranking Member requesting a hearing to explore "the threat posed by breaches of tarmac and other instances of aviation insecurity."

Cong. Keating has been named to the Cybersecurity, Infrastructure Protection and Security Technologies Subcommittee of the Homeland Security Committee. He has not yet received subcommittee assignments for the Small Business and Foreign Affairs Committees.

Houghs Neck Celebrating 375th Anniversary

By JOE REARDON

A dinner dance, picnic, parade and concert are just a few of the festive highlights planned in the coming months in celebration of the 375th anniversary of Houghs Neck.

Houghs Neck, or "The Neck" as locals refer to it, gets its name from Atherton Hough, who was responsible for granting the land as a farm and orchard in 1636. The peninsula was once referred to as the flounder capital of the world. At one point the area hosted six boat rental businesses that were molded toward catching winter flounder that flourished in Boston Harbor.

Tom Timcoe, a member of the Houghs Neck Community Council, moved to the Neck from South Boston when he was 14 and it has been home ever since.

"It's a close-knit community," Timcoe said. "Everybody knows everyone and the people are very friendly. It sounds like a cliché, but it's a great place to bring up kids."

Plans for the coming months are numerous and geared towards Houghs Neck residents of all ages. The council has several meetings planned to discuss the events and nail down specific dates. Groundwork is being laid for a scavenger hunt for kids and their families, a tollbooth fundraiser on Sea Street and possibly a 50s sock hop dinner-dance at the Quincy Yacht Club. The birthday celebration will culminate sometime in July with a daylong event that will include a parade down Sea Street, a picnic and a "Rock The Neck" concert featuring numerous bands.

"These are still in the works and we don't have a date yet," said Timcoe. "We're trying to make sure we don't plan events that conflict with events by other organizations."

The first event was an enormous success drawing well over 300 people. A birthday anniversary celebration at the Saint Thomas Aquinas hall had 15 booths with local businesses advertising their specialties.

Mayor Thomas Koch presented a plaque recognizing the anniversary of the tight-knit neighborhood and declared Jan. 30 as "Houghs Neck Day" across the city.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley, a past president of the Houghs Neck Community Council, was presented with a large sheet cake from Fratelli's Pastry Shop for his years of service.

"We were pleased with the crowd," Timcoe said. "We had about 300 people. It was a nice response for Sunday afternoon."

300 Business Owners, State And City Officials Attend Party, Meeting At Quincy Marriott

Quincy Chamber Of Commerce Marks 1st Anniversary

Over 300 business owners and state and city officials recently came out to enjoy an evening of food, networking and fun at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce First Anniversary Party and Annual Meeting.

The event, held at the Boston Marriot Quincy, marked the first year of the new organization that was formed as a partnership between Quincy 2000 Collaborative and Discover Quincy.

"The past year has been fantastic," said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Chamber. "It's clear from the positive response we've received that combining our efforts and energies under the Quincy Chamber name has allowed us to provide better services and programs to the business and tourist communities."

State Representatives Bruce Ayers of Quincy and James Murphy of Weymouth were on hand to present the Quincy Chamber with a citation from the House of Representatives "in recognition of (your) one year anniversary and your dedication and commitment to furthering the interests of our business community."

In addition to the networking aspect of the evening, the event also included a business showcase with over 40 different Quincy Chamber businesses represented. It was a great opportunity for members to learn about each other's business and to generate business contacts and new customers.

The Quincy Chamber staff is represented by Dean Rizzo, Mark Carey, Donna Mavromates, and Maralin Manning.

Serving as the board of directors are Chairman Ed Keohane, First Vice Chairman Michael McGurl, Second Vice Chairman Sean Galvin, Secretary Dolly DiPesa, David Cesario, Executive At-Large, and Edward Fleming, Executive At-Large; Peter Racicot, Board Member At-Large, and Bruce Wood, Board Member At-Large.

The event was sponsored by many prominent organizations, including Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, Boston Marriott Quincy, The Patriot Ledger, National Park Services, Street-Works Development, and Wessling Architects.

For more information, visit www.thequincychamber.com or call (617) 471-1700.

'The Prioress's Tale' At Library Saturday

A Jewish man, a Christian woman, and a mideval priest are brought together by the tragic murder of a little boy – but this miraculous song proves the ultimate power of forgiveness to heal the wounds of religious tolerance.

Experience the story in dramatic musical form Saturday, Feb. 12 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

"The Prioress's Tale", a new opera by Quincy composer Delvyn Case and librettist Christopher Hood, radically transforms Geoffrey Chaucer's infamous tale of religious violence into a parable about how bigotry can be overcome by the realization of the common human experiences that unite us all. A complex and powerful work, "The Prioress's Tale" is a moving musical testament to the possibility of reconciliation between all those whose differences seem insurmountable.

The 75-minute, one-act work is scored for four singers (treble, soprano, and two bass-baritones), piano, and electronic sound, and will be performed in full costume, followed by a short discussion about the issues raised by the opera. The event is suitable for adults as well as students over the age of 13.

The performance is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Quincy Medical Center Staff Adapts To Wicked Winter Weather

Quincy Medical Center staff pitched in to handle increased numbers in the Emergency Room, service the center's patients, and help each other during the recent bout of winter storms, according to Sandra McGunigle, the Center's interim director of Public Relations and Marketing.

Medical emergencies generally increase right after a storm when the Emergency Room aids more victims of slips and falls, motor vehicle accidents and injuries from snow blowers, said McGunigle.

McGunigle also quoted a report from Dr. Rob Dart, chief of Emergency Medicine, who attributed a recent increase in patients with mental stress, respiratory problems and cardiac arrests likely due to the January weather.

"In recent weeks, we have seen more patients with depression, anxiety issues probably related to being cooped up indoors, more respiratory infections (pneumonia, bronchitis), also probably related to being cooped up indoors, and an increase in cardiac arrests, possibly related to shoveling."

McGunigle said the staff often adjusts surgery schedules during such dangerous weather.

"Related to ambulatory and elective surgical procedures, we are and have been rescheduling cases, whenever possible, during snow emergencies."

"Overall staff have been wonderful throughout this challenging snow season," said Karen Conley, senior vice president of Patient Care Services and Chief Nursing officer.

Conley said the staff members make adjustments to help each other which, subsequently, helps the center's patients.

As examples, Conley said that staff who live near the center often offer to work a shift for those who live further away; others offer rides to colleagues whose vehicles can't handle the snow volume.

Conley said some staffers call the next shift and volunteer to work late so that their replacements can complete shoveling at home.

In fact, during emergencies, it's door-to-door service for Quincy Medical Center's phlebotomy team, according to McGunigle.

Chris Norton, Laboratory outreach manager, picks each member of the phlebotomy team up at home in his four-wheel drive and takes them to the local nursing homes which are dependent on their services.

McGunigle said she does not have exact statistics, but the center is ready even for more storms this year.

New Antenna On Ricciuti Dr. Subject Of Feb. 17 Meeting

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting to discuss AT&T's application for a special permit to install three panel antenna at 171R/193 Ricciuti Dr.

The meeting will be held Thursday, Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to participate.

Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

AT&T seeks to install three new panel antenna on the large 192-foot antenna structure that current exists. The request, if allowed, would not add any additional height to the tower that currently looms over West Quincy, Palmucci said.

The work is part of the wireless communication industry's upgrade from 3G to 4G service for the area.

Residents with questions about this subject or any other matter can call Palmucci at 617-834-3945.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Feb. 2, at approximately 2:07 p.m., Officers Mike Brandolini and Mike Powers were dispatched to the area of Quincy Medical Center on Whitwell Street for "a man down in the snow bank." Upon arrival, the Officers were flagged down by a group of people who had been passing by and stopped to help.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Brandolini observed a young male to be unconscious and not breathing. His skin was blue in color. The officers asked the group if anyone knew the male as they prepared oxygen for the victim. No one could provide any information other than finding him lying motionless in the snow bank.

Dispatcher/Officer James Menz reported that an unidentified male called the station to report the male in the snow bank, possibly not breathing. That unidentified male called the Quincy Police and Dispatch had the number locked in. Officer Menz reported that the caller sounded impaired. Since there was no knowledge of the victim's condition, Officer Brandolini immediately administered a dose of Narcan, a drug used to prevent or reverse the effects of opioids on the respiratory system.

Fallon ambulance EMTs arrived on scene and began life saving procedures. The victim quickly responded to the Narcan and regained consciousness. Fallon EMTs found some mail located in the pocket of the victim and then Communications matched additional information. The victim, a 32-year-old Canton resident, was transported to Quincy Medical Center for treatment.

Once stable at QMC, Officer Powers questioned the victim as to what happened. The victim admitted he was using heroin. He stated that he did not know what had happened. Based on available information, it appears that the reporting male, who had called QPD, removed the victim from his vehicle after he overdosed. The victim refused to name the driver or where he got the heroin from. No drugs were found on the victim, however, four outstanding warrants from the local courts were found. After being treated at QMC, the victim/suspect was released from the hospital and transported to the police station for booking. In this case, special training to Quincy Police Officers in the use of Narcan saved the victim's life.

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Sunday, Jan. 30, 2011, at approximately 8 p.m., Officer Harry Breen arrived at Stop N' Shop for his detail, when a Loss Prevention Detective said that he observed a female customer take beer from the store shelf and then walk into the lady's room. After a female employee confirmed that the suspect was in a stall, the Detective and Officer Breen entered the ladies room.

They immediately noticed a 40 oz. bottle of Colt 45 Malt Liquor on the floor by her feet. After numerous requests to come out of the stall, Officer Breen forced the door open.

The female appeared to be very intoxicated and was uncooperative. On the floor was two empty 40 oz. bottles. The store Detective told Officer Breen that the suspect had been caught several times in the past doing the same thing.

Officer Breen placed the suspect, a 57 year old homeless woman, under arrest for "Shoplifting" and then contacted Police Communications for transport.

Nice Work!

AFTERCARE

Post surgical care is critical for anyone who has had foot surgery. Proper aftercare helps ensure fewer complications and a more rapid recovery. Discuss with your podiatrist the regimen he or she suggests for your recovery. If you are prescribed a surgical shoe, put it on whenever you walk. Do not allow your foot to dangle, and try to keep your foot elevated to reduce pressure. If a walker or cane is recommended, don't be shy about using one. Ice the area for the first few days post surgery. Doing so will help decrease swelling and bruising. Bandages should be kept clean and dry. If anything seems "off" about your recovery, be sure to alert your podiatrist.

If surgery is called for in your case, we're sure you'll be happy to hear that today's procedures make the process easier and smoother, usually with less recover time. And, as always, good post-operative results require proper foot care and support to prevent future problems. We follow all surgeries with complete instructions for home care. If your feet are bothering you, we suggest a call to our office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Avoidance of distance walking is advised after most types of foot surgery.

Be Vigilant Of The Threat Of Roof Collapses, Governor Urges Residents

Gov. Deval Patrick urges residents across the Commonwealth to be vigilant of the threat posed by potential roof collapses following several days of snow and freezing rain that has accumulated.

Gov. Patrick has also directed the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) to take immediate steps to work with the Small Business Administration to determine eligibility for a Small Business Administration physical disaster declaration or economic injury declaration as a result of damage to numerous homes and businesses.

"Following several days of snow and freezing rain, the dangers of roof collapse are real," Patrick said.

"I am urging homeowners, businesses owners, and public officials across the state to be extra vigilant for their own safety, and for the structural integrities of their homes and businesses. If you suspect that there are any abnormalities whatsoever in a building that you occupy, you should evacuate immediately and call 911.

"Please take the extra time and care to check on elderly or infirmed neighbors and make sure they have what they need to stay safe."

The Massachusetts Department of Public Safety, MEMA, the state Fire Marshal and others are coordinating closely with public safety officials in cities and towns across the Commonwealth to ensure that they have the support they need to respond to collapses and protect the safety of their residents.

MEMA recommends that homeowners, tenants, and businesses make themselves aware of the danger posed by heavy snow loads on roofs, and the warning signs of potential structural weaknesses. In some instances, the risks posed by accumulated snow on roofs can be mitigated by safely removing snow from roofs. Because temperatures are expected to remain cold for at least the next few days, and more snow may fall as early as this weekend, efforts should be undertaken now to safely remove snow from roofs.

Removing snow from rooftops will minimize the likelihood of structural collapse, but should be undertaken with extreme caution, and preferably with the assistance of trained professionals. In particular, flat and low pitched roofs, most often found on industrial buildings but also used in certain home designs, are at the greatest risk of buckling under heavy snow and ice accumulations.

The State Fire Marshal also recommends that homeowners take extra precautions to reduce the risk of carbon monoxide issues in their households, and should clear snow from vents.

BBB: Rooftop Snow Removal

The most important advice BBB can provide regarding removing snow from the roof is: Make sure the person doing the work has insurance.

Just like you would do when you hire a roofer. But in this case, the possibility of someone falling off your roof is even greater, because of ice and snow. So protect yourself.

Ask to see copies of the contractor's liability coverage and documentation to ensure coverage is available before the snow removal starts. The risks involved of hiring a contractor without insurance is a recipe for disaster – do not tempt fate.

Hiring A Snow Removal Contractor

If you plan on hiring a snow removal contractor instead of shoveling yourself, Better Business Bureau recommends the following:

• Get several estimates. Prices can vary widely and are usually based on the amount of work involved in clearing your property.

• Remember that the least expensive estimate is not always the best choice.

• Ask the contractor about additional charges and price options. Beside the quoted price, there may be some additional charges during large storms.

After the snow reaches a certain depth, some snow removal contractors charge by the inch, so you'll want to find out how the company calculates these charges. Other contractors may offer a fixed price for an entire season, regardless of the amount of snow (or lack of snow).

• Make sure that you are aware of which services you are getting.

• Find out exactly what is included in the estimate.

• Are the walks and steps included?

• What about the cost of sand and/or salt?

• Will the company clear only after the storm, or during the snowfall as well?

• If the contractor has to come back more than once during the same storm, is there an additional charge?

• Ask for references, and check them out.

Check with the Better Business Bureau for a BBB Business Review on a contractor you are planning on hiring @ bbb.org.

• Do not agree to the terms of the contract over the telephone.

• The contractor should provide you with a written agreement.

• Before signing the agreement, find out who is responsible for damages such as cracked driveways or broken gates.

• Your expectations of your snow removal contractor should be realistic. Keep in mind that a snowstorm makes traveling difficult for you and the contractor. During major snowstorms, it may take longer for the contractor to reach you and perform the contracted work.

Boys' Team Finished Ninth; Taryn Urbanus Repeats As League Diving Champion

Quincy/North Quincy Girls Take Third At Patriot League Championships

The Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team finished third overall in last weekend's Patriot League Swimming and Diving Championships held, over two days, in Middleboro.

The girls' team ended their regular season schedule with six consecutive wins to finish at an impressive 8-3 overall and completing an exciting turnaround campaign. The program has quickly grown into one of the deepest in memory.

Some of the highlights for the girls' program include junior captain Taryn Urbanus winning the Patriot League Diving Championship, held on Feb. 4, for a second consecutive year and swimmers Hillary Wong, Olivia Goldson, McKayla Johnston and Kendra Johnston all qualifying for the upcoming state finals to be held Feb. 19-20.

The Quincy/North Quincy boys' team finished their year at 2-9 overall and took ninth-place overall at the Patriot League Championships.

Taryn Urbanus Wins PL Diving Championship

Q/NQ Girls – Patriot League Championships

Q/NQ placed in the top-six of eight events to finish third with 158 points at the PL Swimming and Diving Championships held on Feb. 5 in Middleboro; Duxbury HS won with a grand total of 430 points followed by Hanover HS with 248 points.

Q/NQ's strongest showing came in the 50-yard freestyle where three swimmers finished in the top-eight. Junior Olivia Goldson recorded a season-low time of 26.93 that qualified her for states and also established a new program record placing her third in that event. Senior Hillary Wong swam a season best 27.51 for sixth followed by sophomore Kat O'Connor who placed eighth (28.00).

In twice the distance, Goldson clocked 1:00.35, qualifying her for the South Sectionals and fifth place overall while Kat O'Connor took seventh (1:01.87). The 400-yard freestyle relay unit of O'Connor, Goldson, Wong and freshman McKayla Johnston finished second overall with a time of 4:04.58.

Individually, McKayla Johnston earned a silver medal in the 200-yard freestyle, swimming 2:08.43 and followed up that performance with a fourth place finish in the 100-yard butterfly (1:06.35). Johnston has already met the qualifying times to compete in those two events at states to be held Feb. 19-20.

Junior Jessica O'Donovan earned sixth place in the 100-yard breaststroke swimming 1:22.16.

For a second consecutive year, Quincy/North Quincy junior captain Taryn Urbanus won the PL Diving Championships, held Feb. 4, in Middleboro.

Urbanus set a new school record amassing 436.85 points in the 11-dive format. In her championship performance last year as a sophomore she accumulated 376.80 points.

Q/NQ Boys – Patriot League Championships

The boys' team finished ninth overall at the PL Championships.

Q/NQ placed three swimmers in the 200-yard freestyle's top-20 including freshman Elio Daci who was sixth (2:12.69); seniors Tom Nigl and captain Austin Rowe swam 2:35.62 and 2:48.88 for 15th and 20th, respectively.

In half the distance, Daci placed 14th (1:01.72) followed by senior captain James Lee in 19th (1:04.72). Lee also was 12th in the 50-yard freestyle.

Another strong showing came in the 100-yard backstroke where Austin Rowe (1:30.44), Jack Fisher (1:36.14) and Chaz Waterman (1:43.80) were 16th, 17th and 20th, respectively.

Nigl also placed 13th in the 500-yard freestyle, swimming a season best time of 7:38.20.

Q/NQ Girls – Scituate & Cohasset

The girls' team won its sixth consecutive meet, this time defeating Scituate HS, 52-32, and Cohasset HS, 52-36, in a tri-meet, held Feb. 3 at the Lincoln Hancock Pool in Quincy.

Against Scituate, Q/NQ prevailed in all but one event while the hosts also accumulated victories in nine of 11 events over Cohasset. Q/NQ avenged two losses to the visitors a year ago when Cohasset won a 53-40 contest and Scituate earned a 51-42 win.

Senior Hillary Wong qualified for the South Sectionals with her meet-winning time of 59.72 in the 100-yard freestyle. She led off Q/NQ's top 200-yard medley relay and in dramatic fashion in the third leg of the 200-yard freestyle relay, Wong erased a body length deficit in the final 20 yards to give Q/NQ a lead it would not surrender.

Freshman McKayla Johnston topped the field in the 200-yard freestyle (2:10.00) and 100-yard backstroke (1:08.03).

Q/NQ Boys – Scituate & Cohasset

The boys' team downed Cohasset HS, 49-34, but fell to Scituate HS, 60-40.

Entering the sixth event, the 100-yard butterfly, Q/NQ and Cohasset were tied at 15-15 but freshman Elio Daci's 1:17.06 contribution lifted the hosts by four points. Sean Lerkvikarn (1:06.03) and Cyril Caparanga (1:14.19) placed first and third in the 100-yard freestyle and despite Cohasset closing the deficit to two, Q/NQ won the final three events for a 15-point victory.

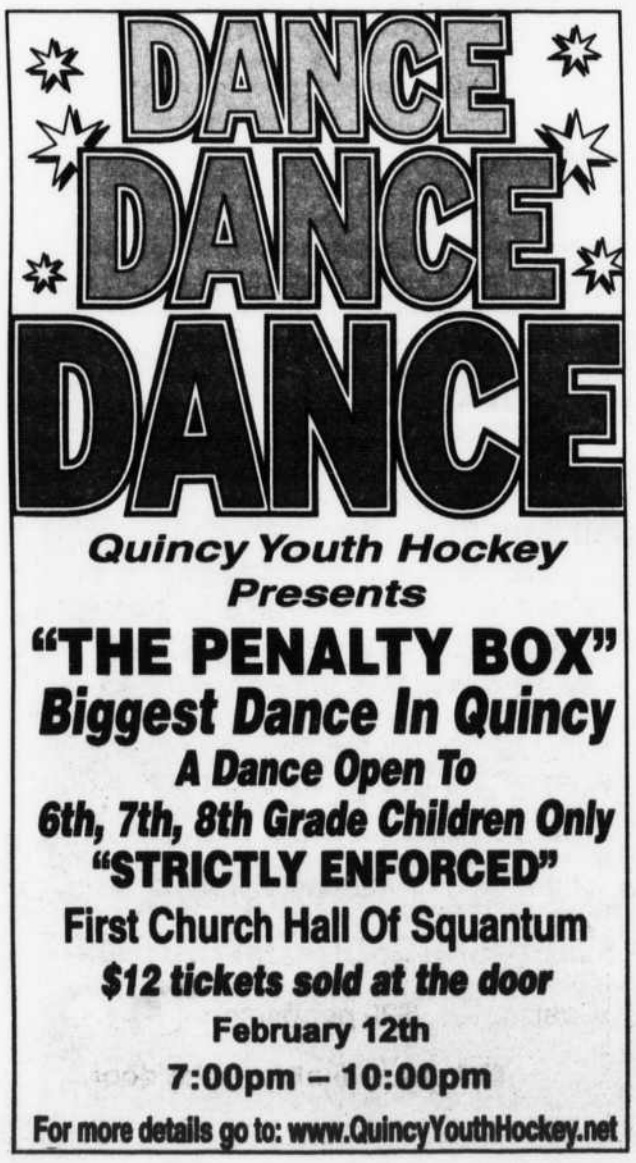
Senior captain Austin Rowe picked up the 100-yard backstroke win (1:33.13), boosted by Jack Fisher's second-place performance (1:36.43) and Sean Lerkvikarn won the 100-yard breaststroke (1:23.84) followed by third-place Lok Fong (2:01.50).

Q/NQ Girls – Cardinal Spellman

Q/NQ prevailed in the first nine events while boasting the top two times in four of those swims. The hosts jumped out to a quick ten-point lead on the heels of a 1-2-3 sweep in the 200-yard freestyle event. Freshman McKayla Johnston was first swimming 2:06.96 followed by her classmate Sarah Tran at 2:41.41 in second and junior Samantha Enbar-Salo at 2:49.00 in third. The freshman's second meet-winning performance came in the 100-yard butterfly when she swam 1:09.84.

Sophomore Kat O'Connor touched the wall first for Q/NQ in the 50-yard freestyle (27.81) and the 100-yard freestyle (1:02.47) in which her performance was bolstered by Tran's second-place finish (1:07.84).

Senior Hillary Wong proved her freestyle dexterity by winning the 500-yard freestyle (6:37.22) for Q/NQ after placing second in the 50-yard version (28.09).



Senior captain Kendra Johnston took first in the 200-yard individual medley and joined Tran, Wong and junior captain Taryn Urbanus in Q/NQ's victorious 200-yard freestyle relay (1:58.63). Urbanus also won the one-meter dive with 263.02 points.

Junior Olivia Goldson earned the meet's best time in the 100-yard back (1:13.54) and was second in the 100-yard butterfly (1:14.28).

Q/NQ Boys – Cardinal Spellman

The boys' team (1-7) fell to visiting Cardinal Spellman, 82-63, on Jan. 25.

Freshman Elio Daci won the 100-yard freestyle event (1:01.69) and was third in the 200-yard individual medley (2:40.40). His teammate, senior captain James Lee, took over second place in the final 20 yards of the 100-yard free (1:03.38), lifting Q/NQ to a one-two finish. Lee was also second in the 50-yard freestyle, swimming 27.91.

Quincy/North Quincy Girls Hockey Battling To The End

By JOE REARDON

Quincy/North Quincy has gone through its share of growing pains this winter, which isn't a bad thing, particularly when it has just two seniors on the squad and a number of aggressive youngsters eager to plant themselves in the postseason.

The team is still flawed, which is often the case for a young squad, but has been brilliant in spurts, giving head coach Dan McLean reason to believe that Q/NQ just could see action in the tournament.

"With six games left and needing to win them all puts a lot of pressure on this team," said McLean last week. "I think it's possible for this team to rise to the task."

Q/NQ played much better than the 3-0 score in its loss to a strong Canton team on Jan. 28. Q/NQ came out sluggish in the first period, but only trailed 1-0 heading into the second. Shannon Coleman kept the game close for Q/NQ with a spectacular second period between the posts, frustrating Canton's potent offense. Q/NQ wasn't able to mount much sustained offense, while the Bulldogs maintained their intensity in the third period to come away with the victory.

McLean was pleased with Q/NQ's ability to make adjustments on the fly, although there were still holes in Q/NQ's game. "I thought the girls played well," said McLean. "However, mistakes are usually the reason for a loss during a close game."

Q/NQ started slowly once again against Franklin and found themselves down 2-0 after a period. Q/NQ skated well against the high-flying Franklin team and got on the board with goals from Stephanie DiPetrio and Leah Ryan. Q/NQ wasn't able to maintain the fast pace of the contest and wound up on the short end of a 4-2 decision.

Whether or not Q/NQ qualifies for the tournament is not the most important aspect of the winter campaign. McLean has been leaning on his players to battle on every shift and to make good decisions on the ice. Q/NQ has had spurts of that type of tenacity, but they need to do it in a more consistent manner.

Q/NQ doesn't have a standout player putting up astronomical numbers, rather, several girls contributing on offense. Through 13 games, Natalie O'Donovan and Caroline Kiley led Q/NQ with nine points apiece, while Loren Miller was tops in goals with six and eight points overall.

Jackie Eleey (three goals, five assists), Kennedy Harding (four goals, four assists) Christina Walsh (three goals, four assists) and Jaimie Shaughnessy (three goals, four assists) have all had their moments on offense this season and are hoping to continue producing right into the postseason.

Over the weekend, Q/NQ defeated Boston Latin by a score of 4-2.

Correction

The name in a headline in last week's Quincy Sun sports section was incorrect.

In the story about the Quincy Presidents hockey program, the name in the headline incorrectly identified Derek Graham was the league's leading scorer with 24 goals.

The correct name should have been Derek Murphy.

The Sun regrets the error.

Important Patriot League Games Remain On Schedules; Divisional Titles Still In Play

Quincy, North Inching Toward Tournament Berths

By SEAN BRENNAN

The end of the regular season is only two weeks away, but for the boys' basketball programs at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, it seems clear, as of Feb. 8, that both teams will advance to play in the Division II and Division I South Sectional tournaments, respectively.

There is unfinished business yet to be done as neither team has officially qualified, but looking at overall records, and, the appropriate number of victories necessary for inclusion, the Presidents and Red Raiders are all but guaranteed their spots.

Quincy Presidents

Quincy (10-6 overall, 8-3 and first-place in the Patriot League's Fisher Division) needs two wins over its final six games to advance. A postseason spot is a goal, but for the Presidents, the chance to win a Patriot League Fisher Division crown is at their fingertips as well.

Two exclusionary games versus Bridgewater-Raynham HS (Dec. 19, 2010 and Jan. 30), both wins, do not count towards the ten-win tournament requirement. So, QHS needs to capture at least two victories in upcoming league games against Hanover (played Tuesday night), (nonleague) Randolph (Feb. 11), Scituate (Feb. 15) and Middleboro (Feb. 17). The annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament, held Feb. 21-22 at QHS, will give the Presidents two additional games to make their mark. This tournament includes Quincy, Milton, Southeastern Regional and Barnstable High Schools.

The Presidents enter this final six-game stretch on a little bit of a winning roll. Quincy won a huge Patriot League home game on Sunday with a 62-51 decision over Hingham HS. The 11-point victory was highlighted by some exceptional play from what has quickly become a very potent bench.

Sophomore Jaquan Harris led all Quincy scorers with 18 points including three three-pointers. Shouldering the rest of the offense was senior captain Brain Malger (14 points, six assists) and junior forward Zerick Fadairo (ten points, ten rebounds).

Juniors Jalen Green and Reggie Cesar played lockdown defense as the Presidents held the Harbormen in check.

"That was a big league win for us," said QHS head coach Dave Parry on Tuesday. "It was good to see some of our younger guys like Harris step up and play a major role. We have been doing a better job of spreading the ball around on offense and getting more guys involved. We have developed a deep bench and that only makes us stronger."

The Hanover game was Quincy's third contest in the last five days and the emergence of players such as Harris, Cesar and Green, has helped relive some of the pressure off Quincy's big guns: Brian Malger, Kevin McDonagh and Oliver O'Sullivan.

"We are in one of those stretches where we are playing three league games (Pembroke, Hingham, Hanover) in five days," continued Parry. "So, it has been great to watch the bench step up. Like I said, a deeper bench should only make us that much better as we continue with the season."

Last Friday evening, Quincy closed out league foe Pembroke HS, 52-48, on the road. The defensive star on this night for the Presidents was senior guard Ryan Schultz. He held the Titans' James Connor, one of the league's stars, to three garbage-time points. That performance earned Schultz high praise from his coach.

"Ryan really did a solid job on defense," Parry stated. "He also contributed on the offensive end with nine points."

In addition to Schultz's nine, Fedairo continued his strong play with a ten point-ten rebound performance and O'Sullivan chipped in with eight points.

At 8-3 in the Patriot League, Quincy holds all the cards. Win out and a divisional championship will be the prize. Division title or not, the Presidents will undoubtedly finish this season much improved from their 2009 campaign. Last season QHS ended the winter at 9-10 overall and needed a five-game winning streak at the end of the year to earn a Division II preliminary round game against Pembroke, which they won 50-42 before losing in the first-round to top-seeded Whitman-Hanson, 74-49.

The opportunity for a potential division title and a Division II first-round home game is present, but, according to Parry, his team is not in any position to rest on its laurels.

"We control our destiny in the league but we still need to continue to work on our defense," he said. "Our full court defense has been exceptional but I would like to see my kids start taking more charges. We lack shot blockers so we need to do a better job keeping opposing teams from getting to the basket."

"We would love to be able to host a tournament game," continued Parry, "I am happy for the players because they have put themselves into a position to hopefully do some damage in the tournament."

NQ Red Raiders

The Red Raiders have picked the perfect stretch of games to play what head coach Kevin Barrett labeled, "a great time to play our best basketball of the season."

North Quincy (9-6 overall, 5-4 in the Patriot League's Keenan Division) has reeled off four consecutive victories, improving their record from 5-6 to 9-6 over the course of two weeks, placing themselves one win away from a spot in the Division I South Sectional tournament. On top of that accomplishment, the Red Raiders, at 5-4 in the Keenan Division, find themselves bunched together with Hingham and Whitman-Hanson just one game behind Duxbury (6-3) for a divisional championship.

The Red Raiders were set to play Whitman-Hanson on Tuesday night and have league games remaining with Silver Lake (Friday), Scituate (Saturday), Duxbury (Feb. 15) and (nonleague) Dennis-Yarmouth (Feb. 17).

"We have really played well of late," said Barrett on Tuesday. "We have been starting games fast and setting the tone, which is always our goal. Offensively we shoot the ball well in stretches, but it has been our defense, and we preach trying to hold teams to 50 points or under that has really made the difference recently."

Last Friday, North Quincy earned one of its biggest wins of the season with a tight 53-47 decision over Hingham, a team that entered the contest in first-place in the division.

Sophomore Dan Gould (13 points) scored five early points to help NQHS to a commanding 13-0 lead. The Raiders never once trailed as junior forwards Paul Cunniff (12 points) and Tim Liuzzo (eight points) along with sophomore Marquis McClendon (11 points) added additional firepower in the offensive sets.

Hingham would cut the deficit to one-point late in the fourth, but both Cunniff and Gould made money free throws in the waning seconds to seal the victory.

"That was a huge win," continued Barrett, "and what I really liked was how we stepped up and made our free throws. We preach all the time that making free throws is so important. As a team we just reached 70% on the year and against Hingham we made 19-of-20 and Paul and Dan made four clutch free throws at the end of the game. That was big."

One player who Barrett recently inserted into the starting lineup (North Quincy starts five underclassman, folks) and who has made an immediate impact on both offense and defense has been McClendon.

The athletic guard brings speed to the transitional game and he can take it to the basket with any player in the league. Only a sophomore, he has impressed during this four-game winning streak.

"Marquis is an energy guy on both ends of the floor," Barrett stated. "He has taken over the role of locking up opposing teams best players on defense and he is a spark in transition. He can get to rim. He reads defenses really well and his play has opened up our set offense."

In a nonleague game versus Our Lady of Fatima (R.I.), McClendon dropped 14 points. Junior guard Ryan Evans contributed with 14 points as the Raiders rolled 64-43.

After the W-H game on Tuesday, NQHS travels to Kingston to play at Silver Lake on Friday. North Quincy defeated the Lakers by a score of 69-52 on Jan. 4. A rescheduled league game at Scituate will be played Saturday at 6:30 p.m. That is three important Patriot League games in a span of five days. But you will not hear Barrett make any excuses about that predicament.

"Everyone in the area is in the same boat with the weather," he said. "We are playing well right now so it gives us a chance to take advantage. It is going to be a challenge but we will be prepared."

"With us right now it is one step at a time," continued Barrett. "The goal is to qualify. But we are still in the mix in the league and that will continue to be our ultimate goal moving forward."

North Quincy finished the 2009 season at 8-12 overall.

Quincy Residents Captain AWHS Swim Team

Kelsey McCarthy and Jordan McCormack, both of Quincy, have been leading the Archbishop Williams High School varsity swim team this winter as team captains.

McCarthy, a well-rounded senior student-athlete, is a member of the National Honor Society, Peer Ministry and Admissions Council at AWHS. She also was a tri-captain for the Bishops' soccer team where she was a Catholic Central League All-Star, Eastern Massachusetts All-Star and the Massachusetts All-Star for the past two years. She plans to attend Northeastern University in the fall.

McCormack has been a member of the Bishops' swim team for three years and is a member of the National Honor Society, Admissions Council and is a Boston University City Lab Scholar where she also is a Teaching Assistant. She is planning to attend Massachusetts College of Pharmacy & Health Sciences this fall.

"Kelsey and Jordan maintain a positive outlook and give an honest effort at both practices and meets," said head coach Laura McEvoy in a press release. "It is refreshing to see the novice swimmers follow their example."

SPOTLIGHT on HEALTH and FITNESS

A New Tactic In The War Against Cholesterol

(NAPSA)-There's good news for those concerned about cholesterol and their health. They may have a new way to regulate their cholesterol level that doesn't involve prescription drugs.

Cholesterol is a naturally occurring substance in the human body. It is used to make many of our hormones, vitamin D and bile acids, which aid fat digestion and keep cell membranes intact. How much you have is based on a combination of genetics and lifestyle.

However, too much LDL cholesterol-often referred to as "bad cholesterol"-can slowly build and contribute to heart disease and clogged arteries. Some will try to manage their cholesterol with diet and exercise while others will turn to prescription medications.

A New Approach

One of the latest approaches to managing cholesterol involves taking a nutritional supplement. One such supplement, called Sytrinol, is described as a safe, effective cholesterol- and triglyceride-lowering nutrient that is designed to begin working in 30 days.

The supplement is made up of a blend of powerful antioxidants including polymethoxylated flavones (PMFs) and a range of palm (alpha, delta and gamma) tocotrienols.

According to a published clinical study, Sytrinol was able to significantly lower total cholesterol, LDL and triglycerides. The formula is also said to increase HDL levels. This is often referred to as the "good cholesterol" because of the way it transports LDL cholesterol away from the heart and back into the bloodstream.

MANY PEOPLE may be able to control their cholesterol through diet and nutritional supplements, alone.

Heart-Healthy Ingredients

One of the main active ingredients in Sytrinol is a group of compounds derived from the peels of citrus fruits. The two most common are tangeretin and nobiletin, which are described as extremely potent bioflavonoids.

Another ingredient is a group of palm tocotrienols, which are members of the vitamin E family and are extracted from the fruit of the palm tree. Like vitamin E, palm tocotrienols control anti-inflammatory responses and degrade a key enzyme used by the liver to produce cholesterol.

WEIGHT LOSS IDEAS

Ingenious Ways To Shed Pounds

(NAPSA)-If you've long felt you've had a slim chance of being slender, you may be glad to know you can take a balanced approach to your health and not have to give up all the good things in life. In fact, you may have to add a few. In addition, here are some surprising facts, tips and tricks that may help:

• Don't have three meals a day – have more. Your diet schedule should include a good breakfast, three small meals (including snacks) with three hours between them and one meal at least three hours before going to bed.

• Think about what you can add to your diet, not what to remove. Set a goal to consume the recommended five to nine servings of fruits and vegetables every day.

• Spice up your food. Seasonings can enhance the taste and make you feel you've eaten more.

• Don't exclude any nutrient or vitamin from your diet. Eat all kinds of foods.

• Treat high-calorie foods as jewels in the crown. Make a spoonful of ice cream the jewel and a bowl of fruit the crown. Cut down on the chips by pairing each bite with lots of chunky, filling, fresh salsa. Balance a little cheese with a lot of salad.

• Downsize your dinner plates. Studies find that the less food put in front of you, the less you'll eat. So serve your main course on salad plates (about seven to nine inches wide). Instead of 16-ounce glasses and oversized coffee mugs, use 8-ounce glasses and 6-ounce cups.

BENEFITS OF weight loss and regular exercise include reduced stress, better sleep, healthy cholesterol and blood sugar levels, improved cardiovascular function and an overall sense of well-being.

• Serve dinner restaurant style (food on the plates) rather than family style (food served in bowls and on platters on the table). When your plate is empty, you're finished; there's no reaching for seconds.

• Serve individual courses rather than piling everything on one plate. Make the first two courses soup and salad. By the time you get to the meat and dessert, you may already be full (leftovers are a good thing).

• Close out the kitchen after dinner. Wash all the dishes, wipe down the counters, turn out the light. Late-evening eating significantly increases the overall number of calories you eat, a University of Texas study found. Stopping late-night snacking can save 300 or more calories a day, or 31 pounds a year.

• Brush your teeth after every meal, especially after dinner. That clean, minty freshness will serve as a cue to your body and brain that mealtime is over.

• Pack nutritious snacks. Snacking once or twice a day helps stave off hunger and keeps your metabolism stoked.

• Take a dietary supplement such as MonaVie RVL(tm) Dietary Supplement with your morning and afternoon snacks.

• Eat a healthy, balanced dinner consisting of 500 to 600 calories. This meal should include a variety of vegetables, fruits, lean proteins, healthy fats and complex carbohydrates.

• Participate in a minimum of 30 minutes of physical activity most-if not all-days of the week. If you have any health concerns, contact your physician prior to starting a weight-management or exercise program. This accelerates your metabolism, helps reduce body fat and, because it builds muscles, helps you burn more calories.

Psoriasis Sometimes More Than Skin Deep

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Your article on arthritis was very interesting, but you did not explain about the arthritis that comes with psoriasis. I have it, and I know of two other people who have it. We don't understand it at all. Please explain. – B.E.

ANSWER: Autoimmunity is the explanation for many illnesses, including both skin and joint psoriasis. "Autoimmunity" indicates that the immune system – our protection against germ invasion and other harmful attacks – for reasons not yet understood, turns against our own bodies; in this case, it's the skin and joints. The immune system targets joints in as many as 7 percent of those who suffer from skin psoriasis. That's a considerable number of people when you consider that as many as 3 percent of the entire population suffers from skin psoriasis.

Skin psoriasis precedes joint psoriasis most of the time, but there are instances when both occur simultaneously or when joint involvement appears before any skin manifestations.

The fact that skin and joint psoriasis run in some families also points to a gene influence on these conditions.

Any joint can be affected. The topmost finger joint, the one below the fingernail, is frequently targeted. Back, neck, knees, you name it – psoriasis can strike it. Like all arthritic joints, psoriatic arthritic joints are swollen, red, tender and stiff. The severity of joint involvement doesn't always mirror skin involvement, but it does correspond to nail changes. Nails have small pits, become loosened from their attachment to underlying skin, often turn yellow and crumble.

Treatment of psoriatic arthritis depends on how bad the arthritis is. For mild to moderate cases, NSAIDS do a good job. They include the familiar Aleve, Advil, Motrin and many others. For more severe involvement, doctors prescribe drugs like methotrexate. And for severe arthritis, a breakthrough has come with the introduction of drugs like Enbrel, Remicade and Humira.

The arthritis booklet deals with some of the more common forms of arthritis. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 301W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Public speaking panics me. My job requires that I do lots of public speaking. In spite of the fact that I am called on to perform often, it doesn't get any easier for me. In fact, I think it's gotten worse.

My sister has a similar problem. Her doctor gave her a medicine that makes her actually relish getting up and addressing a crowd. Do you know the name of the drug? – S.S.

ANSWER: I'm pretty sure it's Inderal (propranolol). It has many medical uses, like regulating the heartbeat, controlling blood pressure and abolishing certain tremors.

It also controls the signs of stage fright. Many professional musicians have to use it before their performances. It's a prescription drug, so your doctor has to agree to its use. Limit taking it to those occasions when you have to speak in public. It's not habit-forming. It's not a narcotic. It's not a tranquilizer.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

TAKING IT ON THE JAW

A serious potential consequence of periodontitis (advanced inflammation or infection of the gums) is tooth loss due to jaw-bone shrinkage and damage. The latest effort to counter this threat comes in the form of a drug called teriparatide, which has recently been proven to regrow bone in jaws. According to one study, patients with tissue damage caused by periodontitis developed nearly 10 times more bone with teriparatide treatment than those receiving daily placebo injections. The significant gains in bone produced by the drug developed over a relatively short six-week period. These improvements were sustained, and even improved upon, over a succeeding 12-month period. This jaw-growing ability may also prove useful for potential tooth implant patients, who need more foundation bone.

You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care, using the most up-to-date dental techniques and equipment. THE LINK BETWEEN OBESITY AND CHRONIC PAIN

Obesity and chronic pain are significant problems for a large percentage of the U.S. population. Research also shows that the two problems are linked in that overweight individuals are at greater risk for chronic pain. Due to the excessive weight placed on their joints, overweight and obese individuals most commonly experience low back pain and osteoarthritis. A recent study also shows that overweight and obese individuals also are more likely to experience tension-type or migraine headache, fibromyalgia, abdominal pain, and chronic widespread pain. Researchers also point out that depression plays a role in contributing to chronic pain since it leads to sedentary behavior that inhibits movement. Chiropractic treatment can help break this vicious cycle by getting overweight individuals moving again.

Obesity obviously increases the weight that the low back, hip and knee joints have to carry around, resulting in low back pain, hip and knee degeneration. But because it is a lifestyle choice it is treatable. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are dedicated to providing you with a care program designed for your age, condition, and lifestyle. Call us at 617.472.4220 and find out how chiropractic care, combined with proper diet, exercise, and other aspects of good health can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy your life to the fullest. The church is planning a dance Saturday, March 5 from 6:30 to 10 p.m. The theme of the dance – "Remember When…..Rock-N-Roll Reunion" will feature music by DJ. Bill Hedvig and a cameo rock performance by Adam McGhee and Company.

Dine a-la-carte with chef Chris Mendez on burgers, fries, pizza and shakes. Dress the era in 50's and 60's garb.

There will also be a "Make your own Poodle Skirt" workshop Saturday, Feb. 26.

Contact Joyce Romeri at 472-7446 or 617-773-6424 for tickets or information. Tickets are a $10 tax deductible donation to benefit the Access Fund.

The Access Fund was established to help the church install an elevator making their building more accessible to all.

Benefit Dinner Feb. 25 At Sacred Heart Church

The monthly dinner committee of Sacred Heart Parish, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy, will sponsor a spaghetti and meatball dinner Friday, Feb. 25 at 6 p.m. in the parish cafeteria.

Dinner features spaghetti with homemade red and white sauces, meatballs and garlic bread. Homemade dessert, coffee, tea and beverages will also be served.

Cost is $7.50 per person or $20 per family (children 12 years and younger).

A 50-50 drawing will be held during the evening.

Reservations are needed and may be made by calling Sacred Heart rectory at 617-328-8666 by Feb. 23.

Proceeds will benefit the parish's ongoing capital improvement fund projects (including new exterior doors).

For more information, contact the parish at 617-328-8666.

'Beach Blanket Bingo' At Quincy United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a "beach party" after worship Sunday, Feb. 27.

"The name 'Beach Blanket Bingo' comes from one of those Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon beach party movies," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. "So, to get into the spirit of things, everyone who comes to worship on Feb. 27 is invited to wear beach, Hawaiian style, or tropical clothes."

The church halls will be transformed into a "tropical paradise" and everyone will get a party lei.

There will be a beach "burger shack" featuring burgers, hot dogs and frappes.

There will also be "beachy" games for people of all ages.

The church is located at 40 Beale St. diagonally across from the Wollaston T. stop. It is handicapped accessible.

The public is welcome to attend. For more information, call 617-773-3319.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is difficult to believe Lincoln was but 57 when his labored breathing stopped. The bearded, tired face with the sad wistful eyes seems much older than that.

Many men have measured the fallen Lincoln. Some were hostile, some merely curious, some friendly; and the measuring goes on... Thousands of books and pamphlets have been written about him and there will be more. It is an odd, yet significant thing that almost everyone feels as if he knew Lincoln. He was a man of compassion, mercy, weakness and strength. He never found a church that he could join, yet no man who has ever been in the White House has more nearly lived the great commandments. As Carl Sandburg, his greatest biographer, once said: "The greatest memorial to him was a united nation and a love and reverence of him in America and in the family of man over the earth."

We, as a nation, we are very fortunate to have had Lincoln as our President at a very difficult time in the history of our nation.

2ND Year Anniversary for Peggy Leary

Although you hid your suffering
It made the Lord so sad
He gently took you home with him.
He wanted you so bad!

Our precious wife and mother has been gone from us a year.
We miss you with every heartbeat and have shed so many tears.

We've needed you a million times.
We've longed to see your face.
As difficult as it is for us--
You're in a better place!

A piece of us went with you mom.
Our lives are not the same.
Our world was changed forever.
The day God called your name.

Missed and loved so much by Jack, Jackie, Eddie, Meg, Tricia,
Family and friends

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) St. Valentine's Day magic rules the entire week for romantic Rams and Ewes. Music, which is the food of love, is also strong. The weekend offers news both unexpected and anticipated.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your aspects favor the arts -- which the Divine Bovine loves, loves, loves. Also, for those looking for romantic love, Cupid is available for requests. After all, his mother, Venus, rules your sign.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Loving commitments continue to grow stronger. Ditto budding relationships. A recent move to help start up a new career-linked direction could soon begin to show signs of progress.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Single Moon Children might be eager to take that proverbial chance on love. But your more serious side will feel better if you take things slowly and give your moonstruck self more time.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a love fest for Leos and Leonas this week. Paired Cats might expect to be purr-fectly in sync. And with matchmaking friends, single Simbas searching for romance shouldn't have too far to look.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) More understanding on both sides can work miracles in restoring ailing relationships to health. Make the first move, and you'll be closer to your much-wanted reunion.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Accept the fact that you are worthy of being loved, and you'll find proof in what is revealed to you over the course of the week. Also accept a compliment offered with great sincerity.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Planning to take a new direction in life is exciting. And so is a new awareness of someone's special affection. Expect a slow and mostly steady development of the situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although you might still feel you weren't treated quite right in a recent matter, all that will work out in time. Meanwhile, enjoy the week's special qualities and potentials.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deciding not to give up on a troubling romantic situation helps start the healing process. Expect to find some valuable insight into yourself as things move along.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The week is filled with positive potentials, but it's up to you to make the right choices. The advice of someone who truly cares for you and your well-being can be priceless.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to make yourself available to possibilities of the romantic kind. Already paired? Good. In that case, be sure to reassure that special person of your feelings.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your generosity gladdens the hearts of others, and you bask in their joy.

Antenna Installation On Willard Street Meeting Topic

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting Thursday, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. to discuss AT&T's application for a special permit to modify its existing antenna installation at 230 Willard St.

The meeting will be held in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

AT&T seeks to replace three of its existing nine-panel antennas currently attached to the penthouse of 230 Willard St. The work is part of the wireless communication industry's upgrade from 3G to 4G service for the area. The proponent of the project is seeking a special permit before the Zoning Board of Appeals Feb. 22.

Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 16, 1878, the Bland-Allison Act – which provided for a return to the minting of silver coins – becomes the law of the land. During the 19th century, money was backed by actual deposits of silver and gold, unlike today when the value of American money is essentially secured by faith in the stability of the government.

• On Feb. 15, 1903, candy-store owner Morris Michtom places two stuffed bears in his shop window in Brooklyn, N.Y., advertising them as Teddy bears, after President Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt. Other toy manufacturers soon began turning out copies of Michtom's stuffed bears, which would become a national childhood institution.

• On Feb. 14, 1929, in Chicago, gunmen in the suspected employment of organized crime boss Al Capone murder seven members of George "Bugs" Moran's North Siders gang. The so-called St. Valentine's Day Massacre motivated federal authorities to redouble their efforts to find evidence incriminating enough to take Capone off the streets.

• On Feb. 19, 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signs Executive Order 9066, authorizing the removal of all people from military areas. The military in turn defined the entire West Coast as a military area, and more than 110,000 Japanese Americans were relocated to remote internment camps around the country.

• On Feb. 18, 1959, Ray Charles records "What'd I Say," which went on to become one of the greatest rhythm-and-blues records ever made. The call-and-response song was created to fill time at the end of a concert, and the crowd loved it.

• On Feb. 20, 1974, Reg Murphy, an editor of The Atlanta Constitution, is kidnapped after being lured from his home by William Williams. Murphy was released after a $700,000 ransom was paid. Within hours, Williams and his wife, Betty, were captured.

• On Feb. 17, 1986, Anne Tyler wins the National Book Critics Circle Award for her novel "The Accidental Tourist" (1985). The book, about the life of a travel-book writer after the death of his son and his subsequent divorce, became a bestseller and was later made into a movie starring William Hurt.

Coop's Bar & Grille took home the title of Quincy's Chili Champion at the second annual "Chili Lovers Chili Cook-off," held recently at Hough's Neck Congregational Church.

Coop's sweet yet spicy chili won first place in the restaurant division, which included a number of local restaurants. Second place went to the Stadium Sports Bar, while The Four's took third place.

Among the individual entries, first place went to Jayne Wall of Weymouth, who also won first place in last year's cook-off. Quincy resident John Crosta's traditional style chili took second place, while Christine Keating, also of Quincy, took third place.

"We're thrilled that this year's cook-off was as big a success as last year's inaugural event," said chairperson Jennifer Logue, adding that more than 200 people attended the cook-off. "Given all the snow we've had this month, it was great that so many people came out and enjoyed an afternoon of good food and good friends."

In addition to the chili cook-off, the event also featured hot dogs, beer, soda, snacks and a bake sale.

Losing A Landmark

THE BRADFORD BUILDING located at the corner of Chestnut and Maple Streets in Quincy Center, was demolished during a two-day razing project Monday and Tuesday. The 100-foot by 30-foot building – built in 1919 – was demolished by the NASDI Demolition Company based in New York. The building was home to Hairplace 1 Salon (now located at 85 Quincy Ave., Quincy), TAJ Coin and Stamp and Quincy Typewriter Service. A few spectators – many with cameras – watched as an excavator brought the building down. Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, which owned the building, plans to landscape the site for open space.

BOB BARKER, longtime owner of Quincy Typewriter Service in Quincy Center, watches as the demolition of the Bradford Building gets underway Monday. The business had been located in the Quincy Center landmark at the corner of Chestnut and Maple Streets for 78 years. It now operates out of Weymouth. The building was also the home of TAJ Coin and Stamp, which has closed, and Hairplace 1 which has relocated to 85 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

Votes 7-2 For Purchase, Preparation Of Four-Acre Site Off Hancock Street

Council OKs $9M Bond For New School Site

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council voted 7-2 Monday to authorize a $9 million bond allowing the purchase and preparation of a four-acre site off Hancock Street for a new Central Middle School.

Monday's vote signals the first step toward the construction of a $39 million middle school to replace the 110-year-old Central Middle School which has been labeled as one of five school buildings in the worst condition in the state.

For Mayor Thomas Koch, this week's vote was essential in meeting a timetable that could allow construction to begin this year.

Koch plans to meet with members of the state's School Building Authority (SBA) March 30 to present

Will Help 'Drive Local Economic Engine'

Sen. Brown Offers Support For Center Revitalization

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The Quincy Center $1.3 billion revitalization effort has the full support of U.S. Sen. Scott Brown who lauded the efforts of Mayor Thomas Koch in securing a public-private partnership between the city and StreetWorks.

"Mayor Koch is doing a great job (on the revitalization initiative) and I've met with his team. This project should generate good construction jobs and help drive the local economic engine," Brown said in a telephone interview at his Washington, D.C. office last week.

SEN. SCOTT BROWN

The revitalization effort is expected to create some 10,000 jobs – some 4,100 in the construction area and another 5,700 permanent jobs. The plan calls for a new mixed-use downtown that includes more than 1 million square feet of new office space, more than 700 housing units, two hotels, a cinema and entertainment complex, and 575,000 square feet of new retail and restaurant space in Quincy Center.

It is the largest private investment in city history.

Brown said he stands ready to help the project come to fruition.

"As you know, I oppose earmarks, but stand ready to help the Mayor and other local officials work through the normal grant process for funds.

Mayor Begins Search For New Finance Director

Mayor Thomas Koch this week began the search for a new Municipal Finance Director by placing an advertisement in the state's municipal bulletin and announcing that he will name a committee to review resumes and make recommendations on candidates.

The search comes after Muncipal Finance Director Nicholas Puleo informed the Mayor that he is leaving his City Hall position to become Director of Communications at his alma mater, Boston College High School.

"I'm greatly disappoint-

8 Named To City Boards

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors recently approved the appointment of Thomas W. Lynn to the Board of the Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) as recommended by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Lynn's appointment was one of eight votes taken by councillors at their Feb. 7 meeting when they approved new appointments and reappointments to four city boards.

Lynn, a self-employed contractor from Germantown, will serve a five-year term through the first Monday of February 2016, as one of four mayoral appointees. The mayor's appointees must include a representative of labor and, also, a resident of the QHA.

Councillors congratulated Lynn and commended the work of his predecessor Kevin Cotter who served on the QHA board for the past eight years.

Lynn attended the meeting as did QHA Director Jay MacRitchie.

"We look forward to working with him," MacRitchie said this week.

Currently serving as mayoral appointees are Deacon John Menz, chairman whose term expires in 2012; member Jim McDonald, labor representative, 2013; and Mary Ann Morris, resident, 2014.

HOUSING BOARD APPOINTEE Thomas Lynn (right) meets with Quincy Housing Director Jay MacRitchie after the City Council approved his appointment by Mayor Thomas Koch to a five-year term on the QHA board.

The fifth member Rosemary Wahlberg was appointed by the governor and will serve through 2015.

The QHA operates independently from the city under the state statute MGL Chapter 121B.

Park & Recreation Board

Councillors reappointed three members of the Quincy Park & Recreation Board by unanimous votes on Feb. 7. The three appointees are John Nigro, Josephine Shea and School Committee member David McCarthy.

The Park and Recreation Board establishes the policies and procedures of the Park Department and maintains park properties. All members of the board are mayoral appointments but must meet specific requirements under the ordinance.

For example, each of the city's six wards must be represented by a member and one member must be a member of the School Committee.

The following residents, also, serve on the board: Chair Connie Driscoll, Secretary Bryant Carter, Ward 6; Joseph Brill, Ward 4; Brad Croall, Ward 2; Judith Krimski, Ward 5; and Jay Stearns, Ward 3.

Quincy Medical Trust Adams Temple Fund

City councillors also nominated and unanimously elected William MacDonald and Robert E. Foy, III to one-year terms on the Adams Temple and School Fund and, also, nominated and unanimously elected Councillor Michael McFarland and City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3 to terms on the Quincy Medical Trust.

Mayor To Make Medjugorje Pilgrimage

Mayor Thomas Koch will spend a week outside of Quincy for the first time since taking office three years ago when he travels on a faith-based pilgrimage to the Bosnian village of Medjugorje at end of this week.

THOMAS KOCH

Medjugorje, one of the most visited pilgrimage sites by Catholics in the world, is a small village near the Croatian border where many Catholics believe the Virgin Mary has been sending messages through six villagers since 1981. The Mayor's trip has been planned for about a year.

"For me personally, it will be a deeply spiritual trip and something I have wanted to do for a long time," said Koch, who will also spend time in Rome as part of the trip.

The Mayor leaves for Europe at the end of this week and returns March 1. Under the City Charter, City Council President Kevin Coughlin will have the authority to sign documents that cannot wait for the Mayor's return.

ed, but I understand that this is something that Nick wants personally and professionally, and I wish him the best," said Mayor Koch. "We are moving forward aggressively on the search, and I am fully confident that we will find a qualified, talented person for this important position."

The City this week placed an advertisement in the Massachusetts Municipal Association Beacon, one of the state's most widely read publications for government job seekers, and Koch said he expects to have the review committee in place by the end of the week.

Added Puleo:

"I will always be greatly appreciative of the opportunity given me by Mayor Koch, and I do think we've made tremendous strides in the department over the last year. I've been presented with an unexpected offer to return to BC High in a position that is a little different but something I've always wanted to pursue professionally. It's a deeply personal decision that I struggled with, and the Mayor appreciated that."

NICHOLAS PULEO
New Communications Director At B.C. High

Chief of Staff James Fatseas, a former executive at Merrill Lynch, will take over as interim Finance Director and will lead the budget process for the Administration.

Policy and Information Director Christopher Walker will take Fatseas' role temporarily.

"Our full team was involved in the budget reforms undertaken last year, and that framework is not something that's going to change again this year, so we are not reinventing the wheel in this budget," said Koch. "Jim has been involved in the City's budget process since we took office in 2008 and has great financial experience in the private sector."

Puleo was responsible for essential re-creating the City's annual operating budget from scratch, making it easier to read and more transparent. It also included several million dollars in spending cuts as the City faced declining state and local revenues, and kept to Mayor Koch's pledge not to raise the property tax levy for the second consecutive year.

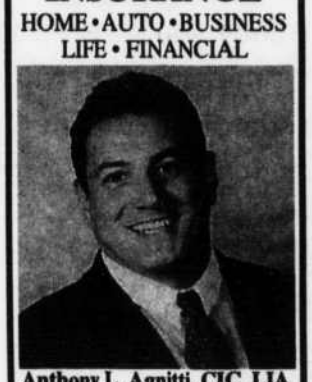
GOOD AS PLATINUM



As beautiful and valuable as gold is, France's King Louis XVI declared platinum to be "the only metal fit for kings." He certainly had a point. This prestigious metal is twice as heavy as gold, extremely hard, and hypoallergenic, and it resists tarnish. After years of use, its bright white luster absorbs scratches that create a very attractive patina. While platinum has been used in jewelry and ornamentation for thousands of years, it was not until the 1920s that the technology was developed to work the metal conveniently. Up until that time, platinum's high melting point made the metal difficult to manipulate. Now that platinum can be used in a relatively pure state, it is even more alluring.

No other metal is as distinctive to own and wear as platinum. Its lustrous sheen and rare beauty are coveted worldwide. Whether you are choosing an engagement ring, diamond earrings, or a necklace or bracelet, you will find shimmering, sophisticated platinum designs at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. In fact, you'll find fine jewelry of both platinum and gold in unique, one of a kind designs, set with enticingly beautiful precious gemstones. And if you don't see what you're looking for in our displays, discuss custom designing a special piece created to your specifications. PH: 617-773-3636.

Would Add One Half Of One Percent, Mayor Says

$25M Capital Plan Impact 'Minimal' On City's Bottom Line

Mayor Thomas P. Koch's $25 million capital improvement plan aimed at major neighborhood flood relief, school roof repairs, and other long-standing infrastructure projects will add about one-half of one percent to the City's overall bottom line when financing comes due, a City analysis shows.

"This is an aggressive, necessary, and affordable plan to protect our City's future," said Mayor Koch. "We worked hard crunching numbers, considered a wide range of financial factors, and developed a financing plan that will ultimately add only minimally to our bottom line over the course of the borrowing program."

If the program is approved by the City Council, Mayor Koch will finance it through a 20-year bond. More than half of the bond payments will come from sources outside of the City's general fund, including the hotel/motel room tax and a sewer rehabilitation fee paid for by developers, according to the analysis by the Department of Municipal of Finance.

The analysis showed that under even the most conservative projection, the capital plan will add only $1.4 million to the City's annual budget line for debt payments, a little more than one half of one percent of the City's total $230 million budget. The City's borrowing position is strong and flexible, Koch said, pointing out that Quincy has the lowest per capita debt and the lowest debt as a percentage of overall property value than any of the 10 largest cities in Massachusetts.

"We have been tremendously cautious with our borrowing since we took office, and we are in a position where we can make this absolutely vital investment with little risk to our taxpayers," Koch said. "Our schools and our neighborhoods are what make this a great City, and we have a responsibility to address issues that in many cases, frankly, have been ignored for too long."

The analysis showed that when other projects, especially the new Central Middle School project, are included in the City's overall debt picture, total debt payments will remain stable over the next several years as older bonds are paid off and space is created for new programs without drastically increasing the City's overall debt.

Here are the projects:

Schools:

• $2.3 million in school roofs repairs and replacements at 16 schools.

• $1.5 million to renovate the Coddington School to house school administrative offices to eliminate rental of NAGE building.

City Buildings:

• $675,000 for roof repairs at old City Hall and Park Department headquarters and HVAC upgrades at

Valentines For Veterans

IN CELEBRATION OF Saint Valentine's Day, Quincy Catholic Academy students remembered veterans and created handmade Valentine cards, which were sent to veterans hospitals in West Roxbury and Jamaica Plain. "Our students worked very hard designing beautiful Valentines for our veterans," said Cathy Cameron, Quincy Catholic Academy principal. "What a wonderful project to help our children remember the sacrifices of our brave veterans."

'Recognizing Drug Abuse' Topic March 14

The Quincy Citywide Parents' Council will meet Monday, March 14 at 7 p.m. at the Broad Meadows Middle School.

The topic for the guest speakers will be "Recognizing the Signs of Drug Abuse."

Quincy Police Detective Patrick Glynn will open the meeting with a presentation regarding "Recognizing the Signs of Drug Abuse."

Representatives from EDAN (End Drug Abuse Now) Nancy Holler and Kathy Deady will follow Glynn's presentation. They will offer more information on signs of drug abuse and what parents can do to recognize and help stop drug abuse.

Shooting The Breeze With Sen. Brown

Scott Brown saw his first live concert – Bachman Turner Overdrive – at Boston's Orpheum Theater as a junior high school student in the early 1970s.

BROWN

Now, nearly 40 years later, BTO's hit "You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet" could be the sound track as the U.S. senator gears up for his re-election bid in 2012.

In fact, we'll be seeing plenty more of Brown in the weeks and months ahead.

The former Republican Wrentham state senator – who caught political lightning in a bottle last year winning the U.S. seat long held by Democrat Ted Kennedy – will release his autobiography entitled "Against All Odds" next week.

Brown will be profiled on CBS's "Sixty Minutes" news magazine perhaps as soon as this Sunday. He also has appearances lined up on NBC's "Today" Show and CNN's "Piers Morgan Tonight" talk show. You can expect some book tour stops in the Bay State, too.

"It's my hope people will read it and the message is if you try your best and put good people around you, you can do well and make a difference," Brown said in a phone interview from his Washington, D.C. office.

At 51, Brown's already lived a remarkable life. The book is more than a political memoir. It's a real-life tale about overcoming adversity at a very young age. Readers will learn, for example, about Brown surviving a savage beating at the drunken, dirty-fingernails hands of a stepfather when he was barely 6. He was trying to protect his mother.

Brown also puts into words how he endured hardships and challenges – including moving to 17 different towns in 18 years and stealing food to eat – while finding an escape on the basketball court. Of course, his historic U.S. Senate win is also well chronicled – including the "secrets" that propelled him to victory.

Today, despite belonging to one of the most exclusive political groups in the world – the U.S. Senate – Brown comes across as a "regular guy." He prefers "Scott" to Sen. Brown and still drives his 2005 GMC Canyon pick-up truck, the symbol of his grass-roots campaign last winter. Purchased new, he says he's racked up 218,000 miles on it.

He'll talk politics to Presidents to pop culture. And anything in between it seems.

Looking ahead to Presidents' Day Feb. 21 – the same day his book is released – he's asked what former occupant of the Oval Office does he most admire?

His answer is quick: Ronald Reagan and John F. Kennedy.

"Ronald Reagan was someone who always showed strength, always challenged us to do better," Brown says. "Even if he disagreed with you, he did it with respect and dignity."

JFK, he says, "was larger than life. Even in my own home growing up we had JFK memorabilia. With JFK we had a new way of governing with local (Massachusetts') ties. He was a local hero."

As for the present commander-in-chief, Brown calls President Obama "a good man." He notes he and Obama share the same family dynamic: a wife and two daughters.

Politically, he says the President "has had some challenges. Where I agree with him, I can work with him. But where I disagree with him, I will oppose him respectfully."

The 2012 election is also a Presidential year. He says he will support Mitt Romney for the Republican nomination if the former Massachusetts governor enters the race. "I supported him when he ran for governor and I would support him again," Brown says.

A triathlete, Brown enjoys running, swimming and biking. He also likes cooking. "I can cook everything. My grandmother taught me." His specialty: seafood.

He enjoys reading all kinds of books, too. Among the books on his night stand: Bridging the Divide: My Life written by former Massachusetts Sen. Edward Brooke. Brooke, of course, was the last Republican Senator from Massachusetts before Brown.

He's also into suspense thrillers. Favorite authors include Dan Brown, Dale Brown and David Balducci.

The senator doesn't own an iPod but has an iPad. His favorite musicians "besides my daughter, Ayla" (a former American Idol contestant) read like Rock-n-Roll royalty. "I like the classic groups such as Aerosmith, Kiss, Springsteen, Led Zeppelin, Queen, Bowie, Boston. I also like the Drop-Kick Murphy's."

Brown marked his first year as a U.S. senator on Feb. 4.

"I get to meet a lot of different people and businesses and see all that Massachusetts has to offer," the senator says about his job. "I've visited parts of the state that I've never seen before. I also enjoy solving constituent problems."

Sounds like that other BTO hit - "Taking Care of Business."

WOULD YOU say the number of marriage licenses in Quincy has dropped, increased or stayed about the same over the last 40 years?

It appears love and marriage – in Quincy anyway – do not go together as much as a "horse and carriage" anymore.

According to the city's Vital Statistics Department at City Hall, the number of marriage licenses in 1970 compared to 2010 was down by nearly 44 percent. Apparently cupid is out of arrows or just a lousy shot.

In 1970, the city issued 1,166 marriage licenses. Last year – 2010 – only 662 were issued.

It appears there's a trend toward fewer and fewer people getting hitched.

In 1980, there were 754 licenses issued. It went up in 1990 to 960 but fell to 813 in 2000. Comparing the last five years, there's been a drop the last two years. There were 759 in 2006; 760 in 2007, 763 in 2008; 667 in 2009 and 662 in 2010.

Obviously not everyone "in love" gets married. And there are some societal factors that figure into these numbers. Marriage is not considered a pre-requisite for having children. Living together as couples is now more acceptable, too.

WELL, YOU CAN ADD another title to former mayor, former school committeeman, former councillor at-large and former ward councillor Frank McCauley.

Political stumper.

And we're not talking about another campaign.

Frank submitted the photo of the "mystery mayor" a few weeks ago. The photo was a little boy who grew up to become a mayor of Quincy.

We received about a dozen guesses from readers . . . and no one got it right.

The former mayor receiving the most guesses: William Phelan. One reader, Bob Lippens, a former Quincy resident and Sun subscriber, said: "The boy looks an awful lot like a young version of the man (Phelan) pictured with former President Clinton in the Jan. 13th issue."

Lippens wasn't the only reader who thought it was Phelan. The city's 32nd mayor also got "votes" from Joseph Gibbons, Rose Marie Booth and Arline Goodman.

A few readers – including Eleanor Villard and Jennie Perito – thought it was James McIntyre.

And Frank got a few nods, too, from Marion MacPherson, Karen Gaughan and former Quincy Sun reporter and City Hall correspondent Nancy McLaughlin.

WHO'S THIS?

HANNON

The little boy is . . . Walter Hannon.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1952 real photo postcard view of the Parking Way entrance to Remick's of Quincy, the pre-eminent department store in what was known then as "Shopperstown USA." Located at 1517 Hancock St., this 1897 building was first known as the Music Hall until Remick's Bros. was moved here in 1904. Remick's Bros., owned by Frank and Albert Remick, was a men's clothing store first opened in 1896. In 1930, after the founders had died, the next generation Frank Remick took over the business. He expanded the store many times over the years to include departments of every sort with fine furnishings for men, women and children, rivaling the best stores in Boston. Everyone loved to get a gift in a box from Remick's, even if it was only a necktie or a pair of nylons. A few of the favorite features of the store were the animated Christmas display windows along Hancock Street and the Serendipity gift shop in the windows of the back lower level shown here. Many of his loyal long-service and popular employees became familiar names to hundreds of people in Quincy and the South Shore. After 92 years the renowned Remick's of Quincy was closed in 1987. It was one of the last large downtown stores to close. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Public Schools Kindergarten Registration March 29

Quincy Public Schools will hold kindergarten registration for the 2011-2012 school year Tuesday, March 29 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Children who will be five years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2011 should register at their home schools. To determine a home school, check the QPS website at www.quincypublicschools.com.

Parents seeking open enrollment need to first register at their home school on March 29. Children do not need to come to registration. A child who presently attends the Pre-K programs at either the Snug Harbor School or the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center does not have to register March 29.

The following documents must be produced in order for a student to be registered:

- Child's birth certificate (with a raised seal)
- Proof that the child resides in the home school district
- Any two: tax bill, utility bill, copy of lease.
- Photo I.D. of the adult seeking to enroll the student.
- Copy of a recent (within one year) physical examination by a physician
- Written records of immunizations

The required forms that a parent needs to complete for registration are available on the QPS website. They may be found under the A-Z Parent Guide section under Kindergarten Registration.

Questions regarding the kindergarten program may be directed to the home school principal.

Thanks Cong. Keating For Airport Security Concern

Recently, Homeland Security Secretary, Janet Napolitiano appeared before the House Homeland Security Committee and stated, "We cannot guarantee that there will never be another terrorist attack and we cannot seal our country under a glass dome."

However, U.S Rep. Bill Keating, D-Quincy, appearing for his first House committee hearing, questioned Napolitiano about airport security and said he remained quite concerned about how a 16-year-old boy was able to hide in the wheel well of a Boston-bound passenger airliner before tumbling to his death in Milton as the pane's landing gear opened.

Keating added, "If that (stowaway) had been a person with more nefarious motivation, think of what would have happened."

This tragic incident, killing a boy reportedly running away from home in Charlotte, North Carolina and, falling out of a Boeing 747, presented enormous questions about tarmac security.

Kudos to Keating on his tough questioning of the Homeland Security Secretary when she appeared before House committee members and while we cannot put America under a "glass dome," to use Napolitiano's words, we certainly should be able to stop a teenager from getting aboard a Boeing 747 on the tarmac. As Keating wondered aloud, what if a terrorist had hidden in a plane's wheel well?

Hopefully with Keating on the House Homeland Security Committee, he and the other members on this House committee will be the people's voice when it comes to matters of domestic terrorism and continuing to be the people's overseers in Post-911 America.

Finally, thank you to U.S. Rep. Bill Keating for bringing up that question, which has been on everyone's minds since that young man was found dead on the ground in Milton.

McIntyre Opposes Incinerator Near Quarry

By FRANK McCAULEY

Rep. James R. McIntyre (D-Quincy) today opposed by letter a bill that would authorize Quincy to construct an incinerator on Quarry Street adjacent to Hardwick's Quarry.

This Week
1963
48 Years Ago

The bill was filed by Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa who is also a Republican House member of the Committee on Cities.

In his letter he cited three reasons for his opposition:

- The location of an incinerator in this location will impede the development of high-rise apartment in this area.
- This legislation is not necessary since Chapter 40A of the General Laws spells out the proper procedure for rezoning an area for certain uses.
- At present, bids are being sought by the city of Quincy to place an incinerator in another location therefore this location is not of necessity the only site for an incinerator.

(Editor's Note: Despite much talk and planning an incinerator was never built in Quincy.)

MAYOR WILL OPPOSE PLAN FOR PARKING

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa will register disapproval of a proposal to relocate the old Hancock Cemetery to make a site for off-street parking.

The proposal was made by Councillor Richard W. Barry who sponsored a Council resolve asking the mayor to study the feasibility of such an action.

"I am definitely opposed to this suggestion on two grounds – one, out of respect for the dead and two, the cost which would be involved," the mayor wrote in response to the resolve.

Estimates indicate that the cost of relocating the 807 graves would be around a half-million dollars, the mayor pointed out.

Children's Concert Sunday To Benefit St. Yves School In Haiti

Cornerstone Campus preschool will hold a benefit concert to help support its campaign to rebuild the St. Yves School in Port-Au-Prince Haiti Sunday, Feb. 20 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave., Quincy.

The concert for children and adults will feature local musician Conor Smith and The Three Tall Pines bluegrass group.

Smith, a music teacher at Cornerstone Campus, is also the fiddler player for The Three Tall Pines, a quartet that plays regularly in local venues.

The evening will begin with children's songs and activities followed by a lively lesson of bluegrass.

Rock Island Food Co., which is donating food and catering services, is co-sponsoring the event.

The St. Yves School had an enrollment of 350 students in grades K-12 before it was destroyed by an earthquake last year. Through special events and individual donations, Cornerstone has raised over $2,500 for St. Yves. The money has allowed the school to clear debris, recover victims and establish a temporary site where the school reopened last fall.

Mare-Denise Fabien, daughter of one of the founders of the St. Yves School recently returned from Port-Au-Prince where she visited the tent school.

"We will persevere," she says. "And with help from God and the community we will rebuilt St. Yves for the best."

Tickets are $10 a person with a family maximum of $30. Children under three are free.

To purchase tickets or for more information, call Gail at 617-599-4119.

'Bonjour Shalom' Film Screening At Temple Shalom Of Milton

Temple Shalom of Milton has added the film "Bonjour Shalom" to this season's Winter Movie Series on the theme "Jewish Culture Around the World". The film will be screened Saturday, Feb. 19 at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

This documentary examines the small Montreal municipality of Outremont, where two very different communities live side by side: Hassidic Jews and their French-Catholic neighbors. Intent on preserving their traditional lifestyle, the Hassidim distance themselves from outsiders.

The French Catholics respond to their little-understood neighbors with a mixture of curiosity, frustration and mistrust. Through evocative personal interviews as well as scenes from daily life, Bonjour Shalom examines the complex dynamics involved in this clash of cultures.

Bonjour Shalom has won numerous awards, including a Blue Ribbon at the American Film and Video Festival, Best Documentary at the Gemaux Film Festival, and TV Ontario Award for Outstanding Society Issues. It is provided by the National Center for Jewish Film.

The film is open to the public. The donation for admission is $3 per person, two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water. To order tickets in advance or for more information, call 617-698-3394.

Benefit Dinner Feb. 25 At Sacred Heart Church

The monthly dinner committee of Sacred Heart Parish, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy, will sponsor a spaghetti and meatball dinner Friday, Feb. 25 at 6 p.m. in the parish cafeteria.

Dinner features spaghetti with homemade red and white sauces, meatballs and garlic bread. Homemade dessert, coffee, tea and beverages will also be served.

Cost is $7.50 per person or $20 per family (children 12 years and younger).

A 50-50 drawing will be held during the evening.

Reservations are needed and may be made by calling Sacred Heart rectory at 617-328-8666 by Feb. 23.

Proceeds will benefit the parish's ongoing capital improvement fund projects (including new exterior doors).

For more information, contact the parish at 617-328-8666.

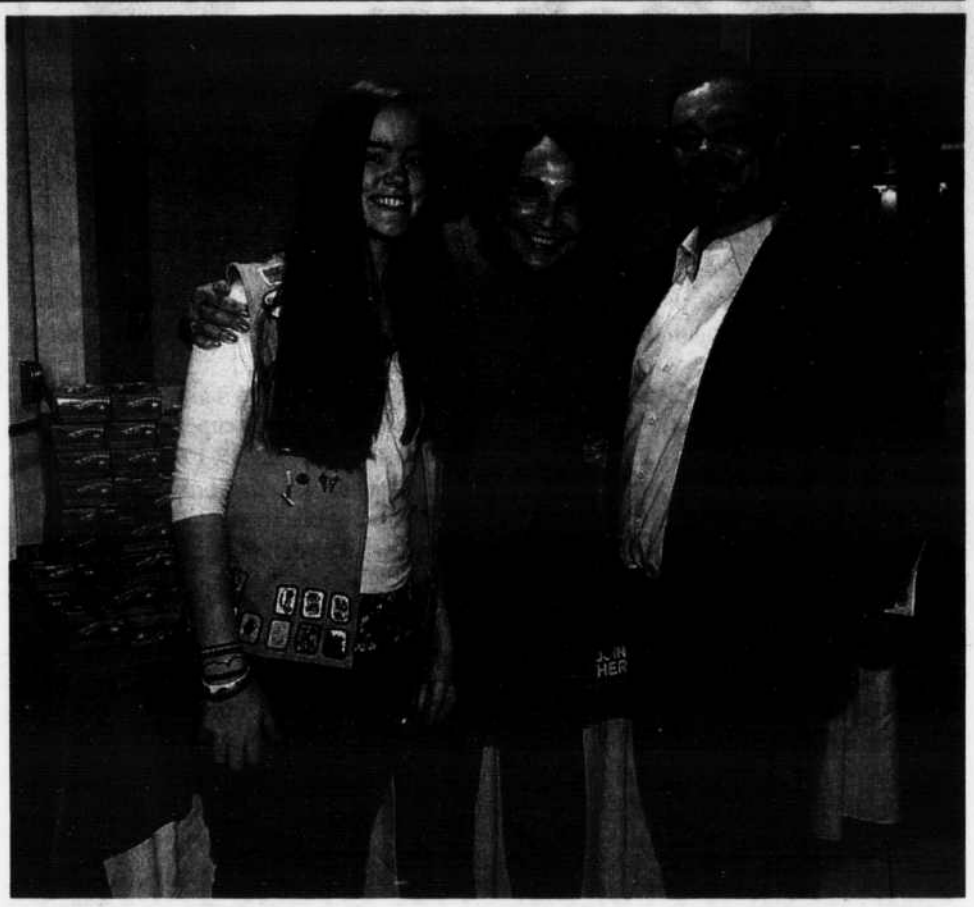
Medicaid Myths, Misconceptions Topic For Ward 4 Seniors Feb. 23

"The Biggest Myths and Misconceptions About Medicaid" will be the focus of attorney Leanna Hamill's presentation to Quincy's Ward 4 Seniors group.

To be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23 at the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center in Quincy, the presentation will provide attendees with valuable tips on navigating Medicaid and planning for long-term care.



LEANNA HAMILL

"People get information on Medicaid and long-term care from lots of places: the nursing home, magazines and newspapers, friends of friends, their recollections about what happened when their own parents were in a nursing home, and even their hairdresser," Hamill said. "Some of this misinformation is harmless but some can actually put your future plans at risk."

In her presentation, Hamill will review the biggest myths and misconceptions about Medicaid and clear up the confusion about paying for long-term care.

Based in Hingham, Hamill specializes in estate planning and elder law.

'Beach In Winter' Walking Tour Feb. 26

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will present a free walking tour led by Peter Fifield Saturday, Feb. 26 at 11:30 a.m.

Entitled "The Beach in Winter," the tour will lead participants on an exploration of a Squantum beach at low die.

What birds from the Arctic spend their winters here? Discover native oysters. Beachcombers will have the opportunity to see what the winter storms have brought to local shores.

The meeting place will be determined on the date of the tour depending on weather and snow conditions on the ground.

Participants should call 617-472-0799 on Feb. 26 to determine the meeting location and snow/rain date cancellation information.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Vanilla Cupcakes

It seems that the current dessert craze these days is cupcakes of every kind. I have such an easy basic recipe for a vanilla cupcake that almost anything can be added. Years ago, my mother made lemon filled cupcakes with this recipe.

VANILLA CUPCAKES

1 ½ sticks butter (softened)
1 cup sugar
3 large eggs
½ cups self-rising flour
1 tablespoon warm water
1 teaspoon vanilla

If you haven't got the self-rising flour, use the other flour, and add 1 ½ teaspoons baking powder with ¼ teaspoon salt.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Line a 12-cup muffin tin with cupcake papers.

Beat butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Alternately add the eggs and flour beating until each is well blended. Add the water and vanilla and mix.

Place the batter in the tins about ¾ full. Bake until done about 15 minutes or so. Put a toothpick in the middle to make sure they are done. After a couple of minutes place on a wire rack to cool.

Here is a delicious easy cream cheese frosting to go with the cupcakes.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

4 tablespoons softened butter
8 ounces cream cheese (softened)
¼ to 1 cup powdered sugar

Beat butter and cream cheese until smooth. Beat in the sugar adding it until blended.

If you want to make a lemon filled cupcake, make a lemon pie filling according to directions. Cut the tops off each cupcake when they are done. Place the pudding over each one and then put the cupcake top over it. Sprinkle top with powdered sugar.

Police Get Green Light For 12 New Cruisers

Quincy police will be enjoying that new car aroma within the next month, thanks to the City Council's recent vote authorizing the $300,000 for the purchase of 12 new vehicles.

Council unanimously authorized the transfer from Free Cash on Feb. 7.

Captain John Dougan said Monday the vehicles have been ordered through the state's purchasing department and will include seven 2011 Ford Crown Victorias or Crown Vics as they are known and five 2011 Ford Taurus which will be designated as four unmarked vehicles and one canine transport.

Dougan said the new cars will replace aging vehicles in the department's fleet of 90 vehicles and will be completely fitted with police equipment and signage on arrival.

The best of the older cars will be reassigned within the department, according to Dougan who said of the older cars, "We'll use them for parts."

This will be the first time in two years that the police have purchased new cars, according to Lt. Kevin Tobin, Day Patrol Manager.

Tobin who is in charge of the city's police patrol fleet said that the vehicles being replaced all have over 100,000 miles on them.

Tobin said police cruisers are called "line cars" generally only last two to three years.

Actually, Tobin said the police vehicles have had the wear and tear of 200,000 miles as their motors are stressed with constant idling.

Crown Victorias are being discontinued and will not be available for future police departments.

That's a good thing for Quincy's department, according to Tobin who said, "It's actually advantageous."

Tobin said the city ordered seven Crown Vics because the department has sufficient parts from the our-of-service vehicles.

New Antenna On Ricciuti Dr. Subject Of Meeting Tonight

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting to discuss AT&T's application for a special permit to install three panel antenna at 171R/193 Ricciuti Dr.

The meeting will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to participate.

Representatives will be on hand to discuss the proposal in further detail with interested neighbors.

AT&T seeks to install three new panel antenna on the large 192-foot antenna structure that current exists. The request, if allowed, would not add any additional height to the tower that currently looms over West Quincy, Palmucci said.

The work is part of the wireless communication industry's upgrade from 3G to 4G service for the area.

Residents with questions about this subject or any other matter can call Palmucci at 617-834-3945.

900 Residents, Business Owners Filed Claims

FEMA Payments From March Floods Total Over $1.7M To City, Residents

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The federal government's flood relief for the city, residents and businesses totaled over $1.7 million after last March's devastating floods, according to Joseph Shea, PE, Senior Vice President, Woodard & Curran.

Shea outlined the payments during a Feb. 7 presentation on the city's flood relief plan to City Council.

According to Shea, 900 private residents and business owners filed claims with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

Of those applications, FEMA reimbursed 700 claimants for a total of $994,269.

Shea said that FEMA approved 28 of the city's projects for a total of $846,954.

According to Nick Puleo, Director of the city Municipal Finance Department, the city has received a total of $650,204.

Puleo said most of those funds will be deposited in the General Fund for departments that were over budget last year due to efforts during the flood aftermath.

Shea said the loans and grants averaged out to about $1000 per household but Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said that didn't help many of his constituents.

Palmucci said he has heard from nearly a dozen residents whose claims were denied.

In addition, both Palmucci and Shea said that FEMA has been reluctant to release details on the payments, claiming privacy interests.

Shea and James Freas, AICP, of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, joined City Engineer Shawn Hardy at the council in explaining the need to update the city's Hazard Mitigation Plan.

Once that's updated, Hardy said that a $550,000 grant will be available for the city's Spence Street project.

Councillors will begin reviewing the plan Tuesday, Feb. 22 at 6:30 p.m. at a joint meeting of the Environmental and Public Health Committees.

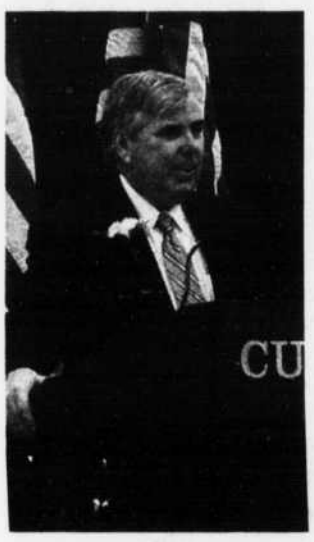
Morrissey Pledges New, Innovative Ways To Prevent Crime

'Leadership Is About Listening,' Says New Norfolk County District Attorney

Michael W. Morrissey was recently sworn in as Norfolk District Attorney by Governor Deval Patrick, promising effective prosecution, a focus on victims' rights and aggressive efforts to keep Norfolk County citizens safe from crime.

Morrissey brings more than two decades of experience as a trial lawyer, experience managing a large Boston law firm and more than thirty years experience writing legislation as a state representative and longtime state senator to the position.



Anthony Campo, a partner in the law firm Morrissey left to become District Attorney, introduced his former law partner and said "He is the hardest-working person you will work with." Campo is also chair of the board of trustees of Curry College, where the ceremony was held.

Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin read aloud and presented Morrissey with his Certificate of Election, adding: "He is a very good lawyer, and the people of Norfolk County will come to know that."

The new District Attorney focused much of his speech on the importance he will place on victim's rights. "There is a sacred trust placed in us by the victims of crime," he told the crowd of well over 800, including 22 police chiefs and deputy chiefs from departments across Norfolk County, including Quincy Chief Paul Keenan, Captain John Dougan, and Retired Chief Fran Mullen.

"Crime victims turn to the police department for their immediate safety," District Attorney Morrissey said. "They turn to us for justice."

The following is the full text of the District Attorney's speech:

NORFOLK COUNTY District Attorney Michael Morrissey said he will work closely with schools, senior centers, communities and coalitions to help build safer, stronger communities.

GOV. DEVAL PATRICK administered the oath of office to new Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey at recent ceremonies at Curry College, Milton.

WILLIAM GALVIN, Massachusetts Secretary of State, reads the "Certificate of Election" documenting that the powers of Norfolk County district attorney have been vested in Morrissey at his inauguration ceremonies at Curry College.

COLLEAGUES IN GOVERNMENT State Rep. Tackey Chan (left) and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci were among the invited guests attending the inauguration of Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey. Chan served as a legislative aide when Morrissey was a state senator. Palmucci was Morrissey's campaign manager in his successful bid for district attorney.

SAMANTHA TAN, a senior at North Quincy High School, sings the National Anthem at the inauguration of new Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey at Curry College.

NORFOLK COUNTY Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey (left) is greeted by Assistant District Attorney James Raftery and his wife, Barbara, at the reception following Morrissey's inauguration.

"Leadership is about listening, to intervene in problem areas before they become criminal. Before children are bullied. Before bad decisions become addiction. Before a senior citizen's isolation makes them a target. Before a bad decision on prom night or graduation night or on any night becomes a fatal crash, altering lives forever.

"I would rather prevent a crime than prosecute it. Success in prevention is not easy to measure, and it can be hard to engineer. But it is not a task that I or even this office will undertake alone.

"Leadership is about listening.

"As I take this office, it is my intent to work closely with our police partners and cement those relationships. It is also my intent to work closely with our schools, our senior centers, our communities and coalitions to hear what you need, hear what you believe will make you safer, our children safer, our communities stronger.

"Our resources may be limited, but that does not mean our imagination and our aspirations need to be. Join me. Together we will work to merit this sacred trust. And be proud of that work."

"And it is my promise that this District Attorney's Office will continue to find new and innovative ways to prevent crimes from occur-

"There is a sacred trust placed in us by the victims of crime. People whose happy, normal, productive lives have been altered forever by violence. Whose financial safety and future has been undermined or threatened by financial crime.

"Crime victims turn to the police department for their immediate safety.

"They turn to us for justice.

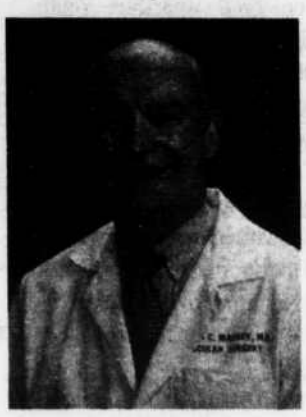
"There are those in this room today who have been the victims of crime and it is my promise to you that you will be part of every day and every decision.

"But the responsibility of the District Attorney is not contained in the four corners of the courtroom.

New Minimally Invasive Technique Offers Shorter Recuperation For Patients

Quincy Medical Center Expands Vascular Services

Quincy Medical Center, through its affiliation with Tufts Medical Center, is expanding its surgical capacity and introducing new programs and technologies to provide outstanding care for patients and optimal service to referring physicians.



With the addition of William C. Mackey, MD, Surgeon-in-Chief at Tufts Medical Center, and Mark D. Iafrati, MD, Chief of Vascular Surgery at Tufts Medical Center, to its medical staff, Quincy Medical Center this month begins offering endovascular aortic aneurysm repair (EVAR), a minimally invasive technique that has not been available in the Quincy community previously.

Dr. Mackey is Board-certified in Vascular Surgery, General Surgery, and Surgical Critical Care. He is Andrews Professor and Chairman at Tufts University School of Medicine, and his clinical specialties include: carotid artery surgery, stroke prevention, aortic aneurysms, claudication and other circulatory problems, reoperative vascular surgery, treatment of vascular surgery complications and venous diseases.

Dr. Iafrati is Board-certified in General Surgery and Vascular Surgery. He is Chief of Vascular Surgery and Director of the Vascular Medicine Center at Tufts Medical Center. His clinical specialties include: general vascular surgery, endovascular surgery, and venous surgery. Both physicians were recently named by Boston magazine to its annual "Top Doctors" list.

Dr. MARK IAFRATI

"The affiliation between Quincy Medical Center and Tufts Medical Center is based on the recognition that the vast majority of patients want to stay close to home for their care, and on our belief that most care can be delivered very effectively in the community," says Dr. Mackey.

"Our goal is to export high tech services, like EVAR, out to the community hospital setting and we now have all the pieces in place at Quincy. There should be no need for most patients to travel into Boston for care."

An aortic aneurysm is when a part of the aorta, the large artery that carries blood to the abdomen, pelvis, and legs, balloons outward due to weakness in the wall of the artery. EVAR uses catheters and guidewires to introduce a stent and graft through small incisions in the groin into the femoral artery.

Guided by x-rays, the surgeon positions the stent over the defective portion of the aorta, allowing blood to pass through it and remove pressure from the weakened aortic wall. Patients are usually able to go home the next day, compared to a 5-8 day hospital stay with a conventional, or "open," procedure.

The minimally invasive technique also eliminates the need for a large incision down the center of the abdomen. After EVAR, patients can return to normal activities after a few days, whereas open repair is associated with a 4-6 week recovery period.

"We are pleased to welcome our colleagues from Tufts Medical Center to our medical staff and we are very pleased to be able to offer our patients with aortic aneurysms the ability to have this minimally invasive procedure done right here at Quincy Medical Center," says Nissage Cadet, MD, QMC Chief of Surgery. "Together with our entire surgical staff, we are continually working to enhance the services we offer to our patients and our referring physicians, such as the breast and thoracic surgery services we added in November, with more to come in the near future."

Snow Days Force Change In Academic Calendar

School Year To End June 23 . . . Weather Permitting . . .

By JOE REARDON

Quincy Public School students will have to put up with pencils, books and homework for an additional four days this year to make up for the cancellations due to snow.

Students' last day of classes, originally scheduled for June 17, has been pushed forward to June 23, the 180th day on the school calendar. The last day for teachers and staff is slated for June 24.

By law, public schools cannot have classes beyond the month of June. Quincy has five snow days worked into its calendar year in the case of inclement weather.

The built-in snow days have suited the needs of Quincy schools for years.

"The school system has had this practice for so many years and it's a good one," said School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro. "It's really been worth the planning ahead."

DeCristofaro pointed out that school districts in other parts of Massachusetts that have had more days canceled has had to find other ways to reach the required 180 days. "There are school systems in the western part of the state that have had more snow days," he said. "We're not at that juncture where we have to consider other than what we have planned now."

Chicopee, for example, has canceled school six times since Jan. 1. Because the students' first day was after Labor Day on Sept. 7, students will be in school until at least June 28. The town of Wilbraham has also had a number of snow days, forcing the cancellation of spring vacation for April 19, 20 and 21. The last school day is scheduled for June 29.

The last school year to have a large number of school cancellations in Quincy was 1993-1994 when eight days had to be made up to reach 180. Options such as canceling April vacation or adding on time at the end of the school day were considered under then school superintendent Gene Creedon, but not necessary, because there were enough days left in June to meet the required number. The last day of school that year was June 30.

"It actually worked out just right," said DeCristofaro. "We're hoping Mother Nature's kind to us the rest of the winter."

April vacation, traditionally, has not been a viable option to make up days because families oftentimes have trips planned for that week. "You do need to look at other options," DeCristofaro said.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Feb. 7, at approximately 5:15 p.m., the Quincy Police Drug Unit Detectives Duran and O'Brien were conducting surveillance in the area of Atlantic and East Squantum Streets for drug activity.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective O'Brien observed a female – suspect #1 – standing in front of a market, looking up and down the street as if she was waiting for someone. He observed her for the next 10 minutes as she continued scanning the streets, constantly checked her cell phone, and at one time spoke briefly on her cell phone.

A few minutes later, a minivan approached the intersection and suspect #1 got in. As the van drove off, Detective O'Brien ran the plate and contacted Detective Duran for assistance. The owner – suspect #2 – from Lynn, MA, was known to the detectives from past heroin investigations.

Detective O'Brien followed the minivan as it went around the block, returning to the original location where suspect #1 entered the vehicle. Suspect #1 got out and walked back to the market. Detective Duran approached suspect #1 on foot while Detective O'Brien followed the minivan.

Detective Duran introduced himself as "Quincy Police" with his police badge displayed, then advised suspect #1 of her Miranda Rights to which she stated she understood. After a few questions, suspect #1 confessed that she purchased 1 bag of heroin for $50 from suspect #2, in the minivan. She said he spit the bag out of his mouth and then gave it to her.

Suspect #1 then took a plastic bag containing a brown powder from her right bra area and took out a plastic cigarette box wrapper that contained 5 orange pills. She admitted brown power was heroin and the pills were Valium. Detective Duran relayed this information to Detective O'Brien, who requested a marked cruiser stop the minivan.

Officer Pat Watkins attempted to stop the vehicle at about 861 Quincy Shore Dr., but the minivan first slowed but continued to drive forward slowly. The vehicle then stopped at 895 Quincy Shore Dr. Detective O'Brien then began to exit his unmarked vehicle but the minivan again drove forward and turned onto Rice Road. The detective then pulled in front of the minivan in order to stop the vehicle (it had traveled about 800 feet since first slowing.) This tactic is commonly used by drug dealers to provide more time to hide or destroy evidence. During this time the drugs will be swallowed or secreted into the body in order to prevent the police from seizing the evidence.

Once the vehicle was stopped, the two occupants were placed under arrest and advised of their Miranda Rights. The operator – suspect #2 – produced a Puerto Rico driver's license and identified himself as Emanuel Lopez from Puerto Rico. When asked what part of Puerto Rico he is from, he stated he was from Rio Pierdas. The detective asked him what part of the country it was in and suspect #2 said it was in the northwest. Detective O'Brien knew that Rio Pierdas in the north east part of the country. Suspect #2 did not know his telephone number there and when asked when he was there last, suspect #2 said it was years ago.

Detective O'Brien then showed him the Puerto Rico License he produced and stated the picture was a very recent photo. Suspect #2 then stated that he was in Puerto Rico in November. When asked what address he stayed at, suspect #2 did not answer other than to say he wanted a lawyer present. No more questions were asked, but it was apparent to Detective O'Brien that the license was counterfeit and the suspect was being deceitful.

Suspect #2 had two folds of money ($100 and $300) in his pocked and a cell phone, which continuously rang during the arrest and report writing. Detective Ward answered one call from a woman who asked for two and wanted one on the cuff. The detectives knew that the jargon referred to getting two bags of drugs and only paying for one. Detective Ward pretended to be suspect #2 and set up a meeting with the caller, who then told the detective that she was trying to purchase cocaine from "Tony." The passenger of the vehicle – suspect #3 – stated he could not speak English and no questions were asked of him. Officer Watkins transported the two prisoners to the Quincy Police Station where they were booked.

During booking, suspect #2 gave false information about his identity. However, a fingerprint check revealed a different name, confirmed by a recent arrest photo on a guilty finding of possession with intent to distribute a Class A substance in 2008. His license to operate a motor vehicle was also suspended. Suspect #2 – a 25-year-old Roslindale resident – was charged with Distribution of a Class A substance (subsequent offense), conspiracy to violate the Controlled Substance Laws, operating a motor vehicle after license suspended, counterfeit license, and false info to police after arrest.

The Puerto Rico driver's license number in suspect #2's possession was run through the LEAPS computer and came back belong to Erick DeJesus Lopez. Detective O'Brien believed that suspect #2 obtained a stolen identity and used that information to have a counterfeit Puerto Rico license and a Puerto Rico Election Identification Card made with his photo on it, in order to conceal his identify, conceal his immigration status, and to mislead the police.

Suspect #3 – a 27-year-old Roxbury resident – was charged with Distribution Class A and conspiracy to violate the CSL.

Suspect # 1 – a 22-year-old Wareham resident – was allowed to leave the scene, but was charged with possession Class A and conspiracy to violate the CSL.

Council OKs $9M Bond For New Central School Site

the city's plans, win SBA approval, and secure authorization for 68% to 75% reimbursement of building costs from the state agency.

The former St. Ann's School, convent, and parish center compose the largest of the four parcels designated as the new school site. The site also includes two single-family homes on Hancock Street, and a lot owned by Eastern Nazarene College which is opposite Veterans Memorial Stadium and is currently the home of Lori Anne's Coffee Shop.

City Solicitor James Timmins told councillors he has purchase and sale agreements for all properties.

The City Council vote concluded more than five hours of review during two meetings as councillors analyzed the plans, the site, and the impact of a $9 million bond on the city budget and taxpayers during Monday's council session and a previous joint committee meeting.

In a formal statement issued Tuesday, Koch congratulated the councillors and the School Committee who supported the bond authorization, but chided Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who was one of the two councillors opposing the $9 million bond authorization.

"This City has been talking about replacing Central for more than 30 years and it's a great credit to our current City Council and School Committee that we have reached the point where this school will finally be built and built in the most cost-efficient way possible," said Koch.

JOSEPH FINN

DANIEL RAYMONDI

"I'm disappointed in Councillor Raymondi's vote considering his long history of support for education. My sense is that $9 million would not have been enough had the project been in Ward 2."

At Monday's meeting, Nick Puleo, director of the Department of Municipal Finance, outlined the project's financial issues, presenting the potential bond debt and possible re-payment schedule. On hand during both meetings were Timmins and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

In his comments, City Council President Kevin Coughlin expressed the difficulty experienced by both those favoring the bond and those who voted against it.

"There's a risk in every vote we take up here; there's a risk in terms of inaction (or action)," said Coughlin, Ward 3, who voted to approve the bond.

Coughlin called the school project "too important for us not to take advantage of this one-time opportunity. This is a necessity for our education program."

"I think we have one short opportunity," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who said he would vote for it but said it was time for the city to look globally at financial planning and "not do this in a piecemeal fashion.... We can end up really hurting households in this city."

"I'm looking at a Central Middle School in dire need, absolutely, positively, in dire need," said Councillor John Keenan, who voted for the bond authorization but also acknowledged a real estate tax hike shadowing the city.

"There will be a need for a tax increase; it's something we have to do," said Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee and the city's state senator.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro voted for the bond, but questioned the possibility of site contamination, the condition of the nearby motel and drainage issues.

Also voting in favor of the bond issue were Councillors Michael McFarland, Margaret Laforest, Ward 1, and Brian Palmucci, Ward 4.

Both Councillors Joseph Finn and Raymondi, Ward 2, opposed the bond and raised questions about the impact of new debt while the city is dealing with the high school bond, new labor contracts in 2012, contracted raises that could come due, and old debt.

"If the school were the only issue, clearly it's a bargain," said Finn who fears the long-term effect of the new debt.

"Across the country, cities have been slashing their budgets simply to meet their debt service. A few years down the line, will we be cutting teachers and cutting services?"

Raymondi focused on the previous school building plan which provided a 90% reimbursement to the city and asked what happened to it. "We had it. And then we didn't."

As for approving the bond, Raymondi described constituents losing their homes, struggling with water bills, less state aid, and real estate taxes.

"I didn't feel that that was in the best interest of the taxpayers or the city," Raymondi said Tuesday, "There are a lot of challenges that we have in this year's budget and there are continuing challenges ahead. What I didn't see last night was a plan to meet those challenges."

Asked for a response to Koch's statement, Raymondi described the previous school building plan which he supported.

Raymondi emphasized that would not have involved any land-taking or purchase as the new Central Middle School would be relocated to the former Quincy High School which would be renovated and updated.

Raymondi also asked Timmins to outline the sources of the $800,000 already used for the project.

Those funds are available through previous school bond issues, according to Timmins.

Timmins told councillors the SBA reimbursements could, also, cover site preparation, including possible environmental cleanup if necessary.

"We should apply once we do the demolition," Timmins said during earlier discussions. "They will consider reimbursing us for demolition."

Gutro also cited water problems in the area. "This is an opportunity to remedy the drainage in the neighborhood, not exacerbate it. If this doesn't happen now, it's not going to happen," said Gutro.

In his presentation, Puleo forecast bond payments for the entire project that would remain steady at roughly $1.5 million over 20 years.

"We are well below our debt limit," said Puleo. Keenan presented statistics showing the state's per capita average bond debt per person is $1,814 while Quincy's average bond debt is $855.

Puleo's charts included the sale of the current Central Middle School building for condominiums which would result in $4,000 each or $76,000 in new taxes each year.

The school is currently assessed for $12 million but the city's new Chief Assessor Peter Moran said the assessment should be considerably lower.

Sen. Brown Pledges Full Support On Downtown Project

"Whatever the mayor needs – and he has not been shy about it – we'll help," Brown added."

During the interview, Brown outlined some of the legislative proposals he backs to help boost Bay State jobs. He also commented on his stunning victory in the special U.S. senate election last January, his bid for a full six-year term next fall and gave advice to the unemployed who are struggling to rejoin the workforce.

The Republican Brown was sworn in as the state's junior U.S. senator Feb. 4, 2010 after defeating Democrat Martha Coakley in a special election to fill the unexpired term of the late Ted Kennedy. Brown became the first Republican to be elected a U.S. senator in Massachusetts since Edward Brooke won his first term in 1966.

Brown's election was seen as one the biggest political upsets in state history. The seat he won had been held by a Democrat for some 58 years. The last Republican to hold the seat was Henry Cabot Lodge who was unseated by Democrat – and future U.S. President – John F. Kennedy in 1952.

"Elections are always decided by a whole host of different issues, but one of the things I think people in Massachusetts were looking for last year was someone who would go down to Washington as an independent voice," Brown said when asked about the main factor in his victory. "And I'm very proud of the fact that I have done in the last year what I said I was going to do on my campaign: represent the people of Massachusetts in an independent manner, approach each and every piece of legislation with an open mind and vote with the interests of my state first and foremost, regardless of political party or ideology.

"People wanted a plain talker and someone who would be clearly attentive to their needs," he added.

Brown was asked if he believed the Massachusetts Democratic Party was "re-energized" by his Republican victory, especially in light of the Democratic sweep in every Congressional and Massachusetts Constitutional office in last November's election.

"I'll leave that up to the political pundits to decide... I know it's always important for people to get involved in the election process."

But he also said he hopes Democratic Party leaders will "take the politics out" of the Congressional redistricting process later this year. Because the state's population has not grown as much as some other states over the past 10 years, Massachusetts will lose one of its 10 Congressional seats. Nine new districts must be drawn before the 2012 election cycle.

Brown supports an independent commission to oversee the redistricting process in an effort to eliminate gerrymandering which is the practice of redrawing electoral districts to gain an electoral advantage for a political party.

"We should have an open and fair redistricting process," Brown said.

SEN. SCOTT BROWN outside the U.S Capitol in Washington, D.C. with his pick-up truck, a 2005 GMC Canyon which became a symbol of his successful grass-roots campaign to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. Ted Kennedy. "It's my truck, I still drive it," the senator said.

Jobs, he said, will be the main issue of his 2012 re-election bid.

"Wherever I go in Massachusetts or throughout our country, the issue that weighs most on people's minds is jobs," Brown said. "Too many families are still trying to make ends meet and our workers are still pounding the pavement looking for work.

"While I don't have a 2,000-page bill that will single-handedly fix our problems, I believe there are things we can do immediately to provide a jolt to our economy. That's why I recently introduced a series of targeted legislation to boost jobs in the Bay State. My plan is to work incrementally on bills that, if passed, will help revitalize the Massachusetts economy."

Brown highlighted three of those proposals which he believes will help generate jobs in the Quincy area. They are the Innovate America Act, Medical Device Relief Act and the Hire a Hero Act.

The Innovate America Act is bi-partisan legislation introduced by Brown and Minnesota Democrat Amy Klobuchar. Brown said it would help revitalize America's innovative edge and ability to compete in the global economy.

Specifically, Brown said the Act would cut spending and red tape and help businesses utilize research and development for new products, boost successful education programs, and promote U.S. exports in new markets to strengthen American economic leadership.

Brown said the legislation would also increase the competitiveness of small-and-medium-sized businesses by focusing on turning research and new technologies created at universities into products; promoting and rewarding schools that focus on science, technology, engineering and math; and reducing red tape and production costs for domestic manufacturers.

Medical Device Tax Relief

Brown called the medical device industry "critical" to the Massachusetts economy. This legislation would repeal the 2.3 percent excise tax on medical device manufacturers. The tax, part of the current health care law, will take effect on the sale of medical devices after Dec. 31, 2012.

"This tax dampens innovation, stifles growth, and restricts the flow of investment capital, all of which puts jobs in Massachusetts in jeopardy," Brown said. His legislation would repeal this tax and "does so in a way that does not increase the national debit," he added. The Brown proposal fully offsets the cost of repealing this tax by cutting unobligated and unspent dollars and returning that money to the Treasury.

Tax Withholding Relief Act:

This would repeal the three percent contracting withholding law which mandates that federal, state and local governments withhold three percent of nearly all contract payments made to private companies, as well as Medicare payments, farm payments, and certain grants. Brown said the provision has generated huge opposition from industry groups and some local governments, and the Congressional Budget Office considers it an unfunded mandate on local governments.

Without relief, Brown said this "three percent stealth tax will hit companies across the Commonwealth and the country by the end of the year."

Hire A Hero Act:

Brown, who is a member of the Massachusetts National Guard, said finding jobs in the civilian economy is a major problem for returning veterans and Guard members. "Right now almost 20 percent of members of the Guard are unemployed – often because employers are worried that they will have to leave their positions if they do get deployed."

Brown's bill would extend a tax credit (The Work Opportunity Tax Credit) to businesses that put "our heroes back to work." Small business employers with no more than 100 employees qualify for this credit.

"We have an obligation to support our National Guard and Reserve Components while they are fighting to keep us safe, as well as when they return home," Brown said. "It's only fair to expand a tax credit that is currently granted for hiring former felons to also include those who are defending our country."

Brown said the economy during the last year has seen some positive signs but remains relatively flat.

"While we have seen some positive signs of late, times are still very tough and our unemployment rate is still too high," Brown said. "I'm hopeful that in this new Congress, we can put aside partisan differences and work together on commonsense solutions that will help our economy and put people back to work."

He acknowledged the job market for some long-time unemployed workers "is still tough out there." He said some unemployed workers should consider being re-trained to find work in the bio-tech and high tech sectors.

"I would encourage anyone looking for a job to do everything you can to get the tools and resources that will help you compete, whether by taking an extra class at a community college or making sure your credentials are up to date," he said.

Brown holds the same U.S. Senate seat that was held by John Quincy Adams.

Quincy – a longtime Democratic stronghold – went in Brown's win column in the Senate election. The city was considered a bellwether in the Senate race by Brown and his supporters and winning Quincy proved to be a good omen on Election Night.

"I am extremely grateful for the support I received from the people of Quincy. The city really represents the pulse of the state, and I enjoy coming back to visit whenever I can."

Brown said he was honored last July when he was invited to be the keynote speaker at the John Quincy Adams Presidential wreath laying ceremony at United First Parish Church.

"It's such an honor to represent the seat that John Quincy Adams held before he became our 6th president. My wife and I also have visited and toured Peacefield (part of the Adams National Historical Site) and last year I was thrilled to speak at the Quincy Historical Board Dinner," Brown added.

Our commitment is to provide, quality, accessible health care for all.

Manet Community Health Center is pleased to announce the Immunization Equity program, in collaboration with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Office of Health Equity and City of Quincy Health Department.

This season, protect yourself and those around you by getting a flu vaccine.

Steps to Prevent the Flu:

- Get vaccinated!
- Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it. No tissue available? Cough into your sleeve or elbow, not your hands.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after you cough or sneeze. Alcohol-based hands cleaners are also effective.
- If you get sick, stay home. CDC recommends that you stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to keep from infecting them.

For more information on the seasonal flu, where to get vaccinated or upcoming events in Quincy and the South Shore, contact Hawraa Alsaad, Access Outreach at 857.403.0458.

Sovereign Bank is a Member FDIC and a wholly owned subsidiary of Banco Santander, S.A. © 2011 Sovereign Bank | Sovereign and Santander, its logo and FlexLock are registered trademarks of Sovereign Bank and Santander, respectively, or their affiliates or subsidiaries in the United States and other countries. *Savings estimate based on a $200,000, 30-year mortgage with an interest rate of 4.875% which corresponds to an APR of 5.040% (after 0.125% mortgage discount is applied) with a loan to value of less than 80% and a monthly payment of principal and interest (excluding taxes and insurance) of $1052.42 . Interest rate used is for savings estimate only and may not reflect current available interest rate. Savings estimate assumes that loan is outstanding for 30 years, which is not typical. Average length of a Sovereign loan is 67 months. The estimated savings for an average Sovereign mortgage customer who pays off his/her mortgage loan in 67 months will be about $1273.83. Individual savings will vary depending on the amount and length of your loan. The e-pay discount is available for some adjustable rate mortgages but the discount is only available during the initial interest rate period. All applications are subject to credit approval. To receive the 0.125% e-pay discount, you must apply for a new mortgage loan, including a refinancing loan, before 3/28/11, must have or open any Sovereign checking account (within 12 days of loan settlement) and must request and maintain automatic payment of the monthly payment due on your Sovereign mortgage from that account. The checking account must remain open while your mortgage loan is outstanding with sufficient funds to pay your monthly payment or the rate discount will be terminated. One discount per loan. Cannot be combined with other offers. Mortgage must close within 30 days. Available on property in CT, DE, MA, MD, ME, NH, NJ, NY, PA, RI and VT. Offer is limited; certain loan programs are excluded. Contact your Mortgage Development Officer for details. To get the FlexLock Home Equity Line of Credit Fixed Introductory APR and variable "go to" APR shown, you must apply between 1/1/11 and 3/31/11, must have or open a Sovereign checking or money market savings account, and use automatic payment from the qualifying account. The introductory APR will apply only during the first 6 billing cycles after your FlexLock line is opened. Thereafter, the APR, including the APR on any existing balance, will convert to the applicable variable "go to" APR. "Go to" APR on FlexLock line may vary monthly based on the latest U.S. Prime Rate as published in The Wall Street Journal as of the first business day of the month, plus a margin of 0.74% for lines of $100,000 - $750,000 (now 3.990% APR). Other APRs available on other line amounts; Maximum APR is 18%. Minimum APR is 3.240%. The variable APR may also increase if automatic payment from the qualifying account is discontinued. All APRs are for new first lien mortgage loans, including your FlexLock line, do not exceed 80% of the value of your 1 - 4 family owner-occupied home in MA, RI, CT, NH, NJ, PA, DE, ME, VT or DC. There is a $490 termination fee if you close the line within 36 months. An annual fee, if any, will be charged during the Draw Period, and will be $0, $25 or $50, depending on the Sovereign deposit account you maintain, and may change if you change the deposit account. The annual fee will equal $0 as long as you maintain a Sovereign Premier, Business Owner Premier, Premier Partnership, Team Member Private or Team Member Checking Account or Premier Money Market Savings Account. An annual fee of $25 will be charged as long as you maintain a Sovereign Preferred or Preferred Partnership Checking Account or Preferred Money Market Savings Account. An annual fee of $50 will be charged if you do not maintain one of the above deposit accounts. A $125 non-refundable fee will be charged if your property is held in trust. The $50 fixed rate lock fee for each lock-in request is waived through 3/31/11. Property insurance is, and flood insurance may be, required. FlexLock insurance use is subject to the terms of the Sovereign Home Equity Line of Credit Agreement, including terms that permit lines to be suspended, reduced or terminated in certain circumstances. Maximum line amount is $750,000. If your home is on the market for sale at the time of application, you are not eligible for this offer. Offer not available if you have received an introductory rate on a FlexLock line within 12 months of your application date. APRs and other terms accurate as of 2/2/11 and may change thereafter. Applications subject to approval.

Bathtub Refinishing Best Left to Pros

Q: I've got an old claw-foot tub that looks shabby but is pretty sound that I'd like to install in the bathroom I'm remodeling. I'd like to refinish it, but am not sure what materials to use or how long it would take. What do you recommend?
– Jim H., Philadelphia

A: You do have two options: the do-it-yourself refinish or a professional refinish. I may once have espoused the idea that you should tackle a tub refinishing job yourself, but over time have found that I prefer to spend my energies on other aspects of a bathroom remodel and not on trying to restore tubs and sinks.

With the do-it-yourself option there's the investment in the right equipment and materials to do the job, and numerous hours are required to get it done. The tub needs to be scrubbed beyond clean and the surface prepped for the refinishing medium. Then the finish needs to be applied properly to avoid streaking or later cracking or peeling. All of this takes time and care, and you've got to work in a very well-ventilated area – and still wear a protective filter mask, particularly when working with refinishing materials.

Even with all that, the refinish may go poorly and after hours of work you have a less-than-ideal-looking tub. With a claw-foot tub, which can add beauty and value to a bathroom, you want to really make it look good and last a long time.

This is where professional refinishing comes in. One of the bonuses of hiring a pro to do the refinish job is that this is a pretty competitive service in most areas, with several companies vying for your business. So you can get multiple quotes before making the decision to either have a professional handle the refinish, or attempt the job yourself.

HOME TIP: Always get a written estimate from a professional before agreeing to start any refinishing work.

Build Up, Falling Ice and Snow Can Lead To Damaged Natural Gas Equipment and Elevated CO Levels

Clear Ice, Snow From Gas Meters, Appliance Vents

There may be a lull in the round of storms that plagued the northeast from late December until early February, but dangerous remnants of those storms remain.

Many roofs are still laden with ice and snow and the mounds of snow created from plowing, shoveling and snow blowing have shown little sign of melting. This is why National Grid continues to urge everyone to take precautions to avoid the potential hazards these conditions present.

Ice and Snow Build Up Poses Risk To Gas Equipment:

The build up of ice and snow around or over natural gas meters, regulators, pipes and vents for natural gas appliances can pose a serious safety risk. Ice and snow falling from a roof can damage gas meters or service connections to customers' homes or businesses, resulting in potential gas leaks. Home and business owners should see that snow and ice build-up is properly removed to prevent damage to this equipment. Anyone detecting the odor of natural gas should call National Grid. If the odor is present inside your building, leave the premises immediately and call from outside or a neighboring building.

Snow removal equipment operators should also be aware of the presence of natural gas equipment and avoid coming in contact with meters or piling snow around vents mounted on the outside of buildings.

Ice and snow blocking vents have the potential to cause carbon monoxide (CO) to back up into a building, resulting in carbon monoxide poisoning to those inside. National Grid advises natural gas customers to closely inspect areas around and over gas meters, service hook-ups and vents, for ice and snow. Whenever possible, use a broom to remove accumulated ice and snow from around natural gas equipment. Customers are also encouraged to test CO detectors in the home to ensure that they are in working order.

Where to Call -- Carbon Monoxide

If you suspect carbon monoxide is present in your home, go outside immediately and breathe deeply; if symptoms are severe, call 911 immediately.

After calling 911, call the National Grid emergency contact number. In Massachusetts, that number is 800-233-5325.

Where to call – Natural gas incidents or concerns:

In New England, National Grid customers should report gas-related incidents or concerns by contacting the company's Customer Service Contact Center at 800-233-5325.

New Cost-Saving Flood Insurance Option From FEMA

(NAPSA)-There may be good news for residents and business owners in locations recently designated as high-risk flood areas. Starting in 2011, the Federal Emergency Management Agency's (FEMA's) low-cost insurance policy may be available to help them save on flood protection.

Making New Insurance Requirements More Affordable

Flood risks are dynamic and change over time due to a variety of factors, including changes in the natural landscape, the impacts of land use and development, and the condition of flood control structures such as levees.

Since mandated by Congress in 2003, a multi-year effort has been underway to update the nation's flood maps to reflect these changes. The new maps are providing more accurate information about where flooding is most likely to occur.

A NEW savings option on insurance coverage may help those facing increased flood risk.

As a result, many property owners are finding that their risk has changed and they may now be required to purchase flood insurance. Fortunately, FEMA understands the financial burden this may place on some property owners and is expanding eligibility for its popular lower-cost flood insurance policy.

A New Insurance Option

Beginning January 1, 2011, a new insurance rating option from FEMA's National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) will allow many property owners who previously didn't qualify, to take advantage of the low-cost insurance for two years before they are required to pay standard rates.

The program will make Preferred Risk Policies (PRPs), which start at just $129 a year, available for properties that have been newly mapped into high-risk areas due to a flood map revision on or after October 1, 2008.

"Floods are the nation's most costly and frequent natural disaster and those who are now in the highest risk areas really must have flood insurance protection. But we recognize the challenge of additional expenses in the current economy. This new option provides time for residents to adjust to the higher risk level-and continue their flood coverage at a more affordable rate," said Edward L. Connor, Acting Federal Insurance and Mitigation Administrator.

While extended eligibility for the PRP does not become effective until the start of the new year, policyholders who believe they may qualify should contact their insurance agent for further details.

After two years at the reduced PRP rates, policies will increase to standard rates. However, there are other options to reduce cost, including a grandfathering provision, use of elevation ratings and higher deductible policies.

FEMA encourages residents to learn more about their risk and consider flood insurance to safeguard their home and assets.

National Fire Protection Agency: Peak Season For Home Fires Isn't Over

NFPA Offers Reminders For Keeping Fire-Safe During Winter

Half of all U.S. home heating fires occur in December, January and February.

That's according to the Quincy-based National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA) Home Fires Involving Heating Equipment report, which shows that heating equipment is a leading cause of winter fires. In fact, heating equipment was involved in an estimated 66,100 reported home structure fires in 2008, causing 480 civilian deaths, 1,660 civilian injuries, and $1.1 billion in direct property damage.

NFPA and the U.S. Fire Administration (USFA) are working together to remind everyone that home fires are more prevalent in winter than in any other season. For more information about the organizations' joint safety campaign, "Put a Freeze on Winter Fires," and a complete list of winter safety tips, visit http://www.nfpa.org/winter.

"Winter fires are highly preventable," says Lorraine Carli, NFPA's vice president of communications. "Every tragic news story about a devastating winter fire is a reminder that simple precautions can prevent deadly consequences."

Audio available: USFA Acting Fire Administrator Glenn Gaines and NFPA's Sharon Gamache explain how to stay safe when it is cold outside. Winter Safety Podcasts (Episode 6: Winter Storms)

Space heaters resulted in far more fires and fire fatalities than central heating devices. Between 2004 and 2008, fixed (stationary) and portable space heaters (excluding fireplaces, chimneys, and chimney connectors, but including wood stoves) annually accounted for, on average, one-third of reported U.S. home heating fires and four out of five associated civilian deaths.

Meanwhile, an estimated 15,200 reported creosote fires – 23 percent of all home heating fires – annually resulted in an average of four civilian deaths, 17 civilian injuries, and $33 million in direct property damage. Creosote is a sticky, oily, combustible substance created when wood does not burn completely. It rises into the chimney as a liquid and deposits on the chimney wall.

One in four heating equipment fires started due to a failure to clean equipment. Other causes include placing a heat source too close to combustibles, and unclassified mechanical failures or malfunctions. Roughly half of all home heating fire deaths resulted from fires started by heating equipment that was too close to something that could burn, such as upholstered furniture, clothing, or a mattress or bedding.

In addition to heating fires being a concern in the coming months, NFPA would like to remind the public that cooking fires are the leading cause of home fires all year round. This time of year, whether you are feasting on Super Bowl Sunday or simply cooking to warm up on a bitter cold day, it is important to stay in the kitchen when frying, grilling, or broiling. Unattended cooking is the leading cause of cooking fires.

NFPA is an international nonprofit organization whose mission is to reduce the worldwide burden of fire and other hazards on the quality of life by providing and advocating consensus codes and standards, research, training, and education. Visit NFPA's website at http://www.nfpa.org

Owning A Home Can Pay Dividends

(NAPSA)-There are many good reasons to become a homeowner. In addition to the social benefits, the feeling of autonomy and sense of community investment, there are the tax benefits. One major tax benefit is the mortgage interest deduction (MID). The MID has been part of the federal tax code since 1913 and helps families offset the cost of homeownership.

The ability to deduct the interest paid on a mortgage can translate into significant savings come tax time. For example, a family who bought a home this year with a $200,000, 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage, assuming an interest rate of 4.5 percent, could save nearly $3,500 in federal taxes when they file next year.

"In today's market, eight out of 10 home buyers must borrow money to buy a home," said National Association of Realtors(r) chief economist, Lawrence Yun. "For aspiring homeowners who don't have hundreds of thousands of dollars in savings to buy a home outright, tax benefits like the mortgage interest deduction help them begin building their future through homeownership."

Of the taxpayers who itemize deductions, 80 percent utilize this benefit. This is true for people of all income levels. According to the most recent IRS tax return data available, 65 percent of the families who claim this deduction earn less than $100,000 per year.

"People who benefit most from the MID are first-time home buyers and younger homeowners," said Yun. "These families can use the money they save to build their emergency fund, apply it toward their children's future education or help them improve the quality of their lives right now. That's just one of the ways owning a home can pay dividends."

For more information about the deduction and other tax benefits of owning a home, visit www.houselogic.com.

NORTH QUINCY RED RAIDERS – North Quincy qualified for the Division II South Sectional hockey tournament following a 3-2 victory over Scituate High School on Sunday afternoon. The Red Raiders, with a 7-3-7 overall record and a 5-1-5 Patriot League record, can claim a share of the Patriot League crown with Scituate and Pembroke if they defeat rival Quincy High School on Saturday at 8:15 p.m. at the QYA.

A Share of the League Title In Play Saturday Versus QHS

By SEAN BRENNAN

Getting back to playing as a team and not - 20 guys, 20 cabs - has pushed the North Quincy Red Raiders back into the Division II South Sectional hockey tournament.

Quite a reversal from the 2009 season in which North Quincy stumbled to an uninspired 6-12-2 record during head coach Matt Gibbons first year behind the bench.

In hindsight, last season was not necessarily a total failure. Gibbons and his staff needed time to figure out what would work and what would not, and, to the credit of the coaching staff and players, the Red Raiders came back in 2010 and, right from the beginning, began to form team unity and a reliance on every skater from 1-20, and the results have been impressive.

Over the weekend North Quincy (7-3-7 overall) defeated league opponent Scituate High School, 3-2, to earn the 20 points needed to gain entrance into the Division II South Sectionals. The momentous victory over the Sailors keeps the Red Raiders on pace to claim a share of the Patriot League title.

As of Tuesday, North Quincy sat at 15 points in the Patriot League with a 5-1-5 record; Scituate finished league play with a total of 17 points, as did Pembroke, which means that if the Raiders can defeat rival Quincy High School this Saturday (8:15 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena), they will share the league crown with the Sailors and the Titans.

There are no tiebreakers used to determine a sole Patriot League champion. However, North Quincy finished the year 2-0 against Scituate and 0-0-2 versus Pembroke.

"We had high expectations heading into last season," said Gibbons. "But we didn't really play as a team and that falls on me and the coaching staff. I could have done some stuff better but we learned from it and came back this year with a better idea of how to handle things."

"This year we came in with the mantra of 'win as a team, lose as a team, tie as a team,'" Gibbons continued. "That has been our focus. We wanted to really become a team where every player was held accountable and it has been through team building, senior leadership and guys' buying into the system that it has worked. It has been nice to see. Our goals at the start of the season were to qualify for the state tournament and compete for a league title."

Against Scituate, in what up to now had been the biggest and most important game of the season, North Quincy senior captain Dereck Graham, with 12 seconds left in the third period, collected a loose rebound in front of the Sailors' goal mouth and buried the game-winner.

Team captains Brendan Glynn and Michael Nelson provided additional support on offense as both forwards finished the game with a goal and two assists, respectively.

Junior netminder James Dunn was a brick wall in goal for North Quincy, finishing with 25-plus saves.

Scituate got an early first period jump on North Quincy, skating out to a 2-0 advantage, but in the middle period, Glynn and Nelson scored minutes apart to even the score at 2-2 entering the third period.

"Scituate took it to us in the first period and we quickly went down 2-0," Gibbons said. "We couldn't sustain any pressure, but during the break the coaching staff made some adjustments and after Brendan and then Mike scored minutes apart, our confidence went up."

"The third period was back and forth," continued Gibbons, "and James Dunn made a couple of unbelievable saves to keep it tied. Dereck was in the right spot at the end to score his goal. It was a great win."

With a shot for a league crown up for grabs Saturday, the number one reason for this marked improvement has been the contributions of a number of skaters. Glynn, who last year at times, was looked at, maybe too much to produce, has shined, again. Through 17 games he has posted 26 points (15 goals) even as opposing teams continue to key on him defensively.

"Last year teams would do their best to stop Brendan because he was our only real scoring threat," said Gibbons. "This season he has received some help but he has still been our best offensive player and he continues to come up big in important games."

One Red Raider who has upped his overall game immensely has been Graham who has been the ying to Glynn's yang this winter. During his first three seasons playing at the varsity level, Graham recorded one goal. Through 17 games this year, the forward has scored eight goals for 19 points. His game-winner against Scituate can be added to a list of big-time goals he has scored for North Quincy in 2010.

"Dereck has really stepped up his game," Gibbons stated. "He has grown into his role as a leader. He has been unbelievable. He has become a top-7 forward in the Patriot League through hard work. Dereck's productivity has been a nice surprise."

Senior forward Joe Kowlski has turned into a solid second-line player and Nelson has made a habit of coming up large in games as well.

On top of the quality forwards that North Quincy trots out, the Red Raiders' defensemen have stepped up to the challenge in their own right. Underclassmen Rudy Tryon, Michael Adduci, Tim Marks, James Doherty and Nick Furey have developed into a stringent backline, causing havoc on defense and producing points on offense.

"Our defense has been playing very well," said Gibbons. "They are juniors and sophomores right now and they are already considered by some to be the best group in the league."

North Quincy was scheduled to travel to Raynham on Wednesday to take on nonleague Archbishop Williams HS. This game held special meaning for Coach Matt Gibbons, as he and his brother, Mark, an assistant on the Red Raiders staff, were coaching against their younger brother, Dan, a senior playing his final home game for the Bishops.

NQ Notes: The last time the Red Raiders qualified for the Division II South Sectionals back in 2009, North Quincy entered tournament play as an eight seed. The Raiders went on to defeat Plymouth North, 3-2, in the first-round before bowing out in the quarterfinals to top-seeded Canton HS, 3-1, to finish the season at 13-7-3... North Quincy played to a 5-5 tie against nonleague Brockton HS on Feb. 12.

All-Important Game Versus Scituate Held Tuesday; Season Ends Today Against Middleboro HS

Presidents On The Cusp Of A Patriot League Title

By SEAN BRENNAN

Let's call Tuesday night's Quincy and Scituate Patriot League-deciding girls basketball game The Showdown at the Scituate High School O.K. Corral.

The clash between the Presidents and Sailors held that much importance.

Quincy (15-2 overall, 12-1 in the Patriot League) entered the contest with a legitimate shot at a Patriot League title as did Scituate (16-2, 12-1), with the winner coming out as the best girl's hoops team in what is considered a competitive and balanced league.

It should be noted that both Quincy and Scituate still have one league game remaining on their respective schedules. The Presidents end their league slate today (Thursday) at Middleboro HS while the Sailors end their year against Hanover HS; both teams enter these games as obvious favorites.

Tuesday's game, which was played after The Quincy Sun went to press for the week, was a rematch of a Jan. 7 affair, played at QHS that was won by the Sailors 68-61.

With the outcome – a Patriot League championship - undecided before deadline day Tuesday, what we can tell you is that the Presidents will, regardless of victory or defeat, be a high seed in the upcoming Division II South Sectional tournament and will host a first-round home playoff game.

Quincy entered Tuesday's tilt on an extended winning streak. Scituate was the last team to knock off the girls from Coddington Street and that was over five weeks ago. Since the beginning of 2011, the Presidents have continued to improve on both the offensive and defensive ends of the parquet and, they have done it, with a roster that includes four seniors and seven juniors.

Heady stuff for a program that seems to be gaining considerable steam at the most opportune time on their schedule.

"We still have so many things that we can improve on," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch, who added, "but the last several games we have been playing with so much confidence. It isn't overconfidence. We have just improved throughout the season and we have given ourselves the opportunity to play for a league title."

There are probably not too many basketball junkies who would have seen this scenario coming all the way back in early December. But here Quincy is. The momentum began following a down-to-the-minute 43-41 season-opening victory over rival North Quincy and has steadily continued since. A 4-0 start was interrupted in the opening round of the annual Abigail Adams Tournament after Weymouth slipped them their first loss, 48-38, but the Presidents moved on and have not looked back.

Quality victories over North Quincy (another 43-40 decision on Dec. 29 and a 44-30 win on Jan. 21), Silver Lake (48-44 on Jan. 14) and Duxbury (59-40 on Jan. 28) preceded recent wins over Hanover (59-45) and Hingham (62-46). The Presidents closed out nonleague Randolph 57-37 last Friday.

Kiley McDonald finished with 14 points and 11 rebounds; Katie Lowry scored 11 points and Nicole Lamie added nine points and six boards against the Bulldogs.

Against league foe Hanover on Feb. 8, junior captain Kiley McDonald dominated the Indians. McDonald went off for 21 points and 11 rebounds as the Presidents earned their fourteenth win of the season.

Fellow juniors Nicole Lamie and Juli Tomer contributed with 12 points and nine points, respectively, and Lamie was also sharp from behind the arc, burying four first-half three pointers.

"I thought this was one of Kiley's best games of the season," said Bretsch, "and Nicole and Juli really gave us some good minutes."

Earlier this month, versus Hingham, Quincy jumped out to a 27-20 halftime lead only to watch as the Harbor-women stormed back to cut the deficit to three before the Presidents pulled away to a decisive 62-46 win.

"This was a much closer game than the final score indicated," stated Bretsch. "Hingham plays good defense but when the chips looked down my seniors stepped up."

Senior Kori Sorensen specifically played well. She scored a season-high 27 points to go along with five three-pointers. McDonald finished with 28 points including 21 in the second half.

The 2010-2011 Quincy roster includes seniors Kori Sorensen, Christina Cahill, Stella Edwards and Nelida Rodriguez and juniors Emily Nguyen, Juli Tomer, Maria Berberan, Katie Lowry, Victoria Wallace, Nicole Lamie and Kiley McDonald.

For The First Time Since 2007-2008

North Quincy Advances Into State Tourament

By SEAN BRENNAN

For the first time since the 2007-2008 season, the North Quincy Red Raiders have qualified for the Division I South Sectional state tournament. The job was completed Feb. 8 following a 60-48 home victory over Patriot League opponent Whitman-Hanson High School.

"One of the goals we set for ourselves at the beginning of the season was to advance to the postseason," said NQHS head coach Kevin Barrett. "It is a good achievement for such a young team and to do it at 10-6 with games still to play shows me that these young players have already gained some valuable experience and should be ready to go once the tournament comes around."

"These kids now know what it takes to make the tournament," continued Barrett, "and that understanding is only going to help us get better the rest of this season and in seasons to come."

Against Whitman-Hanson, the Red Raiders got an early jump on the Panthers behind the play of sophomore guard Marquis McClendon who finished with a career-high 21 points. North Quincy (10-8 overall) entered the halftime break up four (28-24) before coming out in the third quarter and placing the clamps on Whitman-Hanson's offense.

By the end of the third quarter, the Raiders had increased their advantage from 28-24 to 40-26; the Panthers scored two total points in the quarter as North Quincy pulled away.

Again, as has been the case throughout the winter, it was team defense, which got the Red Raiders back into the state playoffs.

"Looking at our win-loss record, whenever we hold teams to the magic number of '54' we seem to win games," said Barrett. "When teams score above that number we tend to lose but when we hold teams to the high 40s and low 50s we usually have come out on top. The kids know now that if we can play defense and if we can rebound the basketball and limit teams to one shot and done we have a good chance of winning the game."

Junior forward Paul Cunniff finished with 15 points and ten rebounds and sophomore guard Dan Gould added 13 points. Junior guard Matty Costa contributed valuable minutes off the bench for North Quincy.

North Quincy lost to Silver Lake Regional, 60-56, last Friday, dropping them out of contention for a possible run at a Patriot League Keenan Division title, which was captured by Duxbury High School. Junior guard Dan Gould led all Red Raider scorers with 22 points.

The Red Raiders played at Duxbury HS on Tuesday night and are scheduled to end the regular season today (Thursday) with an away game at nonleague Dennis-Yarmouth (6:30 p.m.). Depending on how these games play out, North Quincy is going to finish the season at 12-8, 11-9 or 10-10. The more wins they finish with, the greater chance they have to avoid playing in a Division I South Sectional preliminary round game.

"Our position and where and when we play depends on the number of teams that are going to qualify," stated Barrett. "At this point, looking at some of the other teams, we may have to go on the road for our first game, but it really is still up in the air at this point."

"After the Dennis-Yarmouth game," Barrett continued, "I plan on giving the team a few days off to rest up and early next week we will come back to practice and get back-to-basics."

The Red Raiders had three student-athletes named to the Patriot League All-Star team. Junior captain Tim Liuzzo and sophomore guards Dan Gould and Marquis McClendon will represent the Keenan Division in the game.

The program, itself, was recognized by the rest of the Patriot League with its annual Sportsmanship Team Award, an award that means plenty to Barrett and his staff.

"It is a nice honor because it recognizes that we play the game the right way," he said. "It is a good way for the team and the players to represent their school and their city."

Taryn Urbanus Captures One-Meter Diving Title

Quincy/North Quincy Places 21st At South Sectionals

Junior captain Taryn Urbanus, for a second consecutive year, won the one-meter dive to lead the Quincy/North Quincy girls swimming and diving team to a 21st place finish at the South Sectional Swimming and Diving Championships held Sunday at the Zesiger Sports and Fitness Center on the MIT campus.

Urbanus, who had already swelled her 11-dive program record (436.85) a week ago with her Patriot League crown, totaled 381.75 points after six dives en route to establishing the new 11-dive standard of 494.05 points.

Q/NQ's relay unit of Hillary Wong, Jessica O'Donovan, Kat O'Connor and McKayla Johnston placed 21st in both the 200-yard medley relay and the 200-yard freestyle relay, swimming 2:06.48 and 1:52.34, respectively.

In her freshman season, McKayla Johnston finished 13th in the 200-yard freestyle (2:06.30) and 15th in the 100-yard freestyle, swimming a season-low time of 57.87.

Sophomore Kat O'Connor was 24th in the 50-yard freestyle followed by a 23rd place showing in the 100-yard freestyle (59.67). In the latter event, teammate Hillary Wong finished one place better at 22nd with her season-best effort of 59.44.

Quincy/North Quincy will compete in the State Swimming and Diving Championships Feb. 19-20 at Harvard University.

Quincy Youth Volleyball League Begins Feb. 27

The sport of girls' volleyball in Quincy has become synonymous with success. Between Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, the city can boast nine Division I State Championships; 22 Eastern Massachusetts Sectional Championships, dozens of All-Scholastics, dozens of college volleyball scholarships and 200+ collegiate players in Divisions 1,2 and 3.

Now all young female athletes who would like to carry on this grand tradition will have an outlet to improve their game.

This week it was announced that a Quincy Youth Volleyball League, sponsored by the Mass. Patriots Volleyball Club, would be formed and coached by Jim and Holly Rendle.

Starting on Sunday, Feb. 27 at North Quincy High School, girls in grades 4-6 can come and participate. The following is the schedule of upcoming practices:

On Feb. 27 registration will begin at 12:15 p.m. (at a cost of $50) with practice from 12:45-2 p.m.

The rest of the schedule lays out on 3/6 from 4-5:15 p.m., 3/13 from 5:45-7 p.m., 3/20 from 4-5:15 p.m., 3/27 from 5:45-7 p.m., 4/3 from 4-5:15 p.m., 4/10 from 5:45-7 p.m., and 4/17 from 4-5:15 p.m.

QRD Announces Feb. Vacation Gym Schedule

Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, announced on Monday that the Quincy Recreation Department would conduct an expanded schedule of supervised gym programs during the upcoming school vacation period.

Gyms will be supervised from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. for free activities for boys and girls from age eight through high school. Nine school gyms will be open in various neighborhoods throughout the city and will feature activities such as basketball, floor hockey, gym games and dodge ball.

Registration is done at each location and those ages eight-Grade 5 will attend from 9-11 a.m. Those in Grade 6-12 will attend from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. Participants may attend the program of their choice; some minor changes in times may occur in some locations to accommodate differences in enrollment.

In addition to the weekday schedule, the ongoing regularly scheduled Saturday morning programs will be conducted on Saturdays, Feb. 19 and Feb. 26. Participants are requested to wear sneakers at all locations.

Including the Saturday locations, the QRD will supervise over 180 hours for free programming and will promote beneficial active lifestyle among Quincy youth.

"Over the vacation week these free programs are also well received by many of Quincy's working parents," said Welch.

There will be no programs on Monday, Feb. 21 (President's Day). The expanded schedule for the rest of the week is as follows:

The schedule of gyms for Tuesday, Feb. 22 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. is as follows: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Atlantic and Point Webster.

Wed., Feb. 23 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.: Atherton Hough, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Atlantic and Point Webster.

Thursday, Feb. 24 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.: Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Atlantic and Point Webster.

Friday, Feb. 25 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Atlantic and Point Webster.

For additional information, contact the QRD at 617-376-1394 or visit www.QuincyRec.com.

QRD Announces Feb. Vacation Pool Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department's supervised Swim Schedule at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool for the Feb. school vacation week has been announced.

According to Welch, the pool will be open for evening swims on Tuesday, Feb. 22 through Friday, Feb. 25.

The schedule is as follows:

Family Swims from 6-6:50 p.m., Senior Swims from 7-7:45 p.m., and Adult Swims from 7:55-8:45 p.m. All swims will be supervised by QRD staff trained in accordance with standards of the American Red Cross.

Participants may use current pool participation cards or pay a guest fee at the pool lobby entrance. Additional information is available at QuincyRec.com or by calling 617-376-1394.

Patrick Foley To Host Fundraiser Feb. 26

Patrick J. Foley, of Quincy, will be hosting a fundraising event on Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. at J.J. Foley's Café, located at 117 East Berkeley Street, Boston, for his upcoming running of the Boston Marathon; this will be Foley's sixth time participating in this historic race.

Foley will run this year, for a third time, on behalf of the organization CarePacks, a non-profit based out of Weymouth. CarePacks is dedicated to boosting the spirits of those serving and protecting our country. Their focus and goals are best described in their mission statement: "CarePacks is a non-profit organization – staffed and managed entirely by volunteers – that is dedicated to sending care packages to US troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. Founded in 2004, CarePacks' goal is to provide these soldiers with supplies to help improve their morale, mental health and quality of life, and to remind soldiers that they are remembered by people 'back home.'"

Foley, whose younger brother, Jeremiah, enlisted in the United States Marine Corps after graduating from high school and recently returned from deployment in Afghanistan, has risen close to $40,000 in the past two years for CarePacks.

His fundraising event on Feb. 26 will feature a silent auction and raffles.

For additional information on supporting Foley's cause, contact him at patrickjfoley3232@yahoo.com.

Quincy Medical Center Celebrates Lunar New Year

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently celebrated Lunar New Year with a special Lion Dance performance in the hospital lobby for employees, visitors and guests.

The first day of the Year of the Rabbit was Feb. 3. Day 7 of the 15-day Lunar New Year celebration – Feb. 9 – is considered to be everyone's birthday and one of the happiest days of the celebration, explained Wan Wu, owner of Kam Man Foods and member of the QMC Board of Trustees, before handing out lucky red envelopes to those gathered.

In addition to the performance by the Wah Lum Kung Fu and Tai Chi Academy, the celebration also included calligraphy demonstrations by artist Mike Mei, and lucky raffle drawings with prizes provided by Walgreens Pharmacy.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing quality, personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore.

A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has played a vital role in the community since 1890, serving the needs of its diverse patient population.

Quincy Medical Center is positioned for the health care system of the future, as it is a high value provider with outcomes at or better than most national quality benchmarks and it delivers this care in a cost efficient manner as one of the lowest cost providers in the region.

QMC has a clinical affiliation with Tufts Medical Center.

POSTURING

If you slouch over your desk all day, you may not realize how flawed your posture actually is. To see where you stand on the matter, try standing barefoot with your heels, backside, shoulder blades, and head against the wall. Then, tighten your abdominal muscles and breathe deeply. After that, step away from the wall. At that point, if your body recognizes this position and maintains it, you practice good posture. On the other hand, if you hold the position for a few seconds and then automatically slump, your posture could stand some improvement. Imagine elongating yourself from your head on down. Tighten your abdominal muscles and elongate your spine from the base up.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are experts at analyzing posture and spinal problems. We are trained in the art of detection and search for the problems that exist underneath poor posture. We address the cause, not just the symptoms. We are specially skilled in the techniques of spinal adjustments and knowledgeable in the prevention of neck, back, and other musculoskeletal problems. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The chiropractor can help you attain good posture by eliminating any tendencies your soft tissues may have that create imbalance in your structure.

Beware Of Glare For Safety

(NAPSA)-Good vision is an essential part of driving safely, and more than 90 percent of decisions and reactions made behind the wheel depend on it. While many believe a bright, sunny day is optimal for driving, the reality is that blinding glare from sun, snow and vehicles can be a significant contributing factor to fatal auto accidents. Additionally, a recent survey commissioned by Essilor of America, Inc., the world leader in eyeglass lenses, revealed the disturbing fact that 20 percent of eyeglass wearers sometimes drive without their prescription glasses and instead wear nonprescription sunglasses, quickly making day driving unnecessarily treacherous.

Glare Dangers

When driving, consider the following tips to minimize dangers from glare.

- Drive carefully and keep a safe distance between your car and the car ahead of you.
- Keep your car's windshield clean.
- Use the sun visor.
- Rest your eyes and take frequent breaks during sunny conditions.
- Purchase a pair of polarized, prescription sunglasses if you wear eyeglasses, as they cut the glare much more effectively than over-the-counter sunglasses.

The Importance Of Polarized Lenses

For blinding glare when driving, simple solutions abound in the form of polarized, prescription sunglasses. In fact, a clinical study conducted by Essilor as a precursor to the survey found that driver reaction times improve by one-third of a second for drivers who wear polarized lenses. For a car traveling 50 miles per hour, one-third of a second allows a driver to stop 23 feet sooner, or the length of an intersection. In glare-intense situations, polarized lenses, improve vision clarity by 75 percent, as opposed to ordinary sun lenses, allowing wearers to enjoy better clarity of vision.

Sixty percent of eyeglass wearers surveyed agree that when driving during the day, glare from sun and snow makes it difficult to see while driving; however, those with prescription sunglasses, particularly those with polarized lenses experience less trouble. Currently, only one-third of eyeglass wearers have prescription sunglasses with polarized lenses.

Stroke, Osteoporis Screenings At First Congregational Church Of Squantum March 2

Life Line Screening will offer stroke and osteoporosis screenings Wednesday, March 2 at First Congregational Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

Screenings identify potential cardiovascular conditions such as blocked arteries and irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which is a strong predictor of heart disease.

A bone density screening to assess osteoporosis risk is also offered and is appropriate for both men and women.

Packages start at $139. All five screenings take 60 to 90 minutes to complete.

Screenings are fast, non-invasive, painless, affordable and convenient.

Stroke is the third leading cause of death and a leading cause of permanent disability. Some 80 percent of stroke victims had no apparent warning signs prior to their stroke.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-877-237-1287.

Pre-registration is required.

Quincy United Methodist Church Participating In Cancer Society's Daffodil Days

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, is participating in the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days.

Over the next few weeks, the church congregation will collect money for the Cancer Society by purchasing daffodil bouquets and pots of daffodils. The drive is being coordinated by Jeannie O'Connor, chairperson of the church's Worship Committee.

"One of the most popular donations is the 'Gift of Hope,'" said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. "That's a bouquet of daffodils anonymously given to someone who has cancer.

"The bouquets are sent to area hospitals, and tell somebody that somebody else really cares. It's just one of the many missions at Quincy Community United Methodist Church. Another option is to send a small stuffed bear to a child who has cancer."

For more information, call 617-773-3319.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"Washington in the flesh is taken from us; we shall never behold him as our fathers did; but his memory remains, and I say, let us hang to his memory. Let us make a national festival and holiday of his birthday; and ever, as the 22nd of February returns, let us remember, that while these solemn and joyous rites of observance we celebrate the great anniversary, our fellow citizens on the Hudson, on the Potomac, from the southern plains to the western lakes, are engaged in the same offices of gratitude and love" . . . Oration by Edward Everett, circa 1856.

Between Washington's death on December 14, 1799, and the outbreak of the Civil War, the Washington legend acquired a cultic character that never had been equaled in American history.

Other heroes have come along to compete for attention in the national mythology. Each generation of Americans has its own candidate for the American pantheon. Yet it can be argued that only Washington and Lincoln truly belong to the ages . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Time is on your side in the early part of the week. But anything left undone by midweek will need to be put into rush mode. The weekend offers choices for you and someone special.

TAURUS (April 30 to May 20) Finally getting credit for a contribution is nice for all you idea-generating Ferdinands and Fernandas. But don't sit on your laurels under the cork tree. Use it as a first step to a bigger opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Despite the progress made, a hint of doubt might set in. That's OK. You need to stop and consider not only what you're doing but also how you are doing. Make adjustments where needed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The dreamer is dominant in the Moon Child's aspect, but a dollop of hardheaded practicality is coming up fast and jockeying for space. The challenge is to make room for both modes.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to start assessing what they've done and what they plan to do. Moving to a new environment – home or job-related – is a possibility for some Cats.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The week calls for Virgos to make tough decisions, but in a way that leaves the door open for changes. Ask for advice from someone who has been in the position you're in now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disappointments are never easy to take, but you have the ability to learn from them and go on to success. Meanwhile, continue to build up your contacts. You'll need them soon.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things might still be going much too slowly to suit you. But you need the time to make sure they're going in the right direction. It's easier to make a course correction now rather than later.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Showing some temperament at the way things are going is one way of getting your point across. Just don't overdo it, or you risk turning away more-moderate supporters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things could change more quickly this week than you like. But don't fret; you'll most likely find that you're up to the challenges. The weekend offers much-needed relaxation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Big challenge coming up? Uncross those fingers and believe that you're going to do well. And keep in mind that so many people have faith in your ability to succeed.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Testing the waters is a good way of learning about an opportunity before plunging right in. Ask more questions and be alert to any attempts to avoid giving complete answers.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making people – and animals, too – feel special and loved.

Squantum, Beechwood Knoll Schools Competing In 'Green Energy Challenge'

Squantum Elementary and Beechwood Knoll are two of the thousands of schools and nearly 300,000 students participating nationwide in the "Green Energy Challenge" program.

Sponsored by National Grid, the program calls on students to audit their classrooms, schools and homes to find energy leaks and correct them in an effort to reduce utility costs and help the environment. Participating schools will research past bills and implement comprehensive, yet simple, changes in an effort to reduce associated costs during the school year. Results will be posted on GEF's website on Earth Day, April 22.

GEF will be tracking participating schools' green energy efforts and spotlighting their results via GEF's Green Energy Challenge website. The Squantum Elementary School is one of the schools that will be among those spotlighted.

"The Green Energy Challenge is an effective way for Squantum Elementary School's student council to educate the school community on simple measures that can add up to big savings – not only for the environment, but in utility costs," said Squantum Elementary School Principal Steve Sylvia.

Adult checklists and energy experiments for al grade levels accompany the program. GEF's comprehensive online curriculum library provides standards-based lessons, activities and projects that are easily incorporated into science, math, language arts, social studies and creative arts curricula.

"National Grid is committed to giving back to the community and preserving the environment. The Green Energy Challenge is an effective way to teach students and families simple techniques that can save money, while also jumpstarting a commitment for environmental learning," said Loretta Smith, Director US Corporate Citizenship for National Grid. "This program supports National Grid's Engineering Our Future initiative, designed to inspire youth to pursue science, technology, engineering and math skills."

The Green Energy Challenge is free. Schools and youth groups are urged to register now to receive a Green Energy Challenge eco-kit, visit www.GreenEducationFoundation.org to enroll today.

GEF offers the opportunity to visit schools participating in the Green Energy Challenge. For more information please contact: Dan Kobialka at (888) 668-2298 or by email at dkobialka@greeneducationfoundation.org.

Anti-Bullying Information Night For Parents March 1

Quincy Public Schools, as with districts across the state, is charged with implementing the mandates of a new anti-bullying law signed by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The new law provides students with an age appropriate anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Rotary Club has helped with funding for several school initiatives in the past. The Club has offered to provide funding to assist in the purchasing of a high school anti-bullying curriculum.

Quincy Public Schools will offer a parent information March 1 at Quincy High School with Dr. Elizabeth Englander from the Massachusetts Aggression Reduction Center (MARC) of Bridgewater State University at 7 p.m.

She is considered an outstanding presenter on the issue of bullying.

Students Dish Out Culinary Delights At Presidents Café

By JOE REARDON

Sophomore Peter Cedrone took a quick detour between classes and headed to the Presidents Café to place an order for lunch. A member of Quincy High's JV basketball team, Cedrone opted for his favorite dish, the cheeseburger platter, a selection he has grown accustomed to.

"The food is amazing," said Cedrone. "As a freshman I'd come down here mostly every day for a cheeseburger. I come down every day to get a good meal before a game."

It's not only the staff and students who can enjoy the tasty cuisine that's prepared by the students in the culinary arts program. The oval-shaped restaurant with the presidential atmosphere is open to the public as well and business has been picking up. The restaurant is open from 11:30 a.m., to 1 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Study Shows New Roof, Windows Needed; All Interior Systems Should Be Upgraded

Old City Hall In Urgent Need Of Restoration

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Old City Hall is in critical need of a monumental makeover – inside and out – and should undergo its first significant restoration in some 90 years.

That was the message conveyed by local architect James Edwards and City Clerk Joseph Shea to city councillors Tuesday night after The Sun went to press. The restoration project has been advocated by Mayor Thomas Koch and other city leaders.

In an interview before Tuesday night's meeting, Edwards outlined the exterior and interior upgrades the building needs. On the outside, the 167-year-old building constructed of Quincy granite needs a new slate roof, copper gutters and downspouts as well as new windows. Inside, every system should be replaced: electrical, plumbing, heating and air conditioning. New fire alarm and fire prevention systems should be installed along with an elevator to comply with handicap accessibility code.

Also under consideration: restoring the City Council Chamber to its original "Great Hall" status when it was first built in 1844.

Casting Call For Kevin James Film March 5

Hollywood Seeks Local Residents For Movie

"We want you, Quincy!"

That's the request to entice the potential actor in all Quincy residents directly from the production of a new Kevin James movie being filmed in Quincy.

Working with the Mayor's Office, The Quincy Film Bureau and Boston Casting, a special Quincy casting call has been set up for Saturday, March 5.

The exact location and time were still being worked out as The Sun went to press Friday. Next week's issue will include information about the time and place of the call.

Those attending the casting call should bring a photo.

"For this Quincy-only casting call, we are looking for all types and all walks of life," said Angeli Peri of Boston Casting. "The only stipulation is that you need to be 18 years or older and live in Quincy."

The film, starring Kevin James, is called "Here Comes the Boom." Extras are needed on the film that is shooting late March to early June.

Already, the film will

Palmucci Asks Milton To Reconsider Turbine Plan At Quarry Hills

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci wants the Town of Milton to reconsider its plan to erect a 450-foot wind turbine 100 feet from a Quarry Hills Golf Course property line.

Palmucci planned to seek support for a resolution opposing the plan at Tuesday's council meeting scheduled after The Quincy Sun deadline.

If approved, Palmucci said he will distribute it to Milton selectmen and other officials.

Drug, Alcohol Abuse Awareness Night Sunday

The Houghs Neck Community Council and Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services will host their annual Drug and Alcohol Abuse Awareness Night Sunday, Feb. 27 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

There will be testimonials from those who have been affected by this epidemic and information about drug and alcohol abuse.

"For those who attended last year you will remember that is a very powerful and informative night. This year we've have all new material to present and have developed original program to deliver the message," said Brian Laroche, president, Houghs Neck Community Council.

Laroche said drug and alcohol addiction does not prejudice.

"Kids and Adults who come from good families are falling prey to drug and alcohol addiction much more than you realize. We are in the midst of an 'epidemic' of prescription drug and Heroin use. No one is beyond addiction, the very young, the well to do, strong families are all equally affected, this problem cut across all social and economic backgrounds.

"Anyone who thinks it can't happen in their neighborhood or in their family are fooling themselves," he added.

Laroche said the evening's goal is to increase the awareness of the challenge that is facing the community.

"If you want to share your story and help us put a face to the problem please let us know. We are going share stories of family members, addicts and those who have been deeply affected by drug and alcohol abuse.

"Please come and help us as we begin to understand how common and wide spread this problem is. Through awareness we feel we can beat the odds and make sure that our community is not going to be another statewide statistic."

Laroche added, "This is a social problem, to ignore it means that we will pay the price. This is a case where "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", awareness costs us little, the alternative is priceless. It takes a village to solve this problem, everyone in our community needs to work at this problem together."

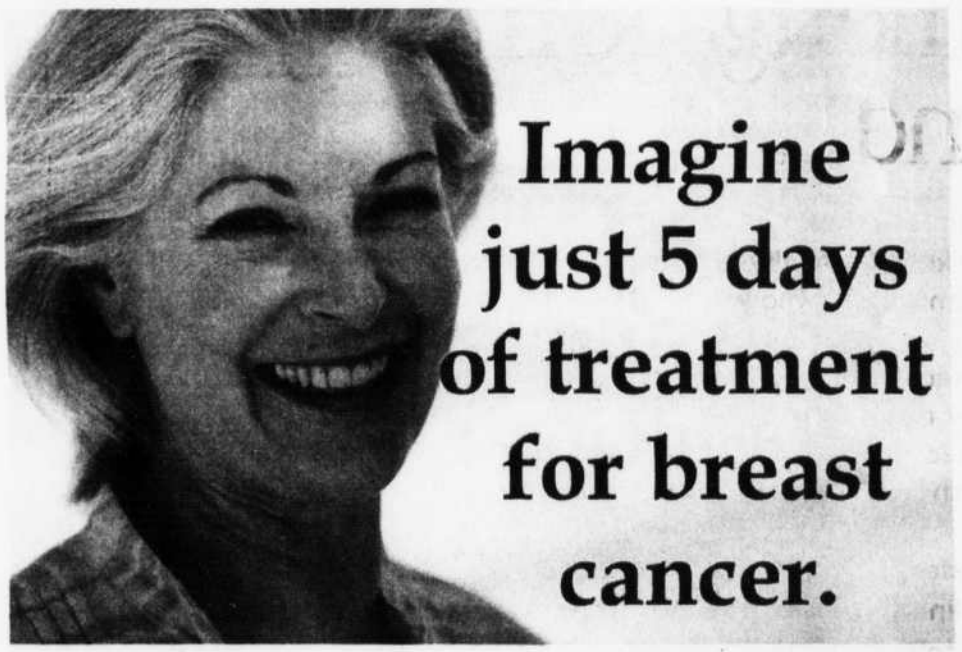
Energy Smart Topic March 3 For Montclair-Wollaston Association



The Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association will meet Thursday, March 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of Harvard and West Squantum Streets., Quincy.

Speaker will be Maura O'Gara, program director of Energy Smart Quincy.

The City of Quincy is taking a number of steps to reduce energy waste, increase savings and take advantage of local clean energy sources.

The program is also designed to help residents and businesses do the same to help reduce dependence on fossil fuels.

The meeting is open to the public.

Imagine just 5 days of treatment for breast cancer.

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

South Suburban Oncology Center in Quincy offers pioneering treatment for early stage breast cancer patients. Electronic Brachytherapy is a new alternative in partial breast irradiation, through advanced technology that is breaking barriers in breast cancer treatment. SSOC is proud to be one of the first - and few - centers in the country to offer this to our patients.

- FDA-approved treatment for early stage breast cancer
- Eligible patients are treated for 5 days, twice a day
- Less radiation exposure to the heart and lungs versus MammoSite
- Clinicians can be at patient's side during treatment
- High levels of patient satisfaction

For more information, including eligibility, contact SSOC today.

This treatment may not be appropriate for all early stage breast cancers. A specific criteria will determine if a woman is eligible to participate with this treatment option.

Residents Only Casting Call March 5

feature some "local talent." The combined Quincy and North Quincy High School band have been selected to be in the movie. The production company has also made a $7,500 donation to the band.

"In an industry that pumps a lot of money into the local economy in a relatively short period of time, this is just another way of doing that, and this specific production has shown a lot of good will toward Quincy thus far," said Mark Carey, director of the Quincy Film Bureau and co-director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

"Mayor (Tom) Koch immediately saw this as an exciting opportunity to deliver unexpected revenue for the city and after the initial meeting with the production company decided to move forward. Although this "Quincy Only" casting call is a first for us, it is not volunteer work. This is paid, extra work for Quincy residents," Carey added.

MARK CAREY

The production moved into the old Quincy High School building a month ago and has been setting up their production offices, building sets, and preparing for the shooting of the film. They have also been visiting several local businesses, residential homes and neighborhoods seeking locations for several scenes within the film.

"We have been here, every step of the way for the production by helping them find what they need while in Quincy," Carey said. "That's what the film bureau was set up for. These movies are looking for "film friendly" places to do business.

"We know what it is that Quincy has to offer and have built relationships within the industry over the past few years. When a production comes into the Commonwealth, we always get the call."

According to the Quincy Film Bureau website, there have been over a dozen productions that have shot in Quincy within the past five years, bringing in more than $200,000 to several Quincy entities. With this new film making its home in the City of Presidents and throughout the production, Carey said it's possible that this production alone could surpass that previous figure. He also noted there are a few other major Hollywood features that area checking out locations in Quincy right now for films slated for 2011.

"At the end of the day, the film industry is just like any other," Carey said. "They are seeking efficient services in a timely manner. We try and help them through it and so far it's been pretty successful."

Open Enrollment Next Year For Both Local High Schools

By JOE REARDON

Open enrollment for both high schools will once again become a reality heading into the 2011-2012 school years in an attempt to balance the population of each building and avoid overcrowding.

A base enrollment will be set for both schools with 1,500 at Quincy and 1,350 for North before open enrollment can begin.

The enrollments shifted this year with 1,430 attending Quincy High and 1,350 at North. "It's almost a reversal of enrollment," said School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro. "We knew the enrollment would climb at Quincy High and decline at North Quincy, but didn't know how much."

Students will have the opportunity to request attending either high school. And to keep siblings at the same school those students with brothers or sisters already enrolled will be given preferential placement.

The school committee has done analysis of enrollments for the past four years to look at trends at both high schools and the result was a fluctuation of both enrollments.

During the construction of the new Quincy High School, enrollment at Quincy High swelled to 1,425-1,500 students. In April of 2009, there were over 100 requests for enrollment at North Quincy. DeCristofaro believes the optimum enrollment is 1,350. The decision was made to grant the requests and then close open enrollment.

One possible reason for the higher enrollment at Quincy High was the completion of the new $126 million, state-of-the-art school.

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney said there was a large shift to North Quincy three years ago when work was being done on the technology wing of the new Quincy High. She said talk of the construction of the school interfering with classes was being blown out of proportion and it frightened some parents.

"People didn't want their kids to go to school at a construction site," Mahoney said.

The open enrollment at North Quincy was shut for a year to stop the overcrowding. In 2010, the numbers began to level off when the technology wing was completed, but they slowly began to rise again.

"You were starting to see a creeping up at North Quincy High," said Mahoney.

Quincy is not the only school district with two high schools having to deal with enrollment fluctuations. A similar situation has also arisen with Plymouth North and South High Schools.

A TASTE FOR CHOCOLATE

In recent years, diamond lovers have expanded their appreciation of their favorite clear gemstone to include diamonds in brown shades. Foremost among these are the Chocolate Diamonds branded by Le Vian jewelry designers and recently worn by celebrities to red-carpet events. These darkly colored diamonds feature a rich chocolate-syrupy color that make outstanding gold and platinum pieces for both women and men. Those with a taste for brown diamonds may also be drawn to the cognac variety with its warm reddish, golden-brown color; cinnamon (reddish brown); and champagne (light color with a slightly reddish cast). Chocolate diamonds have many admirers among those who favor their unique look and deep color. They are also well-suited to diamond lovers on a budget.

If you are thinking about purchasing a diamond of any color, it is clearly in your best interest to enlist the help of someone you can trust to counsel you on the four Cs that determine diamond quality (cut, color, clarity, carat weight). This is exactly what we've been doing since 1944. We will never pressure you to purchase an item, and we will work within your budget to find the diamond or gift that is exactly right for you. Stop by 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, soon and see what we mean. PH: 617-773-3636.

City May Appeal $3M Judgment In Adams Trust Lawsuit

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The City of Quincy was slapped with a $3 million bill last week when Norfolk County Probate Court Judge Robert Langlois ordered the city to reimburse two Adams trusts for the funds lost due to the city's mishandling of the trusts as trustees since 1953.

Judge Langlois ordered that more than half of the $3 million award ($1,616,931) be paid to the trusts' beneficiary, the Woodward School for Girls, Inc., which initiated the lawsuit against the city in 2007.

In addition, Judge Langlois spotlighted the trusts' ownership of the Adams Academy building, currently valued at nearly $1.9 million and headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society. The judge ordered the city not to extend the society's current $100 a month lease and to consider using the property to increase the value of the trust.

In his decision, Judge Langlois also removed the city as Trustee of the funds after finding the city sold 11 trust properties for less than their value from 1953 through 1967, used trust funds to pay city employees, exercised poor fiscal oversight and kept inadequate records as Trustee of the Adams Temple and School Fund and the Charles Francis Adams Fund.

Attorney Paul Hines said that city officials are mulling an appeal of Judge Langlois award to the Adams Temple and School Fund and his conclusions announced Feb. 18.

"We're reviewing it in its entirety," Assistant City Solicitor Hines said Monday of the 71-page legal brief and decision. "It's difficult to comment in too much depth at this time."

However, Hines did suggest several points for a challenge, such as the current incorporated status of the Woodward School and property, as well as the history of the trust which, until 1953, directed funds to Quincy public schools.

Even before last week's judgment, the lawsuit cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal fees as well as the cost of a court-ordered audit of the trust.

If there's any bright spot for the City of Quincy, the lawsuit filed for The Woodward School sought $10 million in damages and was only awarded one third of that sum.

In March, 2010, Hines joined the city's legal consultants, attorneys John

Six High School Students Receive Mayor's Drug Awareness Awards

Mayor Thomas P. Koch presented awards for the Inaugural Drug Awareness Week to six students from the city's two high schools.

The six students competed in an essay contest open to all seniors. Scholarships, funded through the Mayor's Cup Charity Golf Tournament, were awarded to the winners.

"The Drug Awareness Week started a thoughtful conversation throughout the City, and our young people displayed both their literary talent and their desire to live good, substance free lives," Koch said. "This program was an extension of our larger effort to reduce substance abuse in the City, and I am delighted to report that it was a tremendous success."

As part of the week, presentations were made to all high school students. Ginger Katz, a nationally-known figure in the fight against drugs, spoke of her own personal journey dealing with the death of her son to an overdose. John Morello presented to parents and students through his one man show that highlights the dangers of substance abuse as well as bullying.

Student essays emphasized the importance of setting personal goals early and often to keep focused in the face of temptation. Gripping personal stories were shared where young people overcame tremendous obstacles to realize success.

"The stories that were shared in this essay contest show that Quincy's youth are able to conquer the dangers of substance abuse, and that they possess a resolve that will serve them well throughout their lives," the mayor said.

"This event gives me great hope for the future of our City."

'Remembering Ruth Gordon:' A Triple Feature

The late Ruth Gordon, Hollywood film star and acclaimed playwright, will again have her name "up in lights."

Well, sort of.

The beloved Quincy-born actress will be spotlighted next month when the Quincy Environmental Treasures Program and Thomas Crane Public Library commemorate the life and legacy of the Academy Award-winning actress. A series of "Remembering Ruth Gordon" events are planned in observance of National Women's History Month.

Since 1987, a special Presidential Proclamation has been issued every year that honors the extraordinary achievements of American women.

This year's local honoree is Gordon – who was born Ruth Gordon Jones in Wollaston on Oct. 30, 1896. She died Aug. 28, 1985 on Martha's Vineyard.

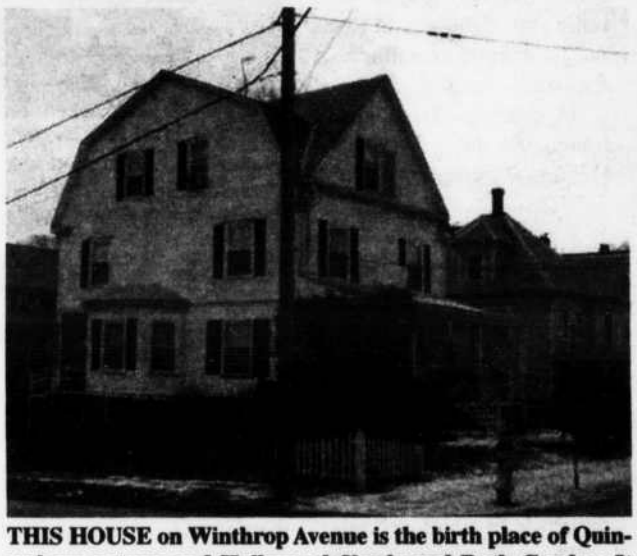
Another Quincy-born actress – the late Lee Remick – was also considered for this year's honor. But organizers opted for Gordon in part because it was easier to coordinate a walking tour of her old stomping grounds in Quincy.

A few years ago, famed aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart was honored.

Ruth Gordon fans are in for a real treat with next month's "triple feature." There will be a free "Girlhood Haunts" walking tour, a Ruth Gordon Film Retrospective Thursday evenings at the Library and a month-long memorabilia display.

The display – also at the Crane Library – will feature a 1914 Quincy High School yearbook, her graduation picture, newspaper tributes, and items on loan from the Quincy Historical Society.

It's all for a very special woman who holds a unique place in Quincy history. While the city can boast two U.S. presidents, Gordon is the only Quincy native to earn an Academy Award. Her heart was always here in Quincy. She called the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre in 1984 "the best day of my life."



As her good friend Henry Bosworth once wrote, "She was a down-to-earth, nice person, who never gave up and was always ready to take on Broadway, Hollywood, television – and the world. She was one of a kind."

The library and Environmental Treasures program are pulling out all the stops in spotlighting Gordon's life and legend.

"Ruth Gordon had a seven-decade career," says Megan Allen, assistant library director and one of the coordinators of the "Remembering Ruth Gordon" series. "She started in silent films and ended in (the film and cult classic) Harold and Maude as an elderly woman. It's a very pretty impressive career.

"My hope is that people who know about Ruth Gordon will reflect on her career. I also hope people who don't know who Ruth was will discover who she was and will learn about her accomplishments. She had a long and successful career. She was a favorite Quincy daughter," Allen adds.

Gordon's career spanned film, television, screenwriting and Broadway. She is perhaps best know for her film role as Minnie Castevet in Rosemary's Baby which won her an Academy Award in 1968 for best supporting actress. She also won an Emmy and two Golden Globes for her acting.

THIS HOUSE on Winthrop Avenue is the birth place of Quincy-born actress and Hollywood film legend Ruth Gordon. It will be among the featured stops along a walking tour tracing Gordon's childhood Sunday, March 27.

The five-part free film series at the Library illustrates Gordon's range as a screenwriter and actress.

Here's the line-up of the movies to be screened:

Thursday, March 3 at 7 p.m.: The Actress (90 minutes, not rated). The screenplay is based on Gordon's autobiographical play, Years Ago. The 1953 black and white film is a comedy about a 17-year-old who yearns to be a star.

Cast includes Spencer Tracy, Jean Simmons, Teresa Wright and the screen-debut of Anthony Perkins.

Gordon was nominated for a Writers Guild of America Award for Best Written American Comedy.

Thursday, March 10 at 7 p.m.: Adam's Rib (100 minutes, not rated). Written by Ruth Gordon and her husband Garson Kanin, they were nominated for an Academy Award for Writing Original Screenplay and a Writers Guild of America Award for Best Written American Comedy.

The movie stars Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn as courtroom rivals in a sensational attempted-murder trial.

Thursday, March 17 at 7 p.m.: Inside Daisy Clover (128 minutes, not rated). Natalie Wood plays the title role of Daisy Clover, a 15-year-old who dreams of Hollywood stardom (much like Gordon did as a Quincy youngster.) Gordon earned a Golden Globe award and an Oscar nomination for her portrayal of Daisy's mother. The 1965 color film also stars Robert Redford.

Thursday, March 24 at 7 p.m.: Rosemary's Baby (136 minutes, rated R.)

This 1968 American horror film was written and directed by Roman Polanski and is based on the 1967 novel by Ira Levin. Besides Gordon, the cast includes Mia Farrow (as Rosemary), John Cassavetes, Maurice Evans, Sidney Blackmer and Charles Grodin. The film features exterior shots of the famous Dakota Co-Op Apartment Building in New York City.

Some film watchers may find some scenes disturbing. Afterall, it's been ranked in the top 10 among all-time horror movies.

Consider the plot description: Farrow plays the role of an expecting mother, who fears that her husband may have made a pact with their eccentric neighbors, and believes he may have promised them the child to be used as a human sacrifice in their occultic rituals in exchange for success in his acting career.

You guessed it: Gordon is one of those neighbors. And she's fabulous in this role. When she accepted her Oscar at the age of 72, she said: "I can't tell you how encouraging a thing like this is. . . And thank all of you who voted for me, and to everyone who didn't: please excuse me." That line drew laughs since she had been in theater for 50 years.

Today, the film is widely accepted as a classic.

Thursday, March 31 at 7 p.m.: Harold and Maude (91 minutes, PG.)

The film stars Bud Cort as Harold and Gordon as Maude. Harold is a young man bored with wealth but interested in death. Maude is a wonderful old rascal who can see nothing but good intentions in the world. Gordon was nominated for a Golden Globe Award for Best Actress.

The 1971 film is in color.

The month-long tribute to Gordon will culminate with a walking tour sponsored by the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program Sunday, March 27 at 2 p.m. (Snow day April 3, at 2 p.m.)

ONE OF THE last known photos of Quincy actress Ruth Gordon was taken Aug. 22, 1985, just six days before her death, at her Martha's Vineyard home by the late Charles Flagg, a former Quincy Sun photographer. With Ruth is her husband, author-playwright Garson Kanin.

The meeting place will be determined by snow conditions.

Participants will retrace Gordon's childhood from her birthplace on Winthrop Avenue to her home on Elmwood Avenue to Central Middle School (at the time Quincy High School) where she was a graduate of the Class of 1914 dubbed "the worst class ever" by teachers because not one student made the honor roll.

A year later, Ruth Gordon was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset. The tour will stop at the Wollaston T Station where Ruth left for the Big Apple.

The tour, led by Sandy Johnson and Sally Owen, may also include stops to 1200 Hancock St. where Dr. John A. Gordon – for whom she was named – was the obstetrician who delivered her; the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre at Merrymount Park; her mother's grave at Mount Wollaston Cemetery and St. Chrysostom's where she was baptized.

Quotes will also be read from Gordon's autobiography, "My Side."

Ruth Gordon herself had planned to come back to Quincy some day and do a similar tour with her good friend, former Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth.

Three years before her death in 1985, Henry and Ruth had agreed to do a television special when The Sun operated a local cable channel. It was going to be called "Reminiscing With Ruth Gordon." They were going to walk around Winthrop and Elmwood Avenues in Wollaston where she was born and grew up. She would recall those days as she remembered them.

But she never got around to doing it because she was too busy with other projects.

She even called Henry a week before she died promising "We will do it one of these days."

Unfortunately, that day never came.

Still, Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots.

And Quincy will have an opportunity to remember her once again with next month's "triple feature."

I'd like to see one more event: the dedication of a sign or suitable marker near Ruth's birth home on Winthrop Avenue – where it all began.

It's hard to believe Ruth was never honored with a star on the famous "Hollywood Walk of Fame."

Here's a chance to name a street corner or sidewalk "Ruth Gordon Way."

In Quincy, she's still an inspiration today.

Scenes From Yesterday

POST OFFICE SQUARE, SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920 postcard view towards Post Office Square in Squantum. East Squantum Street in the foreground leads to the square and Dorchester Street continues left on to Squantum Park. The large building on the right behind the trolley was the Nelson Building, now the site of the Trevore Building. The trolley is stopped in front of Polsen's Variety store that was home to the post office for 50 years. In the center left is the old pier that jutted out from the foot of Trevore Street into Dorchester Bay. The pier was used by steamboats that came over from Marine Park in South Boston with day visitors to Squantum park and the seafood restaurants that were in the Inns here. Thompson's Island is on the horizon in the left distance. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Finn Wins Edge In Court Fight

By FRANK McCAULEY

In sporting terms, Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia and Police Chief Francis X. Finn came out of their legal duel in Norfolk Superior Court with a draw, advantage to Chief Finn and the District Attorney's Office.

This Week 1977 34 Years Ago

"I don't feel there is a winner or loser in a thing like this," said Chief Finn who was granted an injunction preventing the Mayor from obtaining certain confidential information and making assignments in the Police Department.

"As far as I am concerned, the meat of the decision is in my favor," said Mayor LaRaia. "I have access to the records that I want, exclusive of matters under ongoing investigation."

"The District Attorney feels greatly vindicated and relieved on behalf of all attorneys in the state," said Assistant District Attorney Charles Hely. "This favorable decision sets a lasting precedent."

NEW FORE RIVER BRIDGE NEEDED

A new Fore River Bridge is needed in the next ten years but even those most closely involved in its planning have no idea where the money, probably around $35 million, is going to come from.

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce Bridge Replacement Action Team (BRAT) was told last week:

The only federal source of funds would be the Federal Highway Administration and Massachusetts gets only $9-10 million a year to serve the whole state. Also it is doubtful if the bridge would qualify for FHA money.

A $349 million state bond issue approved last year has already been spent on highway and railroad bridges and a $500 million bond issue this year has been committed for similar projects over the next five years.

"The only way we're going to get the money is if the bridge gets knocked down," said George McCall, the representative of Local 5 Shipbuilding Workers Union on the team. "I don't want a tanker to hit the bridge but that may be the only way."

$1.6M Federal Grant Restores 9 Firefighter Jobs

A federal grant of $1.6 million will allow the city to increase the number of firefighters by nine, Cong. William Keating and other members of the state's Congressional delegation announced.

The city will receive a SAFER (Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response) federal grant of $1,689,733. The money will be used to bolster the number of Quincy firefighters by nine.

"This grant will allow the Quincy Fire Department to retain four firefighters as well as rehire five firefighters who were recently laid off," Keating said. "These funds are a great example of how government should be working for us.

"Now, Quincy Fire Department can increase its force, allowing the residents of our community to have better, more efficient service."

Mayor Thomas Koch praised Keating as well as other members of the state's Congressional delegation including Sen. John Kerry for their efforts in securing the federal grant.

"Senator Kerry and Congressman Keating understand how important public safety is to cities and towns across the Commonwealth, and securing this substantial grant is a testament to their hard work and commitment," Koch said.

"I wish to also thank Quincy Firefighters Union Local 792 President Ernie Arienti, who has been a tireless advocate on behalf of his brothers and sisters on both Beacon Hill and Capitol Hill. Restoring these positions is vital to public safety in our city, and a great team worked incredibly hard together to make it happen."

Other legislators supporting the grant were Sen. Scott Brown and Cong. Stephen Lynch and John Olver.

'Beach In Winter' Walking Tour Saturday

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will present a free walking tour led by Peter Fifield Saturday, Feb. 26 at 11:30 a.m.

Entitled "The Beach in Winter," the tour will lead participants on an exploration of a Squantum beach at low die.

What birds from the Arctic spend their winters here? Discover native oysters. Beachcombers will have the opportunity to see what the winter storms have brought to local shores.

The meeting place will be determined on the date of the tour depending on weather and snow conditions on the ground.

Participants should call 617-472-0799 on Feb. 26 to determine the meeting location and snow/rain date cancellation information.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 3, 1887, Anne Sullivan begins teaching 6-year-old Helen Keller, who lost her sight and hearing after a severe illness at the age of 19 months. Under Sullivan's tutelage, Keller flourished, eventually graduating from college and becoming an international lecturer and activist.

• On March 6, 1899, the Imperial Patent Office in Berlin registers Aspirin (acetylsalicylic acid) on behalf of the German pharmaceutical company Friedrich Bayer & Co. The brand name came from "a" for acetyl, "spir" from the spirea plant (a source of salicin) and the suffix "in," commonly used for medications.

• On March 2, 1904, Theodor Geisel, better known to the world as Dr. Seuss, is born in Springfield, Mass. Geisel's first book, "And to Think That I Saw It On Mulberry Street," was rejected by more than two dozen publishers before making it into print in 1937.

• On March 1, 1932, Charles Lindbergh III, the 20-month-old son of aviation hero Charles Lindbergh, is kidnapped from the family's new mansion in Hopewell, N.J. Days later the baby's lifeless body was discovered near the Lindbergh home.

• On Feb. 28, 1940, Mario Andretti, whose name will become synonymous with American auto racing, is born in Montona, Italy. His long list of achievements includes a Formula One World Championship and wins at the Indianapolis 500, Daytona 500 and Pikes Peak Hill Climb.

• On March 4, 1966, a John Lennon quotation that was ignored in England sets off a media frenzy in America: "We're more popular than Jesus now." Bible Belt disc jockeys declared Lennon's remarks blasphemous and vowed an eternal ban on all Beatles music, past, present and future.

• On March 5, 1977, the Dial-a-President radio program, featuring President Jimmy Carter and CBS news anchorman Walter Cronkite, airs for the first time. Carter answered calls from all over the country from his desk in the Oval Office. Some 9 million calls flooded the CBS radio studio during the two-hour broadcast.

NQHS Arts Department To Perform Disney's 'Beauty And The Beast'

The North Quincy High School Performing Arts Department will present its version of Disney's "Beauty and the Beast" Thursday, March 3 through Saturday, March 5 in the school auditorium.

Performance time for all three shows is 7:30 p.m.

Based on the Academy-Award winning animated feature, the stage version of Disney's "Beauty and the Beast" includes all of the songs written by Alan Menken and the late Howard Ashman along with new songs by Mr. Menken and Tim Rice.

Audiences will be transported to the heart of provincial life in a lovely French town. When Maurice becomes lost in the woods on the way to the fair, he seeks shelter in an old castle, but the master of the castle is a horrible beast that takes him captive.

Maurice's daughter, Belle, must then give up her freedom to save his life. Belle's taming of the unfortunate Beast and his ultimate transformation back into a handsome prince enthralled Broadway audiences for over 13 years.

This "tale as old as time" is filled with spectacular costume and set opportunities.

The production showcases over 50 North Quincy High students as well as students from several elementary schools in Quincy.

Directed by Theatre teacher Tracy Phelan, the show features Will Lunny as the Beast, Kim Ellis as Belle, and a lively cast of plates, cups, forks, knives and even an armoire.

North Quincy Mathematics and Dance teacher Marissa Donovan choreographed the dance numbers, Band Director Rich Kinneally handled the music, English teacher Mike Joyce constructed integral props, and wood shop instructor Paul Cheney built the sets for the production with his classes.

"The collaboration on this show has been incredible," Phelan said. "It's great to work with so many creative professionals and the kids are all so extremely talented."

The production even appealed to some other staff members at the school, who came forward to offer their performance talents in several key numbers.

"Mr. Dan Coughlin (High School Dean) was in Music Man two years ago," Phelan noted. "He was such a big hit. How could we do a musical at North without him?

"The cast loves to see the faculty out of their element and letting loose on stage. They really appreciate the staff giving up its time to support their production."

North Quincy High and the school auditorium are are handicapped accessible.

Tickets are $10 and can be purchased in advance at the NQHS Main Office or at the door on the evening of the performance.

Doors open at 7 p.m., and the show time is 7:30 p.m. for all performances.

Literacy Volunteers Fundraiser March 23

Literacy Volunteers of Massachusetts – Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library will hold its annual fundraiser Wednesday, March 23 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Since last year's trivia event was so successful, participants have requested that the same fundraiser be done again this year.

To participate, put together a team of friends or co-workers. This is a team event – pool your knowledge to win.

Donation for the event is $20 per player.

The fun evening will feature a raffle, refreshments and prizes as well as some surprises.

All proceeds will benefit The Literacy Project and will be used to purchase reading and writing materials and training for tutor-student pairs.

The Crane Library Literacy program serves adults on the South Shore. Dedicated volunteers are trained and matched through LVM-Quincy and have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1985.

LVM-Quincy is an accredited affiliate of the national network of Pro Literacy America and his one of 13 LVM programs statewide.

Trivia jockey, Phil Beatti, will emcee the evening. He is donating his time and expertise to the fundraiser and will challenge participants on a variety of topics.

Space is limited. For a registration form and more information, call Mary Diggle at 617-376-1314 or email quliteracy@ocln.org.

Commemorative Bricks Available To Mark Atherton Hough Centennial

One hundred years ago, Quincy's Atherton Hough Elementary School opened its doors to the children of the city's growing Houghs Neck neighborhood.

Now, as the community prepares to celebrate Atherton Hough's centennial, the school's PTO is selling commemorative bricks that will be used to create a new walkway leading to the school's Manet Avenue entrance.

The walkway will be dedicated Saturday, April 30, when the school will hold a "Centennial Celebration" featuring a reunion of former students and teachers, musical performances, skits and more.

Bricks are $50 each and may be engraved with three lines of text to honor an Atherton Hough graduate, loved one or community group.

The deadline to order bricks is March 1. To download a brick order form, visit http://www.quincypublicschools.com/pdf files/schools/atherton/Bricks.pdf.

For more information on ordering a brick or the Atherton Hough Centennial Celebration, contact the school at (617) 984-8797.

Folk, Rock And Comedy Concert At United First Parish Church Saturday

A folk, rock and comedy concert will be held Saturday, Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. at the "Stone Temple Coffeehouse" at United First Parish Church, ("Church of the Presidents"), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The concert will feature singer-songwriter Don White and the rock band "The Loomers."

White will perform a repertoire of song, stories and laughter. The comic from Lynn illuminates the human experience through his songwriting and performing.

The Loomers will open for and perform with White. White describes them as "a great classic rock band with superb vocals and musical style, and an extraordinary amount of wit and mischief.

"Each of their original songs is approached with a team effort to determine what musical beat best accompanies the spirit and tone of the lyric," he adds.

Doors will open at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $20.

Home-made desserts and refreshments will be available.

For reserved tickets and more information, call Eileen Baker at 617-821-4073.

IMPACT QUINCY'S Peer Advocates hosted a day of substance abuse and underage drinking awareness at North Quincy High School. Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates Present Trivia Game Show

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates hosted a day of substance abuse and underage drinking awareness at North Quincy High School.

After several months of planning and designing, the Peer Advocates presented a trivia game show format presentation. Throughout the day, several teachers brought their students from their classrooms to the "Black Box Auditorium," where the Peer Advocates had staged a game show themed trivia presentation.

Trivia in the form of local, state and national underage drinking and substance abuse statistics as well as the consequences to substance abuse was read to competing students each period.

The Peer Advocates created a wheel for this game show. Their goal was to ask questions in the same manner of Jeopardy but use the wheel and point system from Wheel of Fortune.

Using a cut out foam board, the wheel was divided into sixteen sections. Fourteen of the sections included points that raged from 100-1000 and the other two were labeled "Bonus" and "Bankrupt".

If the wheel landed on "Bonus" or "Bankrupt," the contestant would draw from a bag and a set amount of points were added or deducted respectively. "Bonus" also gave the contestant a possibility to win a set of headphones.

There was a winner each period. He or she collected a $10 iTunes gift card for their merit.

Other prizes were awarded to the contestants with the highest total of earned points at the end of the day. The grand prize winner received an iPod Shuffle, the second place winner received a $50 Simon Mall gift card, the third place winner a $25 Borders gift card, and the four runners up received either a $10 iTunes gift card or a pair of headphones.

The Peer Advocates randomly selected three students from the audience to compete against each other for prizes, doing their best to answer the trivia questions and earning points as they answered correctly.

The students were asked questions such as: "In Massachusetts, what percent of teens have had a drink of alcohol before the age of 13?" and "What are the possible consequences of getting caught drinking at school or school-related events?"

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates received positive feedback and praise from those teachers and students who participated in the presentation and are looking forward to hosting more underage drinking and substance abuse prevention and awareness days at Quincy's schools in the future.

North Quincy High School Principal Earl Metzler and Nurse Kristin Houlihan, head of North Quincy's S.A.D.D. (Student Against Destructive Decisions) program, were instrumental in bringing Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates' presentation to reality.

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates who were actively involved with the planning and implementation of the presentation were North Quincy High School sophomores Lauren Campo and Ryan Mock and Quincy High School senior Brianna Parker and sophomore Jay Bosworth Newman.

Chinese Lunar New Year Celebration At Parker School

The Parker Elementary School recently celebrated the Chinese Lunar New Year. Some 100 parents, teachers and other guests as well as 300 Parker students attended.

ELL students work hard to prepare songs, dances and poems that share their culture with the school community.

Students who have particular talents offer special performances. This year, fifth grade student Andrew Wang played the Chinese dulcimer.

Students look forward to the time they are in the fifth grade so they can be a part of the Lion Dance. The event celebrates diversity and shares important cultural customs with one another.

The fourth and fifth grade ELL students spend approximately 5 to 6 weeks preparing for the celebration.

The Lion costume was a gift from the Chinese after school program.

Linda Lee, one of Parker's ELL instructors, directed the Lion Dance. Trang Nguyen directed the Vietnamese Folk Dance. The entire production was the work of ELL staff Florence Whelan, Liz Angell, Lee and Nguyen.

Special guests included Beth Hallet, coordinator of ELL; Edie Hughes, coordinator of Title 1; Mary Fredrickson, Assessment coordinator and Janice Erler, coordinator of Extended Day Programs.

PARKER ELEMENTARY SCHOOL student Norman Zhang leads the Lion Dance during the school's recent Chinese Lunar New Year celebration.

Principal MaryAnne Palmer said the school community participates in the a program called "Project Wisdom" – a collection of daily words of wisdom and messages that set a positive tone each day for everyone in the school.

"This program imparts an understanding of core ethical values and fosters caring behavior.

"Although each and every characteristic is important, none is more relevant to the Parker School community than diversity," Palmer said. "With our unique demographics (69 percent students of Asian descent) a focus on diversity helps us to highlight that this is special about the Parker School community.

"We celebrate our differences and learn from each other about the special qualities that each of us bring to the learning community. We are very proud of our diverse population and Lunar New Year is the perfect time for us to celebrate that pride and to share it with the wider community."

ANDREW WANG, a fifth grader at the Parker School, plays the Chinese Dulcimer at the Lunar New Year celebration. Andrew has been practicing Dulcimer for five years with the Boston Chinese Youth Dulcimer Ensemble.

Council To Scrutinize Neponset Landing Pact

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors this week will consider charges that a Stoughton developer left a trail of broken promises after winning building permits for the 12-story Neponset Landing complex and then cashed out through a $75 million sale.

The council's Environmental Committee is scheduled to begin hearings Wednesday (after The Quincy Sun deadline) on the pact that allowed Conroy Development Corporation of Stoughton to build the 280-units at Two Hancock St. on the banks of the Neponset River.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro sought the hearing after learning of changes in the pact that could eliminate benefits for Quincy residents.

In addition, the Conservation Commission will resume a public hearing March 2. That court-ordered public hearing will focus on the same issues raised by Quincy residents regarding waterfront improvements promised by Stoughton developer, Conroy Development Co.

According to Quincy attorney Bryan Stevens, Conroy developers signed off on significant concessions aimed at protecting Quincy's waterfront and public access to the Neponset River but nothing has been done since the signing in 2005.

Stevens referred to the 2005 agreement signed by the developer and the interested environmental parties, 23 Quincy residents, and the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA).

As a result of the agreement, construction was begun in 2007, the same year Conroy sold the project to Northwestern Mutual Life for $75,584,000.

That agreement required the construction of a ramp for canoes and kayaks, a ten-foot wide path across the property and a paved path on adjacent properties as well as security lights, benches, mutt mitts and a pledge of permanent maintenance.

Conroy was also expected to aid in the restoration of the salt marshes.

"Right after they started building, they started to renege," Stevens said Monday during an interview on the issue.

Recently, Stevens outlined the importance of these concerns during a presentation at Thomas Crane Public Library. Some 30 persons attended the meeting.

Stevens, also, provided a question and answer format to address the issues.

In one comment, he contrasted the Quincy experience with a similar project, Wharf Landing, on the Neponset River in Milton where the developer has provided walkways and amenities for the public.

Now, Stevens said there's little for Quincy residents at the site and the original environmental groups that were once partners appear to be split on remedies.

In his reports on the issue, Stevens repeatedly notes that improvements can be made without cost to Quincy taxpayers.

One specific issue involves Conroy's recent payment of $100,000 to NepRWA, apparently in lieu of constructing the kayak and canoe access ramp.

That payment has become a sore point for FNE members who question NepRWA's role and authority to eliminate the requirement for a boat ramp.

NepRWA's Executive Director Ian Cooke has stated the ramp cannot be constructed without dredging the river, while Stevens contends that's not true.

"The boat launch is feasible and dredging is not necessary," Stevens states in a four-page Q & A for interested parties.

Stevens explains his finding, "Representatives from the Massachusetts Department of Fish and Game recently made a preliminary review of the Neponset Landing site, and determined a launch is feasible.

"The property developer agreed to construct a boat ramp in the original Settlement Agreement of 2005 and nothing has changed on the site since then that would make building a boat launch impossible."

Restoration of the salt marsh at Two Hancock is, also, a significant issue for Stevens and FNE members.

Stevens' formal answer to questions regarding the salt marsh is clear, "The only people who have said bine," said Palmucci whose resolution actually congratulates Milton for working toward wind power.

However, Palmucci said Tuesday this turbine would be "too close to the Quincy line."

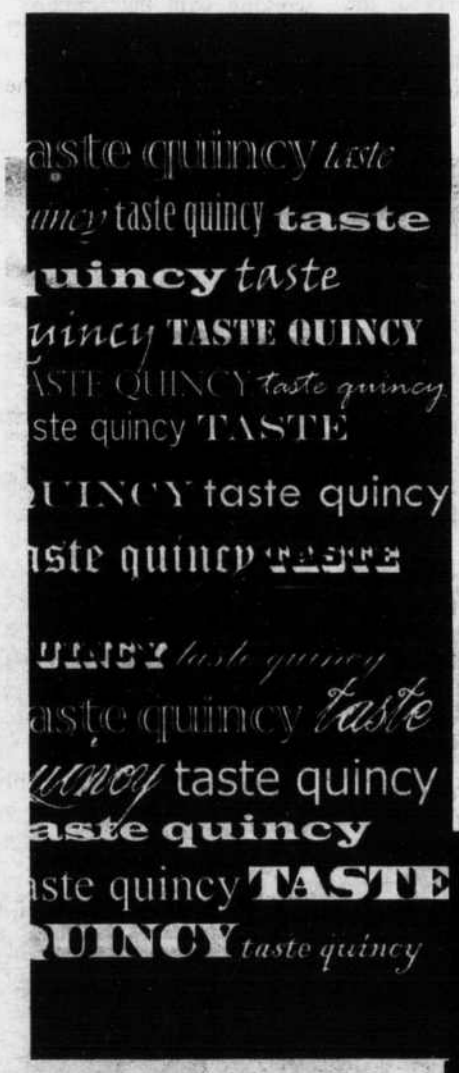
In his resolution, Palmucci describes the proposed wind turbine at 480-feet tall as "the size of a five-story building, potentially hovering over the golf course and recreational area."

Palmucci also noted the golf course benefits Quincy and Milton through open space and annual payments.

Both Milton and Quincy receive payments from the golf course, according to Palmucci who stated in his resolution that Quincy has collected over $3.2 million since 2004.

Palmucci also fears the "tower itself could interfere with the landfill and damage the cap and gas systems creating an environmental hazard...."

Palmucci's ordinance outlines the history of the Quarry Hills Golf Course from its origin as sanitary landfills in West Quincy and Milton to its transformation into 450 acres of open space and recreational area for the citizens of Quincy and Milton.



That success could be at risk, according to Palmucci's whose resolution states, "The (Milton) wind turbine could negatively affect the playing of golf, the use of the Blue Hills Reservation and Quincy residents because of noise, vibration, shadow effect from the blades and the flick effect of the sun...."

Several years ago, Palmucci volunteered to serve on the mayor's Wind Facilities Committee and helped draft Quincy's Wind Facility Zoning Ordinance that lays out specific requirements aimed at protecting residences, businesses, and recreational facilities.

Palmucci said he supports wind turbines in the proper place but objects to the height of the planned turbine and its proximity to the golf course, asserting that Quincy's ordinance would require the turbine to be 700 feet from the golf course.

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates Present Trivia Game Show

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates hosted a day of substance abuse and underage drinking awareness at North Quincy High School.

After several months of planning and designing, the Peer Advocates presented a trivia game show format presentation. Throughout the day, several teachers brought their students from their classrooms to the "Black Box Auditorium," where the Peer Advocates had staged a game show themed trivia presentation.

Trivia in the form of local, state and national underage drinking and substance abuse statistics as well as the consequences to substance abuse was read to competing students each period.

The Peer Advocates created a wheel for this game show. Their goal was to ask questions in the same manner of Jeopardy but use the wheel and point system from Wheel of Fortune.

Using a cut out foam board, the wheel was divided into sixteen sections. Fourteen of the sections included points that raged from 100-1000 and the other two were labeled "Bonus" and "Bankrupt".

If the wheel landed on "Bonus" or "Bankrupt," the contestant would draw from a bag and a set amount of points were added or deducted respectively. "Bonus" also gave the contestant a possibility to win a set of headphones.

There was a winner each period. He or she collected a $10 iTunes gift card for their merit.

Other prizes were awarded to the contestants with the highest total of earned points at the end of the day. The grand prize winner received an iPod Shuffle, the second place winner received a $50 Simon Mall gift card, the third place winner a $25 Borders gift card, and the four runners up received either a $10 iTunes gift card or a pair of headphones.

The Peer Advocates randomly selected three students from the audience to compete against each other for prizes, doing their best to answer the trivia questions and earning points as they answered correctly.

The students were asked questions such as: "In Massachusetts, what percent of teens have had a drink of alcohol before the age of 13?" and "What are the possible consequences of getting caught drinking at school or school-related events?"

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates received positive feedback and praise from those teachers and students who participated in the presentation and are looking forward to hosting more underage drinking and substance abuse prevention and awareness days at Quincy's schools in the future.

North Quincy High School Principal Earl Metzler and Nurse Kristin Houlihan, head of North Quincy's S.A.D.D. (Student Against Destructive Decisions) program, were instrumental in bringing Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates' presentation to reality.

Impact Quincy's Peer Advocates who were actively involved with the planning and implementation of the presentation were North Quincy High School sophomores Lauren Campo and Ryan Mock and Quincy High School senior Brianna Parker and sophomore Jay Bosworth Newman.

Chinese Lunar New Year Celebration At Parker School

The Parker Elementary School recently celebrated the Chinese Lunar New Year. Some 100 parents, teachers and other guests as well as 300 Parker students attended.

ELL students work hard to prepare songs, dances and poems that share their culture with the school community.

Students who have particular talents offer special performances. This year, fifth grade student Andrew Wang played the Chinese dulcimer.

Students look forward to the time they are in the fifth grade so they can be a part of the Lion Dance. The event celebrates diversity and shares important cultural customs with one another.

The fourth and fifth grade ELL students spend approximately 5 to 6 weeks preparing for the celebration.

The Lion costume was a gift from the Chinese after school program.

Linda Lee, one of Parker's ELL instructors, directed the Lion Dance. Trang Nguyen directed the Vietnamese Folk Dance. The entire production was the work of ELL staff Florence Whelan, Liz Angell, Lee and Nguyen.

Special guests included Beth Hallet, coordinator of ELL; Edie Hughes, coordinator of Title 1; Mary Fredrickson, Assessment coordinator and Janice Erler, coordinator of Extended Day Programs.

PARKER ELEMENTARY SCHOOL student Norman Zhang leads the Lion Dance during the school's recent Chinese Lunar New Year celebration.

Principal MaryAnne Palmer said the school community participates in the a program called "Project Wisdom" – a collection of daily words of wisdom and messages that set a positive tone each day for everyone in the school.

"This program imparts an understanding of core ethical values and fosters caring behavior.

"Although each and every characteristic is important, none is more relevant to the Parker School community than diversity," Palmer said. "With our unique demographics (69 percent students of Asian descent) a focus on diversity helps us to highlight that this is special about the Parker School community.

"We celebrate our differences and learn from each other about the special qualities that each of us bring to the learning community. We are very proud of our diverse population and Lunar New Year is the perfect time for us to celebrate that pride and to share it with the wider community."

ANDREW WANG, a fifth grader at the Parker School, plays the Chinese Dulcimer at the Lunar New Year celebration. Andrew has been practicing Dulcimer for five years with the Boston Chinese Youth Dulcimer Ensemble.

Council To Scrutinize Neponset Landing Pact

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors this week will consider charges that a Stoughton developer left a trail of broken promises after winning building permits for the 12-story Neponset Landing complex and then cashed out through a $75 million sale.

The council's Environmental Committee is scheduled to begin hearings Wednesday (after The Quincy Sun deadline) on the pact that allowed Conroy Development Corporation of Stoughton to build the 280-units at Two Hancock St. on the banks of the Neponset River.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro sought the hearing after learning of changes in the pact that could eliminate benefits for Quincy residents.

In addition, the Conservation Commission will resume a public hearing March 2. That court-ordered public hearing will focus on the same issues raised by Quincy residents regarding waterfront improvements promised by Stoughton developer, Conroy Development Co.

According to Quincy attorney Bryan Stevens, Conroy developers signed off on significant concessions aimed at protecting Quincy's waterfront and public access to the Neponset River but nothing has been done since the signing in 2005.

Stevens referred to the 2005 agreement signed by the developer and the interested environmental parties, 23 Quincy residents, and the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA).

As a result of the agreement, construction was begun in 2007, the same year Conroy sold the project to Northwestern Mutual Life for $75,584,000.

That agreement required the construction of a ramp for canoes and kayaks, a ten-foot wide path across the property and a paved path on adjacent properties as well as security lights, benches, mutt mitts and a pledge of permanent maintenance.

Conroy was also expected to aid in the restoration of the salt marshes.

"Right after they started building, they started to renege," Stevens said Monday during an interview on the issue.

Recently, Stevens outlined the importance of these concerns during a presentation at Thomas Crane Public Library. Some 30 persons attended the meeting.

Stevens, also, provided a question and answer format to address the issues.

In one comment, he contrasted the Quincy experience with a similar project, Wharf Landing, on the Neponset River in Milton where the developer has provided walkways and amenities for the public.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Turkey Thighs With Apples

During some recent snowy weeks, I came across some great recipes, and one of them contained a favorite, turkey thighs. I think most people like turkey and if you do, you will enjoy this entrée as much as we all did.

After a quick sauté, it's all done in one baking pan and it is so flavorful with the combination of apples and cider.

Preheat Oven to 350 degrees

TURKEY THIGHS WITH APPLES

4 turkey thighs

4 apples (cut in fours) (I used two Macintosh and two Granny Smith's)

Three shallots

2 cups cider

1 can chicken stock

Vegetable oil for sautéing

In hot oil, sauté the turkey thighs until brown on both sides.

Set aside. In the same skillet, (drain excess fat) sauté the sliced shallots, add the apples and sauté until they turn slightly brown. Add the turkey, the cider and the chicken stock, and blend for a few minutes.

In a baking dish, place the thighs and the mixture and bake covered until done, about 35 minutes.

I served it with mashed sweet potatoes.

Kiwanis Salutes Quincy's Youngest Heroes March 5

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will recognize several acknowledged young leaders with its "Junior Heroes Awards" at a breakfast Saturday, March 5 in the Quincy Lodge of Elks Tirrell Room.

Each year the club presents the award – named in memory of Patrick Toland White of Quincy – to young people. They are judged by their peers to be a "class by themselves" when it comes to community service. Their special civic efforts and contributions helped identify each one as a "leader" within their school community.

In addition, their contributions illustrate how local youngsters selflessly contribute to those less fortunate amongst them. The junior heroes are recognized for learning early in life the skill of giving back.

The junior heroes will be joined by their parents and teachers who have helped shape and encouraged them. This year's students were nominated from several local elementary, middle and high schools.

Kiwanis Clubs are chartered under the motto "Serving Children of the World."

Flower Arranging Topic For Wollaston Garden Club Today

The Wollaston Garden Club will host "Flower Arranging - Pure and Simple" today (Thursday) at 12:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church Social Hall, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy (corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues.)

"We had planned to offer a program on the history of chocolate but we will offer that at our April daytime meeting," said Pat Artis, Wollaston Garden Club president.

"Everyone is looking forward to learning more about choosing and arranging flowers after our snowy winter. This program is open to the community," Artis added.

The Wollaston Garden Club is a member of The National Garden Club, Inc., and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Garden Club Federation Offering Scholarships

The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts is accepting scholarship applications from qualified high school seniors, college students, and graduate students for 11 different scholarships.

Scholars from Quincy and other communities are eligible to apply.

In addition, the GCFM's parent organization – National Garden Clubs, Inc. (NGC) is offering additional scholarships to Massachusetts college juniors, seniors and graduate students sponsored by the GCFM.

Scholarships are available for students majoring in agronomy, biology, botany, city planning, conservation, environmental studies, floriculture, forestry, horticulture, land management, landscape design, and allied subjects.

Three of the scholarships require that the student attend the University of Massachusetts, while the rest are unrestricted.

In 2010, GCFM awarded eleven $1,000 scholarships, and the two Massachusetts students sponsored by the GCFM received NGC scholarships.

Applicants must reside in Massachusetts, have a minimum grade point average of B (3.0 on a 4.0 scale), exhibit good character, and demonstrate financial need. Applications and financial aid forms can be obtained at http://www.gcfm.org/Education/Scholarships/GCFMA.aspx.

Deadline for submitting applications is March 1.

For more information, contact the GCFM scholarship secretary, Kathie Jones, at 413-458-2886.

Free Recital At Crane Library Saturday

Harpsichordist Paul Cienniwa returns to Quincy with Héloïse Degrugillier on recorder to perform works from the French baroque period Saturday, Feb. 26 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Cienniwa has performed at St. Thomas Church Fifth Avenue, the Kingston Chamber Music Festival and in Chicago with violinist Rachel Barton Pine. His direction of Handel's Alcina for the Boston Opera Collaborative prompted the Boston EDGE to write that "his playing was expert."

Cienniwa received the Doctor of Musical Arts degree from Yale University, where he was a student of Richard Rephann. He has also studied harpsichord with Peter Watchorn, John Whitelaw and David Schrader. In addition to leading Newport Baroque, he is director of Sine Nomine choral ensemble and Music Director at First Church in Boston, where he can be heard weekly on WERS (88.9 FM) Boston.

Degrugillier has worked extensively as both a recorder performer and teacher throughout Europe and the United States. She has performed with leading period ensembles, including the Boston Early Music Festival Opera, Newport Baroque, Harmonious Blacksmith, and the Dunya Ensemble.

Degrugillier also enjoys an active teaching career, working with the Amherst Early Music Festival, Boston Recorder Society, Recorder Guild of New York, Pinewoods Early Music Week, and others.

She has recently completed her studies in the Alexander Technique and has a Masters in Music from the Utrecht Conservatory in the Netherlands.

The recital is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1301.

'Easy A' Film Screening Tonight At Library

The movie "Easy A" will be screened tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The 92-minute film, directed by Will Gluck, stars Amanda Bynes, Emma Stone and Penn Badgley. It is rated PG-13 for mature thematic elements involving teen sexuality, language and some drug material.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Edith B. MacDonald Scholarship Applications Available

Applications are available for the Edith B. MacDonald Scholarship given by the Seaside Gardeners of Squantum.

Any high school senior living in Squantum and any relative of a member of the Seaside Gardeners planning to attend a two-year or four-year college is eligible for the $1,000 award.

To be considered, applications must be postmarked by March 20.

Quincy Credit Union: 'People Helping People'

"People Helping People" is the operational philosophy of Quincy Credit Union and Credit Unions across the country. QCU helps people achieve their financial goals by providing affordable interest rates, competitive products, and complimentary resources.

Now, more than ever, people need help with budgeting, credit management, and financial resource assistance. QCU provides outreach programs to educate on financial matters that affect everyday people. These programs are not to replace financial consultants, but rather provide practical information that can be incorporated into many different financial situations. QCU has partnered with Balance, a financial fitness program which provides resources, and consultations for those seeking professional financial assistance.

Because starting good financial habits at an early age is critical to long-term success, QCU visits local schools to provide a "Teens and Money" Education program to Middle and High School Students. Students learn the importance of saving money by setting goals, creating budgets, balancing a checkbook, and using credit wisely. QCU also participates in and sponsors the Quincy Public Schools "Credit for Life Fair" Event, which provides hands on, day-in-the-life financial decision-making scenarios for high school seniors.

In the business sector, it has been proven that providing financial education can improve workplace productivity, employee morale and company loyalty, while reducing absenteeism. The need for financial literacy programs in the workplace is long overdue. Employees spend many hours during work per week worrying about finances reducing productivity. QCU, through partnerships with local businesses, host on-site seminars on topics like, Knowing and Understanding Credit, Money Management, and Home Buying Tips.

Cong. Keating Honored At Broad Meadows Middle School

Joins An Elite Student Group

CONG. WILLIAM KEATING (at podium, right) is joined onstage by members of the Broad Meadows Middle School Student Council during a recent visit to the Quincy school.

Each school year at Broad Meadows Middle School, grade 7 students conduct research into the lives of people who came before them, people who changed the world, country or community in positive ways. The students call these people Groundbreakers. Each year, the grade 7 students select people to honor as Groundbreakers as inductees in their modest Groundbreaker Hall of Fame.

Along the way the students learn valuable lessons about research including how to locate a variety of reliable sources, especially primary sources.

Who did this year's students select as Groundbreakers? For example, students Kylie Whalen and Emma Nordby chose to research and honor the life of pioneering African American ballet star Lauren Anderson of the Houston Ballet Company. The girls conducted a phone interview with Ms. Anderson a few days ago. Student John Feeney interviewed by phone Willie O'Ree, the first Black player in the NHL. Caroline Donnelly honored then interviewed Manon Rheaume, the first female to play in the NHL via email exchanges.

However, the face to face interview is even more impactful to the student researchers.

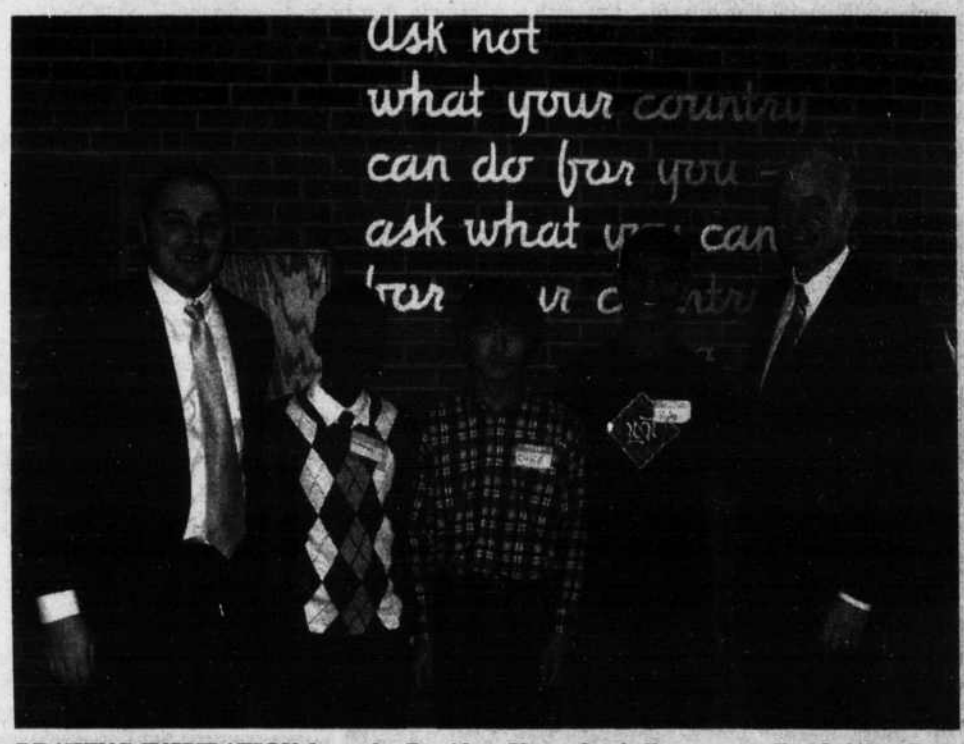
In the past two weeks, student interviews have been successfully conducted in the Language Arts classroom at Broad Meadows between grade 7 students and some of the people they wish to honor as Groundbreakers such as:

Mary Pratt of the All American Girls' Professional Baseball League (which inspired the Penny Marshall movie "A League of Their Own" starring Madonna, Tom Hanks and Geena Davis among others). Mary was honored and interviewed by Kailin Bell.

Video Gamer and Mario Brothers' World Record holder Andrew Gardikis of Quincy who was interviewed by Rebecca Nunziato and Madison Connor.

Sarah Lynch of Quincy, who was a co-leader in the Save Our Salem campaign which successfully stood against the possible eviction from Quincy of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum which is onboard the Quincy built cruiser the USS Salem. Sarah Lynch was honored and interviewed by Marissa McGue.

Kristine Lilly, Olympic Gold Medalist, World Cup Champion and co-founding player in the first pro league for women the WPS was first interviewed two years ago by Alyssa Lydon and Kayla McArdle. Kristine was honored this year by the Broad Meadows City Championship Girls Cross Country Team.



An upcoming interview is being scheduled with Lisa Wong, first Asian-American woman to be elected Mayor in Massachusetts. Lisa is Mayor of Fitchburg.

Add Cong. William Keating to that list.

A few weeks ago, three grade 7 classmates teamed together on this project to look to the future, to people now in position to become future groundbreakers. They chose newly elected Congressman William Keating of the 112th Congress. The boys are David Pham, Kyle Lakhan and Mohamed Hassan.

The boys contacted the Congressman's office by phone and by email, and to their surprise the Congressman agreed not only to be interviewed by the three boys, but Mr. Keating also agreed to take questions from the student body in general. The boys were thrilled, and on January 31st Congressman Keating spent an hour taking questions from students.

To prepare for this meeting with their Congressman, many students spent days researching the issues which the newly sworn in 112th Congress will face.

DRAWING INSPIRATION from the President Kennedy challenge are: Jim Quigley, Broad Meadows Middle School alum and Aide to Congressman Keating; students Mohamed Hassan, David Pham and Kyle Lakhan; and Cong. William Keating.

When the questions started, the three boys asked Congressman Keating about the President's State of the Union Address. Congressman Keating explained how just a week earlier, he was in The Capitol, surrounded by the members of the U.S. Senate and House, the Supreme Court, the Vice President, the Joint Chiefs, and all were listening to President Obama's State of the Union Address. Congressman Keating was seated with Arizona Congresspeople in solidarity with Tuscon shooting victim Congresswoman Gabby Giffords. "It was inspiring," said Congressman Keating.

A week later he was seated listening to the questions and concerns of some of his youngest constituents at Broad Meadows Middle. Congressman Keating explained he works in Washington as the voice of all the people in the 10th Congressional District, and he asked for more questions.

The next question was from Mohamed Hassan about moving in to his office in Washington, DC. Congressman Keating explained that he learned that the office itself is historic. Jeannette Rankin, the first woman to win a seat in Congress, moved into that very office in 1917. A young Congressman, John F. Kennedy, also worked in that office. Now, it is Congressman Keating's turn to make history and help make America a more perfect union.

As a member of the House Foreign Relations Committee, Keating was asked about his hopes for ending human trafficking. As a member of the Homeland Security Committee, Congressman Keating was asked about his ideas for keeping us all free from terrorist attacks.

Victoria Deery asked, "Will you support a Constitutional Amendment that would have Equal Rights for women IN the Constitution?" The Congressman stated his 100% support against any form of discrimination to anyone.

David Pham asked, "What obstacles did you have to overcome when you first decided to run for office?" The Congressman answered, "My age. I was 23, and many people dismissed me as too young, but I never let that get me down. If you have a dream, hold onto it. Never give up on your dreams."

Mohamed Hassan asked, "Who do you look up to in politics past or present?" Congressman Keating replied Congressman Joe Moakley and Congressman John Lewis who marched with Martin Luther King, Jr.

David Pham asked, "Do you think the Republicans and Democrats can stop fighting and work together?" The Congressman replied, "Yes, we are all elected to help America not just our particular political party."

Finally, Kyle Lakhan asked, "Do you have a dog or any other pets?" Congressman Keating smiled, apparently relieved the last question was the easiest to answer. "I have two dogs and two cats. Do you have any pets?" And with that, David, Mohamed and Kyle all laughed. An interview with a Congressman had turned into a conversation.

As for lessons learned, David and Kylie offered these thoughts.

David said later, "He's a good listener. I'm glad he's our voice in Washington."

Kylie Whalen said, "I learned so much from talking to Lauren Anderson, my groundbreaker. You can't just Google and get everything from the Internet. You have to talk to the people you are writing about."

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

City May Appeal $3M Judgment In Trust Lawsuit

Leonard and Richard Binder of Menard Murphy and Walsh, in representing the city while Attorney Sarah Kim of Bingham McCutchen LLP filed the suit on behalf of the Woodward School.

While Judge Langlois praised counsel for both sides for their "extraordinary competence," and found no evidence of corruption or any sinister goal in the handling of the trust, he minced no words in describing the city's treatment of the two funds as "inattentive, imprudent and neglectful...."

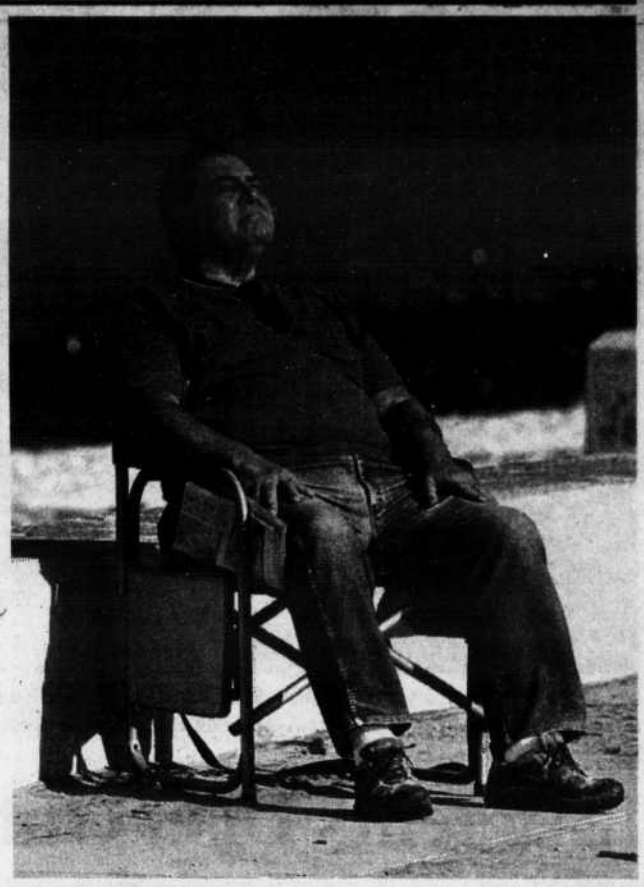
Judge Langlois wrote that "the conduct of the Trustees, albeit neglectful, negligent, frequently inept and generally characterized by inattentive management, does not necessarily rise to the level of gross corruption or gross mismanagement..."

In his comments, Judge Langlois cited the lack of even the most basic records and concluded, "Though presumably well intended, their (trustees) intentions were misguided, their loyalties misplaced and their focus misdirected."

"President Adams would, most assuredly, not be pleased with the events of the past 57 years," stated Judge Langlois.

The Adams Trust actually dates back to 1822 when John Adams placed 161 and a half acres in a trust for the 'Stone Temple' which is the United First Parish Church (Unitarian) and the site of the crypt for the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives.

Adams deeded acreage at such places as 'Cedar Swamp,' 'My Pasture,' and 'Babel Pasture' in Quincy and Braintree. It was the sale of 15 of those properties that formed the basis for the $10 million lawsuit filed by Kim on behalf of Woodward School.



The court determined that of the 15 properties sold from 1953 to 1972, eleven were sold for below market price and four for appraised value.

The funds and property of the Charles Frances Adams Fund dedicated to the Adams Academy were joined to the Temple Trust when the Adams Academy folded in 1908.

The funds were first used for Quincy public schools and in 1953 directed to the Woodward School for Girls, an academy founded by Ebenezer Woodward, John Adams' cousin.

Judge Langlois called the Adams Academy property at 8 Adams St., "the most valuable asset in the Adams Temple and School Fund with an assessed value of more than $1,886,000."

At this time, Judge Langlois said the Academy property is only bringing an annual rate of return of less than one ten thousandth or .00064% and he recommended that the new trustees consider the property to increase the value of the trust.

Dr. Fitzgerald: Historical Society Fulfills Adams' Legacy

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Executive Director, Quincy Historical Society responded to Judge Langlois's statement regarding the Adams Academy property.

His statement follows:

In light of reports of the City's intention to appeal the court's decision and not yet having had an opportunity to discuss the ruling with legal counsel ourselves, Quincy Historical Society will not comment at this time on the contents of Judge Langlois' decision and findings of fact.

I do want to say something about Quincy Historical Society's stewardship of the Adams Academy: a building which is a National Historic Landmark and which is located in a designated historic district.

We have taken great care of the Academy and have been the building's primary stewards for almost 40 years. In addition to monthly rent we have paid all insurance and utilities and all costs of routine maintenance.

More important, the Historical Society has been the monitor and spokesman and the active agent for preservation and integrity of the Academy building. While we have received, when we have requested them, city and state grants for preservation work on the building, it has consistently been the Historical Society which has identified the need for that work; done the planning and analysis of specific architectural needs, the preparatory preservation work and preparation of documents; located and applied to funding sources and frequently committed its own funds to projects. For more than four decades the Society has invested much of its intellectual, emotional, and monetary resources in preservation and enhancement of the Adams Academy. We believe it would not be the historical and civic treasure that it is today, if not for our efforts.

The Historical Society is self-supporting and we believe that our hundreds of members are proud that they have helped to take care of the Adams Academy building over all these years. The Historical Society believes, further, that it has not only played an invaluable role in preserving the Academy building but that it has served the educational needs of the Quincy community by utilizing the Academy as home for its history museum and its history library, for annual series of lectures and programs, for events by community groups, and for instruction in local history offered to well over 1,000 Quincy public school students each year. We believe, in short, that in our preservation and our use of the Adams Academy we are fulfilling John Adams' vision. We hope to continue to do so.

that salt marsh (restoration) will not work at Two Hancock are the attorneys for the developer. When asked, they have no evidence to support their claims."

Stevens added this statement, "In 2005, the developer contractually obligated himself to grow the salt marsh. Growing grass may be a challenge, but it is not impossible."

Efforts to reach a spokesperson for the developer were unsuccessful as the president, Terry Conroy, Jr., is on vacation. A person at the firm said he is the only one who can speak for the firm.

regulars who come in."

Hockey takes her culinary arts classes very seriously and it has paid off for the 17 year old. She was recently accepted into the New England Culinary Institute in Montpelier, VT. Hockey has a dream of someday becoming a chef, cooking up fresh seafood on the high seas.

Because the New England Patriots didn't play in the big game in Dallas on Sunday, Friday was somewhat of a bittersweet day at the restaurant on what was deemed "Super Bowl Buffett." The food, though, was world class with chicken cacciatore, broccoli chicken and sausage, peppers and onions on the menu. Cheesecake, assorted cookies and cakes, along with coffee, topped off the Italian cuisine.

"It's positively excellent," said Marie Taylor of Braintree, who was on hand for the $6, all-you-can-eat buffet. "There's no other word for it. The kids are great too. If you didn't know you were in a school, you wouldn't know it was kids doing the cooking."

Taylor, along with her friends Ginny Pillard, Caroline Connolly and Janet Hegarty, all of Quincy, work out at a local fitness center three days a week and on Fridays they make it a point to have lunch at the café. They believe it's the best-kept secret in the city.

"When they're not open we press our nose against the window and look in," Hegarty said with a laugh.

Keith Segalla, director of Career and Technical Education, said the restaurant would be having a special "Annual Secretaries Day" in May where bosses could bring their secretaries to lunch. Segalla said the experience the students absorb working in the kitchen and waiting on customers is invaluable moving ahead in their culinary careers. Several of the students are already working in restaurants, bakeries and hotels.

"It's a real-life, real-world experience," said Segalla. "It's not just preparing the food. It's working with people as a team as well. It's pretty impressive."

Suzanne Flynn, support director for the restaurant echoed the sentiments of Segalla. "It's good for the kids doing the buffet and they get experience cooking different foods," she said.

The restaurant itself is as traditional as the city itself. The oval-shaped room has the presidential seal emblazoned on the floor and has big windows looking out onto the near-by courtyard, "It's a nice bright room," said Flynn."

Students, teachers and staff can order ahead for meals and can have take-out by filling out an order slip. Teachers can also call down to the restaurant and make reservations, as can people from the outside. Outside the restaurant a café is busy between classes with students picking up sandwiches, muffins and other snacks. The restaurant's menu is posted on the Quincy High website and a conference room adjacent to the restaurant can be used for catered meetings.

The massive, 3,000-square-foot kitchen itself rivals that of most any top restaurant with areas for cooking, food prep and every other aspect of a five-star restaurant. Under the direction of culinary teachers Patrick Noe, Mark Kelly and Bill Gluvna, the kids learn their way around the kitchen and learn all the facets that go with it. The average class has 15 students.

Noe works in the future chef program that hands out two scholarships per year to culinary schools. The program is rigorous with the students meeting one Saturday a month at Bunker Hill Community College. The schools in the program include Quincy High, Madison Park, Boston English, Everett and Somerville.

"The motivation for the kids is huge," said Noe. "They're offering these kids a lot."

Senior Nicole Wakh Weya believes the future of the restaurant couldn't be brighter. "We've been getting great reviews from the customers," she said on a day when she was handling waitress duties. "The menu changes and it keeps them coming back. It's a really good experience. I'm learning what it would be like to work in a restaurant."

Old City Hall In Urgent Need Of Restoration

The price tag to completely refurbish the building will likely surpass $1 million – much more than the building's original price tag of $19,000.

City officials will seek Community Preservation Funds as well as state and federal grants to help fund the necessary repairs.

"There is a critical need and there's more study that needs to happen until we can find out how much some of these things are going to cost," Edwards said. "It is past time that we step up and make an effort to do it because this building is a treasure to the city and its history."

Records indicate the last significant restoration occurred in 1921.

The refurbishing project would require all employees and city departments located in the building to be relocated. There has been some discussion about moving some employees to the glass City Hall annex or perhaps renting office space near city hall.

Edwards and two other consultants examined the building's exterior "envelope" and interior systems. Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, president of the Quincy Historical Society, was called upon for his knowledge of Quincy history. The other consultant is Ivan Myjer, the principal of Building and Monument Conservation, a firm that offers consulting and project management services for the restoration and conservation of traditional masonry buildings, architectural sculpture, stone monuments and grave markers.

Mjyer was consulted a few years ago during the exterior restoration of the Adams Academy. His other projects include work on the White House, the Mission San Jose in San Antonio, Texas, the exterior of the Massachusetts State House and the exterior of the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston.

Edwards said any restoration work on the building would be done under the auspices of the Massachusetts Historical Commission. The building is on the National Register of Historical Places.

The first priority, according to Edwards, is replacing the slate roof and installing new copper gutters and downspouts. He estimated the cost to make the building "water-tight" at $175,000.

The roof is not the original slate but shows significant aging. At one time, skylights were installed and later removed.

"It's been patched and repaired over time," Edwards said. The roof's urgent need for repair was underscored a few weeks ago when an ice dam caused water to back up over the frozen eaves and right into the building.

"It was a first-class waterfall extending from the top of the ceiling of the City Council Chambers right down to the basement," Edwards said. "To contemplate doing anything to the building without addressing the roof first is fool-hardy."

The present roof is made from monson slate from Maine. It's a very historic, high quality dark slate.

"You can't get (monson) slate anymore but they think the (quarry) vein extends up into Quebec and they are mining a similar and very high quality slate up there now. That's what they would probably use (to replace the roof)," Edwards said, adding a good slate roof could last upward to 100 years.

The windows would need to be replaced, too.

"They are not the original windows," Edwards said. "In the 1920s, they subdivided the Council Chamber and created office space and if you look on that side (south) of the building, we've got two sets of double-hung windows on the south side with different panel sizes and on the north side there are windows from 1902.

"The windows have to be looked at," Edwards said. "They are in terrible condition. The wood frames around them are in deplorable condition. They used to have ivy vines growing on the building and squirrels have chewed up the bottom of the frames."

New windows could cost approximately $150,000.

On the plus side: the granite blocks are in "really remarkable condition," Edwards said. "But the mortar joints have to be addressed. Pointing is high on the list."

The building's interior systems – from electrical to plumbing fixtures – are all "shot," Edwards said.

"Every system, every thing that you can imagine that sustains a building – heating, electrical, alarm system, plumbing – are all old. They have all outlived their lifespan by good margins."

For instance, the heating system is an old gas-fired steam boiler that may be 40 years old.

"The heating plant in there is terrible. It's an old steam system. The bottom of the boiler is rotting out. There's been running water in the basement for decades," Edwards said. "You would never heat with steam again. It's not an efficient way to do it.

"Some of the people who work in the building have two or three space heaters because the heat's either on or it's off," he added.

A new system would likely be gas-fired. Over the years, coal and oil have also been used.

The system should also feature new ventilation and air conditioning.

"A new HVAC system is much more modern, much more energy-efficient, and is able to deliver outside air for proper ventilation to all rooms," Edwards said. The only section of the building with AC now is the Council Chamber.

"There are a lot of (AC) window units jury-rigged all around the building. It doesn't look good. It doesn't befit a building with that historic stature," Edwards said.

A new plumbing system with copper pipes and fixtures should be installed.

"Copper piping is the most durable, long-lasting water piping that you can have so that's absolutely what we would use. Essentially, there are no plumbing fixtures in old City Hall. There's a little break room that the ladies use but other than that there's none," Edwards noted.

New toilets should also be installed. Currently there's one toilet for women

OLD CITY HALL, built from Quincy granite in 1844, was dedicated the James R. McIntyre Government Center in memory of the city's former mayor and state senator in November, 1985. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

167-Year-Old Quincy-Granite Building Steeped In History

Old City Hall – rededicated the James R. McIntyre Government Center after the former mayor and state senator died unexpectedly in 1984 – is steeped in history.

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of the Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

It was designed by architect Solomon Willard in 1844 and constructed of Quincy granite. Willard received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction.

Willard was also sought by the United First Parish Church congregation to design their new stone temple in 1826. But he was too busy at the time designing the Bunker Hill Monument.

It took about six months – from April to October of 1844 – to erect the Quincy-granite edifice.

"I find that astonishing and almost incomprehensible frankly but that's what the records say," Quincy Architect James Edwards said. "Oddly enough, there are indications in the records that we find that there were four different contractors for the four different walls. They must have had a lot of the stone quarried ahead of time because you can't go through the quarrying, cutting, installing exercise in that brief period of time.

"But supposedly it was started in April and completed in October."

City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

It has served as the seat of city government for 167 years.

It was the Great Hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years. His brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

Over the years, the building has served not only as a town and city hall but was also the site of a post office, jail and bank.

In 1979, a three and a half-story reflective glass addition was built behind Old City Hall. The cost was $1.9 million.

A Job Well Done

LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, Feb. 11, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Officers Joe McGunigle and Declan Breslin were dispatched to the Quincy Wal-Mart on a call of a man waving a hatchet and yielding a knife at store customers. Sergeant J.P. Kelly and Officer Mark Millane also responded.

As the officers headed toward the area, Communications informed them that the suspect left the store and was walking towards Falls Boulevard. The caller provided a clothing description, stating that the suspect was also carrying a large radio.

Upon arrival, Officer McGunigle spotted the suspect on Falls Boulevard carrying the radio. The identity was confirmed by the store's loss prevention manager who was pointing at the suspect from a distance. As the officer stepped from his cruiser, he observed an 18 inch long hatchet holstered to the suspect's right hip area.

Officer McGunigle drew his firearm and ordered the suspect to place his hands on the hood of the cruiser. The officer removed the hatchet from the suspect's belt, then frisked the suspect, finding a knife in the right front pocket. The suspect was then handcuffed and placed into the cruiser.

Once the suspect was secured, the investigation began with Officer Breslin interviewing two male victims. They stated that they were in the Subway restaurant section of Wal-Mart eating, with the suspect behind them. He was blaring his boom box stereo so one of the victims asked him to turn the volume down. The suspect reacted to this request by jumping up from his chair, threw some soda on one of the victims, then pulled out a hatchet from his holster.

The suspect waved the hatchet in the air and then toward the heads of the victims as they sat in their seats. The suspect then approached them, pulled the hatchet over his head and slammed it down on the table, cutting their grinder in two. The force of the hatchet's blow gouged the table.

The suspect then angrily said, "Do you want some of that?" At that point, the Assistant Manager told the suspect that he had to leave the store. As the Loss Prevention Officer escorted the suspect out front, the suspect pulled a dark colored knife from his pants pocket, opened the blade and waved it in the direction of the Assistant Manager.

The suspect then walked away, followed at a safe distance by the Loss Prevention Officer. The victims were brought to the suspect's location and both confirmed that they were 100% positive that this was the suspect that ruined their lunch.

Based on the above information, Officer McGunigle placed the suspect, a 54 year old Quincy resident, under arrest and charged him with Assault with a Dangerous Weapon. Nice Work!

GRANDSON IN TROUBLE SCAM is making the rounds again. The suspect calls and says he is your grandson and he is in trouble, often in a foreign country, and needs money wired to a specified place in order to be bailed out.

Too often, the victim falls for this, even asking if this is their grandchild by name, thus giving the suspect a foot in the door.

The best action is to hang up as soon as you have doubt.

To be sure that it is not your grandchild, ask questions that you both would know the answer to, such as the names of other family members, what middle school the child went to or a special nostalgic event.

As always, report the incident to the police.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

A cast serves to keep a broken bone in place while it is healing. The stabilization provided by a cast also discourages muscle contractions. Plaster and fiberglass are the two most common materials used to make casts. Plaster may support the bone more specifically since it can be precisely molded to the patient. However, because of its weightiness, a plaster cast can prove cumbersome for the patient. In addition, the material must remain dry or its shape will become distorted. Fiberglass is sturdier and lighter in weight. It is also more breathable and longer-wearing than plaster. Both types of casts are applied over a few protective layers of cotton or synthetic material to protect the underlying skin.

If your foot problem concerns pronation, we invite you to consult with us about HyProCure™, a surgical procedure that needs no casting. I am one of only two podiatrists in Massachusetts who has the advanced training necessary to perform this pain-saving, minimally invasive procedure that has patients back in their regular shoes in just one week. Our state-of-the-art facilities are located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. You can reach us at 781-986-3668.

HINT: Plaster for casts is white in color, but fiberglass comes in a selection of colors, designs, and patterns.

24-Unit 'Winter Gardens' Project On Winter Street

Quincy Affordable Housing Project Receives Federal, State Funding

By JOE REARDON

Work is expected to begin in six to eight months on a family affordable housing development in Quincy Point.

The 24-unit development will include six units for extremely low-income households. The development will be located at 45 Winter St. and the construction is anticipated to produce 48 temporary jobs.

"There's always a shortage of affordable housing," said Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore President Normand Grenier. "There shouldn't be trouble filling it up."

The project, called "Winter Gardens" is being developed by Neighborhood Housing Services. Located at the site of a former single-family residence and parking area on Winter Street, the three-story, wood-framed building will feature 18 two-bedroom apartments, 3 three-bedroom apartments, and three one-bedroom apartments. Of the six low-income apartments, three will be reserved for those with physical disabilities, said Neighborhood Housing Services Executive Director Robert Corley.

The project is being funded by more than $3 million in state and federal subsidies, said the city's legislative delegation: Sen. John Keenan and Reps. Ronald Mariano, Tackey Chan and Bruce Ayers.

Winter Gardens will receive $540,000 in federal low-income tax credits and another $2,535,884 in state grants through the Department of Housing and Community Development.

"This money will help a well-respected, community based organization build much-needed affordable housing units in an established residential neighborhood," Keenan said. "NHS has a wonderful record of helping make Quincy a more affordable place to live and I look forward to another successful project."

Marino said the project "helps fill a critical need for affordable housing in the Quincy Point neighborhood of my district.

"I am pleased that Quincy will also benefit from the accompanying job creation boost. The combination of state and federal funding is well directed and I look forward to the project's completion," Mariano added.

"This project will bring a combination of good construction jobs and affordable housing into the City of Quincy and will be a good addition to the neighborhood," Chan said.

Ayers added: "Affordable housing will foster a stronger community within Quincy and the Commonwealth by generating jobs and supporting local businesses."

Grenier said it has been a "competitive process" to secure funding for the project, but he was confident the funding would be made available to the city. "It was pretty much wait your turn, you'll get funded," he said.

Permits, Grenier said, have been obtained and the project is expected to be completed by the end of 2012.

"We do everything as quickly as we can," said Grenier.

The goal of the Neighborhood Housing Services, Grenier went on to say, is to repair houses that need the work and to keep a roof over people's heads.

First-Time Homebuyer Workshop March 14, 19

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and the Bank of Canton will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, March 14 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Bank of Canton, 490 Turnpike St., Canton.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

There is a $20 fee per person.

The workshop is open to all, regardless of income.

Seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first time homebuyers. Participants will have an opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Other topics include the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections and other information.

The workshop is a prerequisite for first-time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs.

For more information or to register, call 617-770-2227 ext. 31.

Safety From Gas Leaks

DEAR HAMMER: I wanted to relate a story that your readers might find helpful. Last month, in the middle of the night, I woke up to the very strong smell of gas throughout my house. I immediately got everyone up and told them to get out of the house. All the burner controls on my kitchen stove appeared to be in the off position. I didn't try to turn off the gas at the meter because it is located in my basement and the gas odor was so strong I was worried about an explosion.

Instead, my family and I went to the neighbor's house across the street, woke them up and called the fire department from there. They got there quickly and shut off the gas supply. The culprit was a faulty joint in a gas supply pipe just past the meter, which was quickly repaired the next day by a specialist who also checked out the entire system.

Please tell your readers to have an emergency plan ready in case they have to quickly evacuate the house, and make sure your kids, even the youngest ones, know it. I'm really proud of my wife and kids, who got up with hardly any questions and got out of the house with just their pajamas and slippers on during a cold night. But I'm still going over the incident in my head to think of ways to get out safely, or even better, to prevent this situation from happening again. Hopefully my experience can help others. – James G., Amherst, Mass.

DEAR JAMES: Thanks so much for relating your experience! I'm glad everyone was OK. This is a way of sounding a wake-up call to readers who haven't thought much lately about home safety. An evacuation plan is a must, as is regularly checking carbon monoxide and smoke detectors to make sure they're working properly, keeping fire extinguishers within easy reach near areas of open flame (like the stove or fireplace) and educating your kids about safety in and around the home.

HOME TIP: Know the location of your home's gas meter, the main water-shut-off valve and the electrical circuit box so they can be quickly accessed by you or emergency personnel.

Send your home-repair and maintenance questions to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Remember, when in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Fontbonne Great Reaches 100-Goal Milestone

Taylor Shepherd In A Class All Her Own

TAYLOR SHEPHERD SLICES the Hingham defense and skates in alone. A Quincy resident, Shepherd is the only high school hockey player from the city to ever score 100 goals. Shepherd reached the magic number on Feb. 3 in a 10-1 win over Mount St. Joseph's when she struck for four tallies.

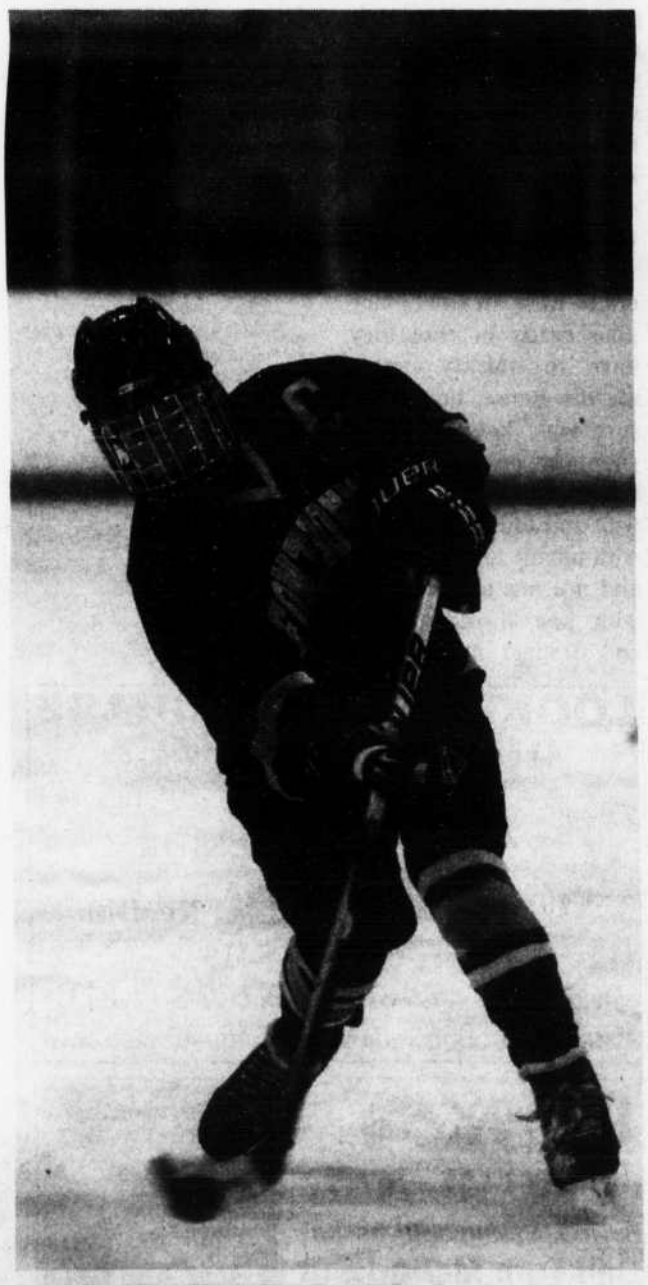
When Fontbonne Academy's Taylor Shepherd banged home her historic 100th career goal in a 10-1 rout of Mount St. Joseph's back on Feb. 3, the Quincy resident had a quick flashback to four years ago - her rookie season on the Ducks' roster.

Playing against Arlington Catholic early in her high school career, the talented freshman fired home her first tally in what has been a superb four years on the ice.

Shepherd couldn't possibly have known then that she would go on to become the best Fontbonne player ever to don a hockey sweater for the Ducks.



"I got choked up because the first thing that popped into my head was my first goal freshman year," said Shepherd. "I never thought this would happen. By no means was I sitting on the bench thinking one day I'll get my 100th goal."

After her inaugural tally, she made it a point to keep the celebration subdued.

"I was a typical freshman, really excited because I scored my first goal, but at the same time you're playing with seniors who've already scored a lot of goals," said Shepherd. "You don't want to look like a loser because it's just your first goal."

Flash ahead four years and Shepherd's now at the top of her game, far removed from the talented, yet indecisive, freshman she was as a rookie.

Shepherd went into the contest against the Mount needing four goals to reach the milestone. She wasted little time in racing past the defense and scoring on a deke play in the first period. Shepherd proceeded to drill a low shot to the far corner in the second, followed by an easy breakaway tally. She reached the milestone on the Shea Rink ice in the third with some flair sprinkled in. Shepherd was tripped up by a defender but was still able to get a stick on the puck and sweep it home while on her stomach for goal No. 100.

TAYLOR SHEPHERD UNLEASHES a slap shot during a recent Fontbonne Academy game. The Ducks' all-time leading scorer, Shepherd is looking to lead Fontbonne back to the Div. 2 state championship game for the third year in a row. Fontbonne defeated Whitman-Hanson/Pembroke 3-0 in 2009 and lost to Winchester 2-0 last year.

The game was a special one all around for Shepherd. Along with her four tallies, sophomores Mary Kelly and Erin Ferrara both notched their first varsity goals. "It was exciting to see both girls score their first goals," said Shepherd. "My goal was nice, I enjoyed it. But seeing them score their goals was really special."

Not surprisingly, Shepherd was besieged with congratulations from the Fontbonne community, but she didn't feel entirely comfortable in the spotlight. To Shepherd, the milestone belonged to all her teammates who she skated with over the past four years.

"A lot of people sent me congratulation cards," said Shepherd. "I wish I could make copies and send them to all the great players I've played with. It's not just me. If it were just me out there I'd be at 10 goals right now. They're the ones who set me up.

"For me, I don't like to think of it as an accomplishment for myself. It felt like all that hard work we put in kind of benefitted me. I feel privileged to be able to play with such great players. I'm not doing it out there by myself. It's definitely a team thing. It's not just an individual goal."

Head coach Bob Huxley said that Shepherd has handled the added pressure put on her by opposing teams and it has gone a long way in helping Fontbonne's game all around. "The last couple of weeks she's really turned it up a notch," said Huxley. "No team plays us lightly. Taylor's been double-teamed all season and has done a great job playing through it. Her teammates see that and it makes them play harder.

"Her greatest asset is that she sees the ice and can see one or two plays ahead. She's also got a rocket for a shot."

Fontbonne's top line of Shepherd, Liz Coleman and Erin McLoughlin is arguably the best in the state and the trio has given the opposition all it can handle this winter. Shepherd is the tallest and strongest of the three, but both Coleman's and McLoughlin's talents are undisputable.

"I look like a beast on the ice because I'm the tallest," Shepherd said with a laugh. "Liz has speed like you've never seen before and she has really soft hands, which is great for handling the puck. That's why she's a great center.

"Erin's a little over five feet and she can battle with the best of them. She wins the small battles, which is huge in a game. The three of us work together because we do get all angles of the ice. We've really been working in the defensive zone, which is one of our weaker points. We're working on winning those battles to create those scoring opportunities."

Shepherd spent her early years on the ice playing on boys' teams in the Quincy Youth Hockey League. That time on the ice in a checking league toughened Shepherd and vastly improved her skills. When she made the switch to playing against girls, her talent level was in the stratosphere.

"It wasn't that hard," said Shepherd. "I think it would be harder for a boy to transition to playing with the girls because he has the instinct to go out and wreck everyone he sees. I didn't think there was much of a transition, other than the speed. Not in the sense that girls are slower. Girls hockey had just started taking off in Quincy and I played on the Quincy girls travel team, and a lot of the girls had never skated before so that was a big adjustment.

"I had just come from boys hockey – fast pace, puck moving – to girls who had never really played before. Fontbonne speed was incredible and that's what I love. I love playing at high speed, high tempo. It's a physical game still, but at the same time I carry the puck a lot more. I'm pretty patient with the puck."

The Ducks are positioning themselves for a strong postseason push in Div. 2 after coming up short against Winchester, 2-0, in their title defense last March at the TD Banknorth Garden. The game was the most frustrating of the season for Fontbonne after putting up statement wins against Walpole (4-1) and Duxbury (4-3). Shepherd didn't lose a step in the postseason, chalking up four tallies to lead the Ducks' offense.

Winchester, though, put together a game plan that slowed the Ducks' offense and left them with few high-percentage scoring options. Shepherd said the loss was particularly frustrating because the team was talented from top to bottom and had garnered plenty of big-game experience.

"That one was tough," Shepherd said. "Coming back from winning it the first year we had the experience under our belt and knew what we were getting ourselves into. The first year we were all excited about being there. Going in last year, we knew what was going on. We didn't need to look at the (Garden) ice. Our focus was just to win the game. We got all the nostalgia things out of the way."

Experience aside, Fontbonne had no answer for Winchester's suffocating defense and wound up getting shut out after piling up eight goals in its previous two tourney games.

"They pretty much clumped up the middle of the ice so the only options we had to shoot was outside the faceoff circle," said Shepherd. "Any goalie can stop shots from out there. That definitely worked in their favor. We just couldn't find the back of the net.

"It was tough on everybody. It was an across the board kind of disappointing loss because we had played so well in the postseason. As a team, we were at our peak. Sometimes you go in when you're dipping down. It was a tough game and they're a great team."

The chance to play on Causeway Street for a state title again this March is the team's No. 1 goal and Shepherd said a championship far exceeds her personal accomplishments. "I never really thought of the 100 goals until it started getting close and people started talking about it," Shepherd said. "I really didn't know how close I was. Playing in the playoffs, that's what I'm looking forward to. That's my passion in hockey. That's what you play for. That's what you put the jersey on for."

Shepherd said the season has been a strange one with teams beating up on each other throughout the winter with no rhyme or reason. And despite their sterling 11-2-5 record after a 4-1 win over Arlington Catholic on Feb. 16, the Ducks can't let up, not for a second, come tourney time.

Fontbonne, however, has had its problems playing hard from the first drop of the puck and Shepherd knows if the sluggish early starts continue, it could be a short postseason for the Ducks.

"It's do or die," said Shepherd. "You have no second game if you lose. You have to go out and play as if it's your last shift of the game. It's definitely a desperation type atmosphere. That's been tough for us this year – coming out with passion and desire. It's unfortunate, but it almost takes us a shock goal to get us going.

"Recently we've been having a lot of team meetings. Those have helped. You just have to take a step back and look what we've done so far and reestablish what our goals are. We want to celebrate what we've accomplished, but at the same time look at the negative stuff."

These are the times where Shepherd's importance to the Ducks transcends her play on the ice. She takes her position as team captain very seriously. Fontbonne simply doesn't give out captain titles haphazardly. The select few are special players and leaders.

"The process to become a captain isn't like any other process," said Shepherd. "You have to apply and you have to write an essay on why you're a good leader.

"At Fontbonne we have the four Rs – respect, responsibility, reconciliation and reverence. In the essay you write you have to explain why you'll be a good leader in exemplifying the four Rs. It's definitely something Fontbonne doesn't take lightly."

Girls Finished Regular Season With An 8-3 Record; Boys' Team Improved As Well

Q/NQ Swimming-Diving Enjoys Banner Year In Pool

By SEAN BRENNAN

A determined collection of swimmers and one elite diver joined forces this winter and remade the Quincy/North Quincy girls' swimming and diving program into the surprise team in the Patriot League.

Their impressive regular season schedule yielded an 8-3 overall record, including a six-meet winning streak that closed out the calendar. At the annual Patriot League Championships, held the weekend of Feb. 4-5, Q/NQ finished third behind Duxbury and Hanover, with a total of 158 points, which included placing in the top-six in eight swimming events.

Junior diver Taryn Urbanus, a student at Quincy High School, for the second consecutive year, captured the league's diving title, setting a new school record in the 11-dive format with 436.85 points; in 2009, Urbanus won the crown with a score of 376.80.

On Feb. 13, at the Zesiger Sports and Fitness Center at MIT, the team finished in 21st place at the South Sectionals as Urbanus continued her diving dominance, capturing the one-meter dive for a second straight winter with an 11-dive standard of 494.05 points.

The 200-yard medley relay team of Hillary Wong, Jessica O'Donovan, Kat O'Connor and McKayla Johnson finished 21st with a time of 2:06.48 and also took 21st place in the 200-yard freestyle event with a season-low time of 1:52.34. Johnston took 13th place in the 200-yard individual freestyle (2:06.30) and 15th in the 100-yard freestyle with a season-best time of 57.87.

And last weekend at the Girls Division I State Swimming and Diving Championships, held at Blodgett Pool in Cambridge, Quincy/North Quincy finished 23rd overall as Urbanus earned fifth place with a score of 407.30 in the one-meter dive.

McKayla Johnston ended her freshman year by cracking the top-16 in two individual events; she clocked a personal best and new program record of 2:17.21 in the 200-yard individual medley and claimed 11th place in the 100-yard freestyle (56.81). Senior captain Kendra Johnston placed 20th in the 500-yard freestyle (5:40.68) and in 21st place in the 200-yard individual medley (2:21.13), as she ended her high school swimming career on a high note.

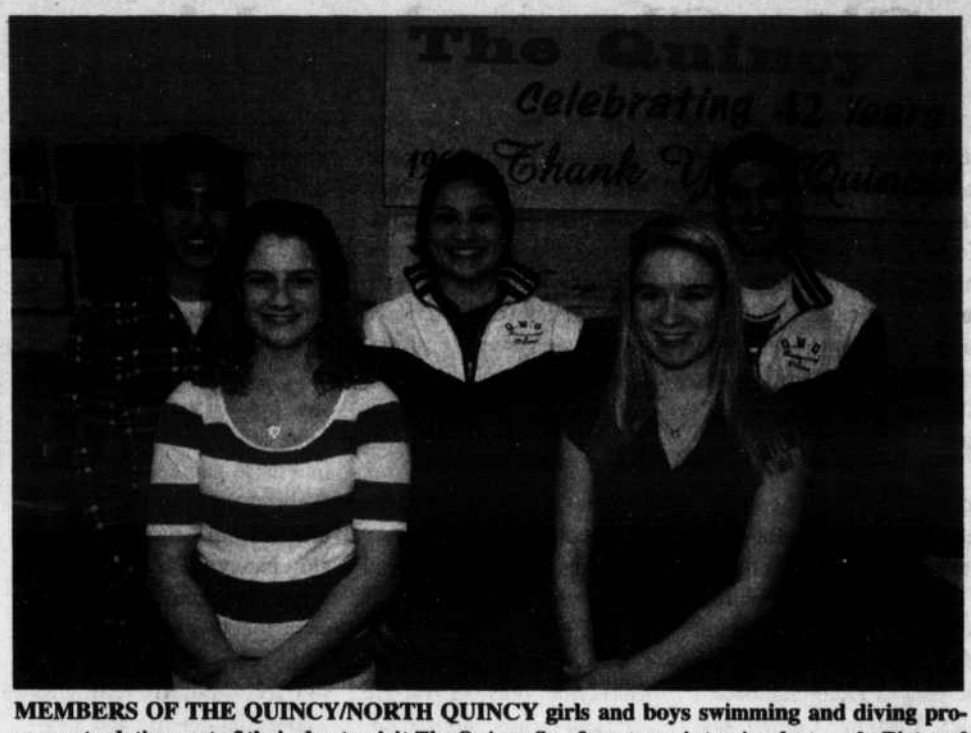
Sophomore Kat O'Connor notched a personal best time of 26.91 for 30th overall in the 50-yard freestyle, and the Q/NQ relay team of Hillary Wong, Jessica O'Donovan, O'Connor and McKayla Johnston competed in both the 200-yard medley relay and the 200-yard freestyle relay (20th overall, 1:51.87); the foursome's time of 2:04.17 in the 200-yard medley relay broke a ten-year program record and earned them 21st place.

With all of these achievements and accolades spread around the program, Quincy/North Quincy girls' swimming and diving is moving ahead in a positive direction, and that, according to team captains Kendra Johnston (QHS) and Leahnora Anderson (NQHS) is a result of a renewed sense of team unity and dedication by all involved with the program this season.

"I think this year we had a family-oriented feeling on the team," said Anderson. "This year we came together and I felt more at home and it felt like a bigger family. I am really proud that we got to bond and that positive energy went into the girls' team and we did a great job this season.

"Every meet was great," continued Anderson, "and even if we did lose, we took it as a competitor and gave the other teams a real run for their money."

Johnston saw the increased attendance at practices and meets as a main reason for her team's success as it brought about healthy competition and a consistency that was missing from the pool last season.



"Our attendance was a lot better than last year and there was a lot of people on the team and when there is more talent and more people are involved it really helps," she said.

For young McKayla Johnston, a highlight of her first year as a varsity swimmer was being able to swim alongside her older sister Kendra.

"I have been swimming competitively for six years but I was most excited to be on the team since Kendra was on it. It was a fun season," said the state qualifier in the 200 and 100-yard freestyle events.

Senior Hillary Wong also credited the active participation of her teammates for the program's successful winter and she is happy to be leaving the team on top.

"I do practice a lot and I have been swimming since middle school," Wong stated. "This year there were a lot more people and as a result we had a very good season."

MEMBERS OF THE QUINCY/NORTH QUINCY girls and boys swimming and diving programs took time out of their day to visit The Quincy Sun for a team interview last week. ALSO COMING IN TO THE SUN OFFICE were (left to right) Samantha Enbar-Salo, Hillary Wong, McKayla Johnston and Kat O'Connor. The Q/NQ girls' program ended their season last weekend with a 23rd place finish at the Girls Division I State Swimming and Diving Championships held at Blodgett Pool in Cambridge.

Two underclassmen that will be returning in 2011-2012 are O'Connor and NQHS junior Samantha Enbar-Salo. Both swimmers improved dramatically over the course of the schedule and they are both also looking forward to future success for the combined swimming and diving team.

"I thought the season was great and we became more of a team and we got closer and had some successes, at least on the girls' side, going from fifth at the Patriot League Championships last year to third place this year," said Enbar-Salo who competed in the 200 and 500-meter events. "The team was more dedicated to go to practice and having a great coach like Bob McGillicuddy helped us a lot."

O'Connor credited the addition and dedication of her teammates as a major reason for the team's marked improvement in 2010-2011.

"We did so much better than last year," she noted. "Having McKayla (Johnston) and Olivia (Goldson) helped and we all kind of knew each other before and that made it easier while swimming together. You have to be committed to swimming to be good and we were this season."

The girls' team bonded together, pushed one another to greater heights and formed the type of team unity that is required for ultimate team success. With a handful of experienced underclassmen returning next year, Quincy/North Quincy girls' swimming and diving should continue to make waves for years to come.

With the girls' team achieving at a high-end level, the Quincy/North Quincy boys' team deserves mention as well. The boys, though not as successful overall as their counterparts, still had several individuals make noise in the pool and as a team, improved, ever slightly from one win last year to two wins this year.

Their numbers are much less than the girls' program, but according to NQHS seniors Austin Rowe and James Lee, what they had to work with swam as best they could, but reinforcements would be a boost.

"We only have 11-12 guys so it makes it a little bit more difficult," said Rowe who competed in the backstroke, 200-freestyle and on the relay teams. "We could really use some more people on the team to help set rotations and build competition. But the kids on the team now are dedicated."

"We doubled our wins from one to two, so that was a good accomplishment," added Lee who swam in the 50-freestyle, 100-freestyle and on the relay teams. "We beat Randolph and Cohasset and had a good year overall. There are a lot of younger swimmers who should only make the team better in the future but it would be great if more kids came out and participated next season."

Patrick Foley To Host Marathon Fundraiser Feb. 26

Patrick J. Foley, of Quincy, will be hosting a fundraising event on Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. at JJ. Foley's Café, located at 117 East Berkeley Street, Boston, for his upcoming running of the Boston Marathon; this will be Foley's sixth time participating in this historic race.

Foley will run this year, for a third time, on behalf of the organization CarePacks, a non-profit based out of Weymouth. CarePacks is dedicated to boosting the spirits of those serving and protecting our country. Their focus and goals are best described in their mission statement: "CarePacks is a non-profit organization – staffed and managed entirely by volunteers – that is dedicated to sending care packages to US troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. Founded in 2004, CarePacks' goal is to provide these soldiers with supplies to help improve their morale, mental health and quality of life, and to remind soldiers that they are remembered by people 'back home.'"

Foley, whose younger brother, Jeremiah, enlisted in the United States Marine Corps after graduating from high school and recently returned from deployment in Afghanistan, has risen close to $40,000 in the past two years for CarePacks.

His fundraising event on Feb. 26 will feature a silent auction and raffles.

For additional information on supporting Foley's cause, contact him at patrickjfoley3232@yahoo.com.

Volleyball Tournament Held At NQHS

Atlantic MS Sweeps City Championships

The Atlantic Middle School boys and girls volleyball teams recently swept the City Championships held at North Quincy High School. In the boys' championship game, Atlantic defeated Broad Meadows MS, 2-0, while the girls' team knocked off Point Webster MS, 3-2, in the finals.

The day of competitive volleyball matches began in the morning with the Wild Card games.

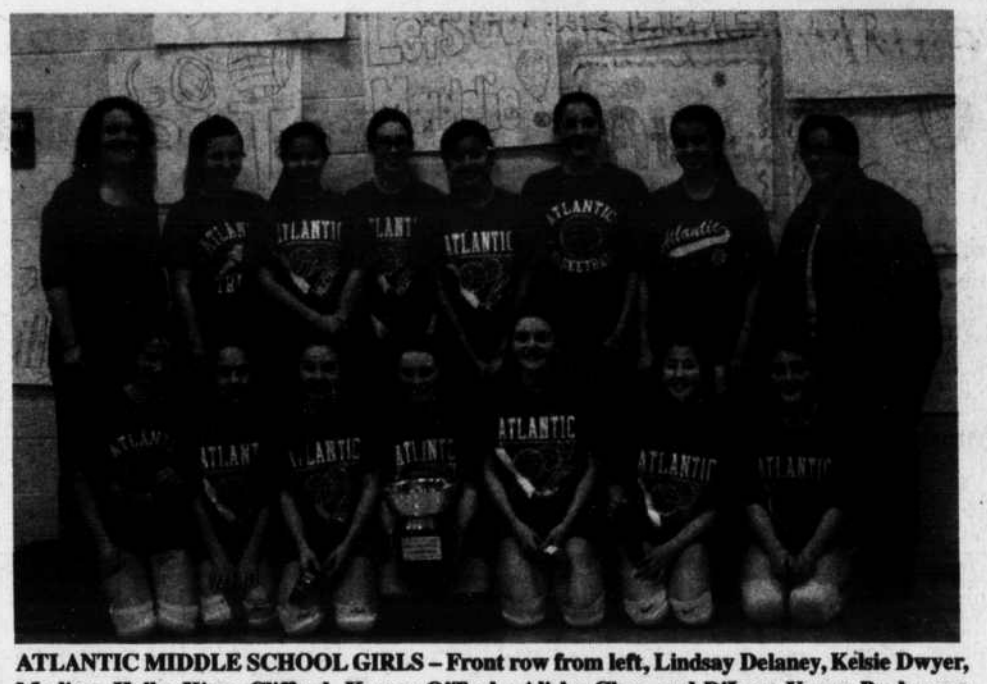
In the boys' division, Sterling MS faced Central MS and Sterling won behind the play of Doug Santos and Alex Linskey. Central saw some great defense from Jackie Chen and Andy Johnson and all-around play from Chris Mak and Michael Mullaney.

The girls' Wild Card game saw Sterling defeat Broad Meadows MS; Broad Meadows had great serving from Tien Le and Pramilla Murray with great defense from Monica Ly. Sterling had great net play from Isis Hall and serving from Angelina Avitabile.

The semifinal matches on the boys' side were Atlantic MS versus Point Webster MS and Broad Meadows MS against Sterling MS. Atlantic defeated Point Webster in a close match behind the serving of Harpreet Singh and the net play of Fred Barsamine. Point Webster had a great match from Shane McKenna, JT Bain, Ryan Turpin, Steven Kodra and Asish Peravali. Broad Meadows took down Sterling in a close three-game match thanks to James Lam dominating in the middle hitting position. Sterling had great setting from Alex Chamness and offensive play from Scot Poulack.

The girls' first semifinal match was Point Webster MS versus Central MS with Point Webster taking the victory behind the play of Valerie Chen and Emma Papile. Central had a great match from passers McKenzie Dollosa and Emma Kelly as well as serving from Hannah Donovan and the net play of Gabrielle Flaherty. In the other semifinal, Atlantic MS defeated Sterling MS. Sterling received a tremendous effort from Maggie Parker, Lexi Richards and Jillian Mulvaney; Atlantic won thanks to defense from DiLara Yavuz and the offense of Nicole Jorgensen.

At the conclusion of these semifinal matches, the finals were set.



The boys' final pitted Atlantic MS versus top-seeded Broad Meadows MS. In a tremendous power game, Atlantic came out on top with outstanding net play from Solomon Umoren who was set by Andy Pham as well as the defensive plays of Mike Sinn. Broad Meadows had great solid serving by John Graselli.

The girls' championship saw top-seeded Atlantic MS fend off Point Webster MS in a three-game match. Point Webster, in defeat, had great efforts from Angela McDonald, Noreen Plabutong and Kelly O'Connor. Atlantic came together under the great all-around play and leadership from Katryna Veasey, as well as the defense and serving of Dana Grasselli and Courtney Murray.

The Atlantic teams are coached by North Quincy High School graduate and Atlantic MS teacher Holly Rendle.

Quincy Middle School Volleyball runs from the end of November through the end of January with matches during the season between the five middle schools. The culmination of the season is the Middle School Championships held each year and over 100 student-athletes participated in the season, from all the schools.

Finished In Second Place In Patriot League's Fisher Division At 9-6; Road Playoff Game Expected

Presidents Punch Their Dance Card With A 64-48 Victory Over Middleboro HS

By SEAN BRENNAN

It was a long road filled with detours along the way but Quincy has finally qualified for the Division II South Sectional Boys Basketball tournament for a second consecutive season.

Quincy (11-10 overall, 9-6 in the Patriot League) achieved postseason status following a 64-48 home victory over Middleboro High School on Feb. 17 as a collection of players including the foursome of seniors Kevin McDonough (ten points) and Seth Pullum (eight) and juniors Zerick Fadairo (11) and Reggie Cesar (ten) led the way on offense.

The win over the Sachems also solidified Quincy's position as the second-best team in the Patriot League's Fisher Division at 9-6; Scituate HS, a potential first round opponent in the upcoming South Sectionals, claimed the division crown with an 11-4 league record.

"The Middleboro game wasn't necessarily do-or-die, but if we had lost that game we would have had to win against Barnstable High School last night in the first round of the Vin Moscardelli Tournament, a game we ended up losing by six points," said QHS coach David Parry on Tuesday. "But my kids responded and we played one of our more complete games of the season, jumping out to a 30-8 lead. Everybody contributed in that game and we had five players score in double figures.

"We are at our best as team when we share the basketball. Our game plan is always to go out and pass the ball around and find the open man. The way we played against Middleboro, very unselfish, gives me confidence that once the tournament starts we will have an opportunity to make some noise."

The Presidents' previous tournament experience will be another X factor when the playoffs tip-off early next month. Last season Quincy started their postseason run with a 52-40 preliminary round conquest of Pembroke HS before eventually losing to top-seeded Whitman-Hanson in the first round, 74-49.

Several players starring on this year's squad, including senior captains Brian Malger and Kevin McDonagh, have been here before, and with that big game experience on their side, Parry sees the potential for his team to make a run in the one-and-done format.

"Experience always plays a role in games like these," he said. "I have some kids who played two games last year and with the schedule that we play in the Patriot League, I feel like we are going to be prepared."

Quincy, more than likely, is going to be a low seed when the tournament pairings come out later this week. Depending on how many Division II schools end up reaching the qualifying standard, the Presidents look now like they will be between a 13-16 seed, which will require them to take to the road in the first round.

Potential opening round opponents may include Hopkinton, Oliver Ames, Falmouth, Wellesley, Falmouth, Duxbury or Scituate, the latter two schools being familiar Patriot League foes.

Parry acknowledged that his program's path to tournament glory would likely start on enemy territory. Fortunately for the Presidents, Quincy's record in away games this season has been better than their home record.

"I am not too sure where we will be seeded," he stated. "That will be ironed over the next couple of days, but it looks like we will be a low seed and be on the road. We have been a decent road team this year, a little better than at home, and I think that is because when you travel sometimes guys focus a little bit more.

"You get that 'together-time' on the bus ride and playing in a opponent's gym seems to bring a team closer."

The top, above mentioned, teams in Division II South are tough gets, but by playing in the Patriot League, where every night Quincy faced a different challenge from a quality team, the Presidents should be ready to battle. There haven't been too many tilts this winter when the team could take a game off.

"Every single night in the league you had to bring your 'A' game," Parry continued. "We had so many games where it came to down to the last few possessions and we played under pressure all year, which has helped us become stronger mentally and has brought the team together."

Speaking of team, on top of Malger and McDonagh, senior Ryan Schultz and junior Zerick Fadairo have recently brought increased production to the parquet. Schultz has turned himself into a defensive stalwart while Fadairo, at 6'3", has brought a toughness and size to the frontcourt.

"Ryan has been so good for us on defense, something that we will need moving forward and Zerick is just consistent," Parry added.

Two late-season additions, senior Seth Pullum and sophomore transfer Tykei Hallman from Grand Prairie, Texas; give Quincy additional firepower on the bench.

"Tykei is getting to know our system after transferring here from Texas," said Parry. "He is a good student and has great family support and has already made a mark (13 points, eight rebounds versus Hanover HS) and Seth after being ineligible the first half of the season got his grades up by working hard and has already contributed since returning."

Quincy must now sit and wait for their postseason destination. They join the North Quincy boys (Division I) and the Quincy girls (Division II) as local hoops teams that will have a shot at a South Sectional title.

Keeping Things In Balance: Tips On Fall Prevention

Falls are the most common cause of injury in the United States, particularly among older adults. Whether it's a slip on wet or icy pavement or a trip on a rug or stairway, the risk of bruises, broken bones and back and head injuries is significant.

"Most people fall due of a lack of attention, rushing around or accidental situations, but some individuals are actually at greater risk for falling," said Joseph Caccavo, physical therapist at Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation (www.kessler-rehab.com). "Older adults, as well as those with a history of low blood pressure, stroke or neurological disorders, vision deficits or balance problems, as well as those taking certain medications, all face greater challenges."

The good news is that there are ways to minimize the risk of falling by making simple changes around the home and workplace, and improving balance with proper training and exercise.

"Clutter is a way of life for many of us, but it's something we can control. Similarly, we have the tools to effectively evaluate and treat individuals who have balance disorders to help minimize their risk of falling and optimize their quality of life," explained Kessler physical therapist Michelle O'Keefe. "In fact, the Department of Health and Human Services recommends that older adults include balance exercises as part of an overall fitness program."

Kessler's new Fall Prevention Program (www.kessler-rehab.com/programs/outpatient-services/falls.com) draws on the expertise and experience of an interdisciplinary team of licensed physical, occupational and speech therapists, including certified cognitive, vision and vestibular specialists, to determine fall risk and develop individualized treatment plans.

"Our goal is to help individuals maintain balance in their lives, at home, at work and at play," added Kessler occupational therapist Norma Glennon.

To help reduce the risk of slips, trips and falls and improve balance, Kessler Institute offers the following recommendations:

- Be sure flooring is in good condition and remove throw rugs.
- Clear stairs, hallways and rooms of clutter and other obstacles.
- Secure or remove any electrical wires or cords.
- Make sure lighting is adequate both inside and outside the home – especially on stairways. Install automatic light sensors, timers or night lights.
- Place a telephone in each room or carry a cordless phone with you to avoid having to rush to answer a call.
- Avoid sitting in rockers, swivel chairs and chairs with wheels.
- Be sure railings and banisters are secure.
- Install hand rails or grip bars in showers and bathtubs and place non-slip strips or decals on the floor/tub. Also use a rubber-backed bath mat when you step out.
- Take extra precautions on uneven, wet, or icy pavements.
- Reduce attentional demands and on focus on the activity at hand.
- Include balance exercises in your fitness regimen, such as one-leg stands and sit-to-stand exercises, as well as exercises to build ankle, leg, and hip strength.

Individuals who are experiencing problems with balance, dizziness or falling should be examined by a physician.

Alzheimer's Disease Diagnosis, Treatment Topic March 8

Dr. Anil Nair, chief of Neurology and director of Alzheimer's Disease Center at Quincy Medical Center, will be at Atria Marina Place Tuesday, March 8 from 5 to 7 p.m. to discuss the rapidly advancing diagnosis and treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

Atria Marina Place is located at 4 Seaport Dr., North Quincy.

Dr. Nair and his staff at Quincy Medical Center are one of the elite research teams now conducting clinical trials investigating the causes, prevention and treatment of Alzheimer's disease. He will discuss these new advances, including H3 Blockers – a new class of anti-Alzheimer's treatments.

The program is free and open to the public. Call 617-770-3264 to RSVP.

Free Mammography Screening, Breast Cancer Awareness At QMC

Quincy Medical Center will offer two free breast cancer awareness and screening programs in March.

On Monday, March 14, Dr. Janice Rothschild, a breast cancer surgeon at QMC and Tufts Medical Center, will present a talk on breast cancer awareness at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. The presentation is open to the public. Chinese interpretation will be provided by Quincy Medical Center.

QMC, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, will also offer free routine mammography screenings Wednesday, March 30 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the mammography suite. Screening participants must be a resident of the South Shore, have no health insurance, be over the age of 40, and meet income eligibility guidelines of the Marie Curry fund.

For registration, call Jennifer Deneault, R.N. at 617-376-5492.

Last day to register is March 18.

SOCIAL SECURITY

You May Benefit From New Pre-Existing Condition Insurance Plan

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Metropolitan Public Affairs Specialist in Quincy

Do you find it hard to obtain health insurance due to pre-existing conditions? You may be eligible for the new Pre-Existing Condition Insurance Plan — a program for people who have a pre-existing medical condition and have been without health insurance coverage for at least six months.

People with pre-existing conditions face daunting challenges — and high costs — when they shop for health insurance. This new plan covers physician and hospital services and prescription drugs. Premiums vary by state. Annual out-of-pocket expenses for enrollees are capped.

Details about the program and how to apply may vary depending on what State you live in. In some states, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, with the help of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Finance Center, will run the Pre-Existing Condition Insurance Plan; other States have asked to run the program themselves.

Regardless of which State you live in, to qualify for the program you must be a U.S. citizen or legal resident, and you must have been uninsured for at least six months. In addition, you must have a pre-existing condition or have been denied insurance coverage because of a medical condition.

For more information, call the Pre-Existing Condition Insurance Plan toll-free at 1-866-717-5826 (TTY 1-866-561-1604) between the hours of 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. Eastern Time. Or visit www.pcip.gov and select "Find Your State" to learn about eligibility and how to apply.

Social Security Tackles Heart Diseases

February is American Heart Month. Cardiovascular disease is not only the leading cause of death in the United States, it also is a major cause of disability.

Social Security is dedicated to helping people with heart conditions throughout the year, but we'd like to take this opportunity to tell you about the most recent initiative to help people who file claims for monthly disability benefits due to heart disease.

Recently, Social Security held a public Compassionate Allowances hearing on cardiovascular disease. Social Security Commissioner Michael Astrue and leading experts on cardiovascular disease met to discuss possible methods to identify disabling cases and expedite those claims for both adults and children.

Social Security is committed to ensuring Americans with devastating illnesses receive benefits quickly. The Compassionate Allowances process is one of the initiatives to speed up the disability application process for people with severe conditions.

"This fiscal year, about 150,000 people will benefit from our fast-track disability processes," said Commissioner Astrue. "With this hearing, we continue to look at broader categories of conditions to determine if a subset or certain diagnosis might clearly meet our disability standards and qualify as a Compassionate Allowance."

Currently, 88 specific diseases and conditions qualify as Compassionate Allowances and, as a result, claims filed by people who are disabled due to these conditions are put on the fast track to receive benefits.

To see a complete list of Compassionate Allowance conditions and to view a web cast of the hearing on cardiovascular disease, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

To learn more about disability benefits, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/disability. To apply for disability benefits, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/applyfordisability.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

SHOULD WE SHRUG OFF ATLAS?

According to a placebo-controlled study, a special chiropractic adjustment resulted in significantly lower high blood pressure among study participants. According to the study conducted by Dr. George Bakris at the Hypertension Center at the University of Chicago Medical Center, 25 patients with early-stage high blood pressure had significantly lower blood pressure than the same number of patients who underwent a "sham" chiropractic adjustment after eight weeks of treatment. The key to the results was X-ray evidence that chiropractic adjustment realigned the Atlas vertebra, the doughnut-like bone at the very top of the spine. Called by some the "fuse box to the body," the Atlas vertebra is thought to control blood flow in arteries in the base of the skull.

If realignment is deemed necessary, we can use our hands or a special adjusting instrument to gently realign the vertebra. We strive to keep the public educated about various health issues, feeling that education is the best tool a patient can use to make informed choices. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will try to help you understand your choices about chiropractic and let you make an informed choice regarding chiropractic health and chiropractic care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Chiropractic works! Call us at 617.472.4220 and start feeling better. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The C-1 vertebra is called the Atlas vertebra because it holds up the head, much like Atlas holds up the world in Greek mythology.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

GETTING THE FULL TREATMENT

Fluoride treatments during regular professional cleanings make sense for adults because they still get cavities. This is especially true at the root surfaces and under crowns, which become exposed as adult gums recede. Particularly susceptible to cavities are root surfaces because they lose mineral faster than enamel does. With this in mind, higher concentrations of fluoride provided by tropical treatments may be needed for adequate protection. It should also be noted that many adults take certain medications and have medical conditions that cause dry mouth, which is a condition that increases the risk of cavities in adults. Fluoride makes teeth more resistant to acids produced by bacteria and helps remineralize tooth surfaces that are under attack.

Fluoride is a mineral that occurs naturally in many foods and water. Could you benefit from additional fluoride? We will make suggestions to help you maintain good oral health. With proper home care and professional supervision, there is no reason why a person can't enjoy the comforts of good dental health well into later life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we take the time to be gentle and provide the best possible dental care in a friendly and comfortable environment. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Getting too much fluoride can be as harmful as getting too little. The dentist assesses the need for fluoride on an individual basis.

OBITUARIES

Mario DiGiorgio, 90
Engineer; Veteran

A funeral service for Mario DiGiorgio, 90, of Quincy, was conducted Monday in the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Mr. DiGiorgio died Feb. 16 at Marina Bay Skilled Nursing Facility.

Born in Avellino, Italy, he was a resident of the Wollaston area of Quincy for 55 years, after living in Indiana and Ohio. He immigrated with his parents to the United States in 1924 and grew up in Bristol, Rhode Island. He attended Bristol High School, but left before graduation to work in his uncle's spaghetti factory to help his family after his father became ill.

He received his B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering from Indiana Technical Institute in 1948.

Mr. DiGiorgio served as a corporal in the United States Army Air Corp during World War II where he received the EMAE Theatre Ribbon and the American Theatre Ribbon. He was stationed in Kefalik Island, where he met his wife Kris.

He retired from Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation as a consultant – Cost Engineer in 1986. He was also past president, Boston Chapter of AACE (American Association of Cost Engineers) and was a member of ASME (American Society of Mechanical Engineers) since 1963.

Mr. DiGiorgio traveled extensively for work and during 1958-1961 he was located in Greenland where he worked for the U.S. Government on the Ballistic Missile Warning System to detect incoming ballistic missiles over the Northern Hemisphere during the Cold War.

MARIO DiGIORGIO

After his retirement from Stone & Webster, he was a consultant to the Salt River Project (SRP) in Phoenix, Arizona and while residing in Arizona, he and his wife traveled throughout the Southwest and embraced that culture. After returning to Quincy and settling back in the family home, he enjoyed painting, singing and gardening. He also enjoyed the daily senior stroll at the South Shore Plaza, where he met many friends.

Husband of the late Petrina Kristin Kris (Kristjansson); father of Nancy Ann of CA and Robert Frank and Sigrid Victoria, both of Wollaston; son of the late Francesco DiGiorgio and Nunzia Anna (Yandollai) DiGiorgio; brother of the late Anna (DiGiorgio) Sansone of Quincy and Paul DiGiorgio of RI.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

What is the greatest asset we have in our town? Industry? Business? Homes? Money? Possessions? Take your choice from this sort of list, or any similar list, and you will have made a wrong selection?

Time and again it has been shown in every town that the greatest asset is friendly people. Friends and neighbors differ in type, of course. Some are solemn, serious. Others are cheerful, entertaining. Some are frivolous. Most are hopeful, sincere. Every town, of course, has some evil people. Spiteful people. They are FEW however, compared with the helpful, kindly, neighborly, dependable type. The sympathetic, merciful, considerate people try to keep friends in constant repair.

Perhaps unaware of it, are not these friendly people of innate goodness demonstrating an acceptance of God's friendship? Can there possibly be any greater asset anywhere for any one?

To our friends and neighbors . . . we welcome any thoughts and comments you might have concerning the thoughts you read here. . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Whatever decisions you're faced with this week, rely on your strong Aries instincts, and base them on your honest feelings, not necessarily on what others might expect you to do.

TAURUS (April 30 to May 20) Your sensitive Taurean spirit is pained by what you feel is an unwarranted attack by a miffed colleague. But your sensible self should see it as proof that you must be doing something right.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) More fine-tuning might be in order before you can be absolutely certain that you're on the right track. Someone close to you might offer to help. The weekend favors family get-togethers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The week continues to be a balancing act 'twixt dreaming and doing. But by week's end, you should have a much better idea of what you actually plan to do and how you plan to do it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Changing your plans can be risky, but it can also be a necessary move. Recheck your facts before you act. Tense encounters should ease by midweek, and all should be well by the weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might still be trying to adjust to recent changes. But things should improve considerably as you get to see some positive results. An uneasy personal matter calls for more patience.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Congratulations. Your good intentions are finally recognized, and long-overdue appreciation should follow. Keep working toward improvements wherever you think they're necessary.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 2) Try to look at your options without prejudging any of them. Learn the facts, and then make your assessments. Spend the weekend enjoying films, plays and musical events.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Someone might want to take advantage of the Sagittarian's sense of fair play. But before you ride off to right what you've been told is a wrong, be sure of your facts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might be surprised to learn that not everyone agrees with your ideas. But this can prove to be a good thing. Go over them and see where improvements can be made.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) After taking advice on a number of matters in recent months, expect to be called on to return the gesture. And, by the way, you might be surprised at who makes the request.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Reassure everyone concerned that a change of mind isn't necessarily a change of heart. You might still want to pursue a specific goal, but feel a need to change the way you'll get there.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are able to make room in your heart for others, and that makes you a very special person in their lives.

William P. Lanergan, 67

Retired Quincy Police Detective, Veteran

A funeral Mass for William P. "Bill" Lanergan, 67, of South Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Visiting hours were conducted Wednesday from 4-8 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Mr. Lanergan died Feb. 18.

WILLIAM P. LANERGAN

Originally from Dorchester, he moved to Quincy and finally settled in South Weymouth for many years. A graduate of Christopher Columbus High School and Northeastern University, receiving his degree in criminal justice, he served in the United States Army for six years. His service included a year in Korea and two years in Vietnam. It was in Vietnam that he was awarded a Bronze Star for his work in Operation Cedar Falls in the Iron Triangle; he was a disabled veteran.

Mr. Lanergan was a retired police officer for the City of Quincy, serving in many capacities. The last 22 years as a detective.

He worked on many important cases over those years, but the one that was the most significant was the Adams Mansion Library heist of the rare books. Together with his partner, they were able to recover the books and the person responsible was brought to justice.

Over the years, he received many commendations; he was also specially trained in fire investigations working with the State Fire Marshall's Office and the Quincy Fire Department.
